THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

LETTERING ON DESIGNS.

One of the problems frequently put up to a retail florist is to meet the requirements of a customer in the matter of lettering a funeral design without doing too great violence to the canons of good taste. Frequently the customer demands that which is impossible of execution without ruining the artistic qualities of the design. It was so in the instance of the wreath on easel shown in the accompanying illustration. This design was made by the Quakertown Plant Co., Quakertown, Pa., and is excellent in every respect save the far too prominent lettering on the chiffon streamer, though the design would have been still better had the easel been wound with asparagus or smilax. Just why a man should insist on "My Dear Wife" in the biggest letters possible is hard to comprehend, but it is easy enough to understand what the florist must do in such a case, for if nothing less will satisfy the customer, the florist must accede. But as a general proposition lettering on the ribbon is to be deprecated, and never encouraged unless the piece is a large one, such as often is sent by lodges or through the contributions of fellow employees. Where lettering is demanded on the ribbon, it really should be ribbon and not chiffon. Big, bold letters are in as bad taste as too small ones are ineffective. Where lettering is demanded the florist should seek to keep it, not only within few words, but those few from becoming the most conspicuous feature of the design. On a wreath or a spray there is no place for lettering; on these funeral flowers no more than a card should be used.

HINTS FOR BEGINNERS.

First Principles in Designing.

While floral designing as a whole is a vast and complex subject, simplicity is one of its cardinal virtues. While there is a picture in every petal and an art gallery in every plant, a single feature of a decoration should be as much of a unit as a cherry tree in bloom. While there is infinite variety in design forms and color tones, each is framed after an evident plan; so, with some one idea in mind, a spray or design need never be a clod. If the ideas must needs come from somebody else's work first, they need not end there. As soon as one learns to see design forms in leaves, in petals, in plants, so soon can he fix on a design mentally and proceed to execute it. Then he is beginning to "live, move and have a being." But as to where to use these forms and combinations, his judgment must be matured enough to dictate.

The Art of Letting Alone.

Uncertain as to his claims to a place in his chosen world, a beginner gets fussy over a finished design or spray, not because he sees faults, but because it looks "funny." But do not pick and fuss. If a flower stem looks a little contrary, let it alone, and you have learned an important lesson. This art of "letting alone" is one of the high accomplishments of a thorough artist. To let flowers have their own way, and grip them at it, spells an artist's design. To give them a chance to place themselves so that they can direct their together, do not fuss or change unless you have a good reason for doing so, or a demand from a purchaser.

Moderation in Use of Greens.

A beginner is prone to fancy that he can not get along without a great lot of green in sprays. The more you can do with a little, the greater is the evidence of your progress. Do not use half a gross of ferns for a fair sized casket bouquet. Do not think you must have a whole mound under a spray, to avoid flatness. Train the rose stems to hold themselves, either by their own strength or by wiring. Catching and fastening them at the base of the stems is the best help to this end. As a rule, the flowers should incline upward, but not all at the same angle or distance apart. The best ground for a casket bunch is its own foliage, and more of it. Wanting this, use ferns or other foliage sparingly. Unless their stems are extremely long and heavy, large sprays of roses, carnations or own course is the best preparation for the "letting alone" practice. This is true of all spray arrangements and of the strictly decorative parts of a funeral piece, such as the spray on a solid pillow, the shower on a cascade wreath, or the trim on the base of a standing piece. After getting a spray lilies need a thin support of brushy foliage.

Odds and Ends of Materials.

Do not think, because you lack the orthodox material with which to cover a design, that it can not be made. Some of the best and most pleasing bits of formal work I ever saw were made of odds and ends and unusual things, especially in summer, when the stock of roses and carnations is either a minus quantity or scarcely presentable. A large assortment of foliage, in green, red and brown, stands at your command. Then, when we have an abundance of foliage at hand, we waste it. We throw away rose stems, carnation foliage and bulb leaves by the bushel and buy ferns to use with the flowers, both in loose bases and as a background for pieces. Why would it not be more economical, as well as more artistic, to use the natural foliage with each kind of flower?

When arranging a spray or flat piece, consider that when placed on a casket the side view is more studied by those present, as they sit through the service, than is the top or face of the piece. After laying on a neat background, make the outside edge as attractive as the top. Too often the edge is as raw as an unfinished seam. At least plan for a little finish of small flowers or green, which shall hide the forests of picks and wire which support the flowers on the top, or the face of a piece.

To Avoid Monotony.

How to vary the style and finish of a number of sprays to be sent to the same funeral, with no great assortment of flowers or varieties to draw from—this is a problem that bobs up serenely every once in a while. Well, let us see how many schemes we can evolve from one variety of pink roses, in quantities of two to five dozen. One may be a long, slender spray, with the stems left the natural length, not necessarily straight or decidedly curved, but just as they will. Tie with chiffon or ribbon to match, in two thick rosettes with long ends. Make another of shorter, bushier style, with the stems wired so as to stand out and up saucily. Let them radiate in all directions. Tie bud and made heavy at the bases. Bring the two stem ends together, cross them and tie. Bring the two tips together and wire. Use a full tie, with short loops and ends, and you have an informal crescent wreath. A loop of No. 21 wire, clinched to the stems underneath in several places, will keep the shape of the design.

For a large spray make two tapering sprays and fasten them together end for end. If the double stem end is thick and strong, stem a few shorter roses and insert over the stem space as in moss. Do not allow the attitudes of these last roses to be too angular and straight. Let them recline, and grade them from that position to an erect one in the center.

To still another add a shower on the stems or a group of adiantums. To another add a band of smaller flowers of contrasting colors, such as forget-me-nots, pansies, alyssums or others. Then a large spray may be supplemented by a small spray or two, as branches. As a further deviation, throw back several stems from the main spray over the stems, letting them remain as they happen to fall, over or under the tie. G. B.

THE MULLANPHY AUTO.

The problem of delivery for retail flower stores never was simple, and it becomes more complicated every day. Since the automobile has come into general use, the retailer's problem is even more difficult than before. Retailers who have adopted the automobile, and many hundreds have done so, speak in highest terms of the efficiency of the service when all goes well, but many say, after some experience, that they find the high priced, high class motor wagons "a necessary evil." For instance, the car shown in the accompanying illustration has been run since April 1 by Kingsley & Seeger, proprie-

Louis and that hot weather always is hard on tires. William A. Seeger says he believes the car to be more expensive than horse delivery, unless it is kept busy, but that if the volume of business is enough to keep the car on the go, it is cheaper than doing a similar amount of delivery with horses. The firm has not yet felt able to dispose of the two white wagons, drawn by dapple-gray horses, with which they have previously done their delivery.

Incidentally, Kingsley & Seeger started in the flower business four years ago, neither one having any experience in the trade. Now they have thirteen employees and use an immense amount of stock, principally in funeral work, which has been their specialty. F. T. Delaney, who sits at the wheel in the auto, was the first employee of the firm.

OVERHEARD.

"Five years ago today," said the neighbor, "I gave up my liberty. No, not jail, the same old stall—matrimony."

"Well," said the Florist, "if it happened five years ago today, this is your wooden wedding anniversary, and of course you're observing the date properly. I suppose you're going to send your wife a box of flowers?"

"Well, no, I hadn't thought of doing it," said the neighbor.

"Aren't you going to make her a little present in commemoration of that wooden anniversary?" inquired the Florist.

"No, I don't think I'm going to do that," doggedly answered the neighbor.

"Well, it was a wooden wedding, all right, even when it took place five years ago," said the Florist. "Your wife got a blockhead then, and she still has him."

And the neighbor wondered.

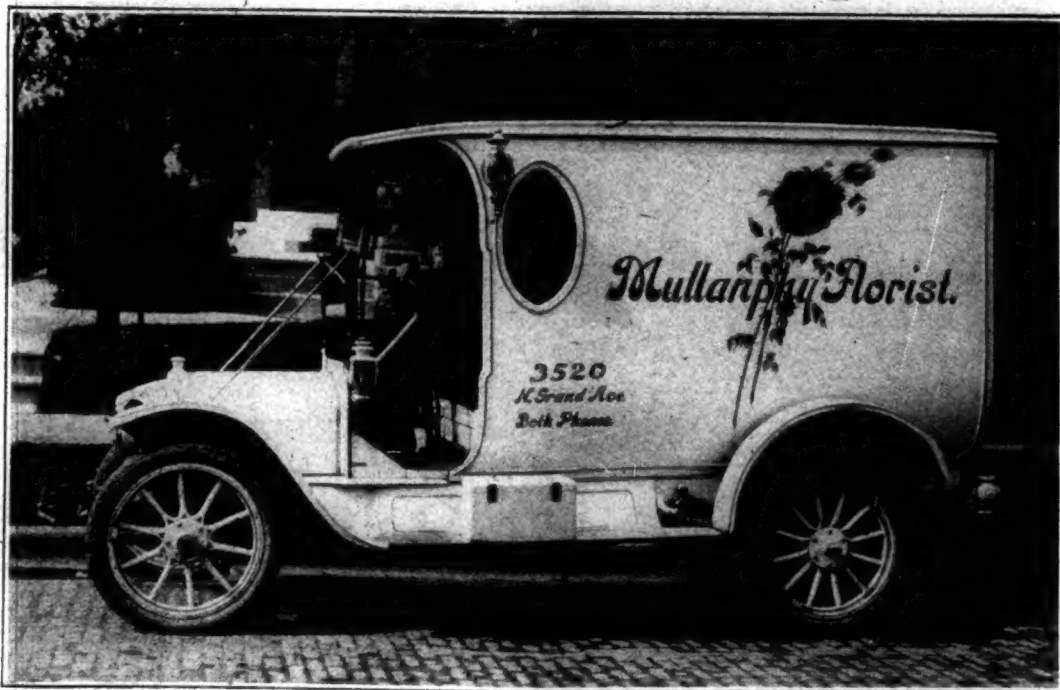

Though of course some men never can understand why a woman is so keen about remembering anniversaries, any more than some women can understand why a man is so keen about batting averages. S. S.

CINERARIAS FOR EASTER.

Can you give me some information about growing cinerarias in frames? When will it be safe to put them out, so as to have them in bloom for Easter in 4-inch and 5-inch pots? I can keep them inside until the last potting. When shall I sow the seed? J. L.

Lose no time in sowing the cineraria seed. It would have been better to have it sown by the middle of August. Cinerarias do well in frames until the middle of November if protected by mats on cold nights. They require a cold house; one not over 45 degrees at night in winter suits them best. As Easter comes much earlier in 1912 than in 1911, you should be able to hold your cinerarias back in a cool house until that time, April 7, by shading the glass well and giving plenty of ventilation. Coldframes in spring would not hold the plants back any better than a greenhouse. When in flower they can be stood on the floor of a cold cellar and held in good condition for a week or ten days. Better flower your plants in 5-inch and 6-inch pots; 4-inch pots are too small.

in the center with a chiffon butterfly bow. For a third scheme, arrange a long, slender spray. When finished pull the top around to the stem end, fasten with a slender wire and you have an informal wreath.

An Informal Crescent Wreath.

Another: Arrange two long, slender sprays, each tipped with a half blown tors of the store known as Mullanphy Florist, at St. Louis. It is a White car, the second of its type in St. Louis. There is nothing handsomer on the street, but in the first four months the tire expense was $200. In this connection it should be noted that the period included long stretches of the hottest weather ever known at St.

PROGRESS AT DETROIT.

The city of Detroit has been the scene of so many trade conventions that the enterprise of the Detroit florists is a matter of wide knowledge. Among these enterprising Detroit men, Albert Pochelon is taking a leading place. He is the proprietor of the Bemb Floral Co., having devoted many years to the upbuilding of its business. Mr. Pochelon joined the late L. Bemb before that gentleman began to find the cares of business weighing heavily upon him, but the employer soon found that the younger man was demonstrating a capacity out of proportion to the average employee's desires to assume responsibilities and he gradually turned over the details of the business to him. At the death of Mr. Bemb, Mr. Pochelon was the logical one to carry on the business. In the last few years the flower trade in Detroit has progressed as never before and Mr. Pochelon has kept at the head of the procession. Just now he is engaged upon the erection of a new store building and conservatory, which will be one of the largest and finest of its kind in the country. The store is to be in a 4-story steel frame building, the front of which is to be laid up in glazed terra-cotta and ornamental Pewabic tile panels. The main stairway will be reinforced concrete finished with Moravian tile. Handsome as will be the exterior of the building, the architect's plans contemplate equal ornateness for the flower store, combined with arrangements which will make it a model for convenience in handling a constantly increasing volume of sales.

DARWIN TULIPS.

I have a quantity of Darwin tulip bulbs, about one-half of which are of flowering size, but I do not know how to properly grow them on. Can your correspondent, C. W., tell me how to grow them on to full sized bulbs?

G. K.

Sandy loam is the best for growing on the tulips, as this gives clean, bright bulbs; in heavy soil they become dark and speckled. Plant them out about the end of September in beds 3½x4 feet. The smallest offsets can go two inches apart, but larger ones should have double this space. Cover the bulblets four or five inches deep, with six to eight inches between the rows. The ground is better well spaded over or plowed, incorporating some well decayed manure in it. Cover the beds with straw or some other material after the ground freezes, removing it early in April. The smaller bulblets will probably not reach flowering size for three years, but larger ones will bloom the first and second years.

PROPAGATING VINCAS.

Please give particulars about the propagation of vincas, when to start them, etc. I do not have good luck with them.

O. E. H.

Vinca major and its variegated form are the varieties mostly used by florists and it is probably the variegated one to which O. E. H. refers. This vinca can be rooted almost any time of the year, but the present month is an excellent one for the work.

Albert Pochelon.

The soft cuttings just starting from the base of the plants, if rubbed off with heels, will root quickly in an ordinary cutting bench suitable for the propagation of chrysanthemums and carnations. Another method, requiring rather a longer period to root the cuttings, is to cut up some of the long shoots into pieces containing a couple of eyes each. Choose wood that is moderately firm, but reject that which is old and woody. With reasonable care as to watering and shading, nearly all these will root. Pot off into 2-inch or 2¼-inch pots when rooted and later shift into 3-inch or 3½-inch. Before bedding-out time these will make nice, salable plants, but of course are not equal to the stock which has been grown one season in the field. Any unsold stock should be planted out in the field rather than carried over the summer in pots.

HYACINTHS AND PAPER WHITES.

What treatment shall I give Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissi after placing them in flats, in order to have them in flower as early as possible?

S. S.

Soak the flats well with water. Place them in a coldframe or on a cellar floor. Cover the hyacinths with three or four inches of cinders, but do not similarly cover the Paper Whites. Do not allow the soil to become dry. By starting Paper Whites now and simply keeping them in a frame or in an ordinary greenhouse below the benches, you can easily have them in flower early in November. The Roman hyacinths cannot be flowered so early. Allow them to sprout about three inches before housing them. Then give a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees and they will flower early in December. The Paper Whites will do better if not grown too warm; 50 to 55 degrees is sufficient. Both these and the Romans are improved if stood in a cool house when the flowers are expanded.

ASTERS FOR CHRISTMAS.

Can I have asters in flower at Christmas in benches in a carnation temperature? If so, how and what kinds?

L. V. A.

I have never tried asters as a Christmas crop and doubt if they would prove a paying proposition, with chrysanthemums still in season and procurable with so much longer stems than you could hope to secure on the asters. It would now be too late to sow seed for Christmas flowering. The plants should be of a sufficient size to transplant now. One of the best indoor varieties is Queen of the Market. It carries excellent stems and produces a lot of blooms per plant. A carnation temperature would answer well and asters would do all right in your regular carnation compost. White and pink would be the best selling colors.

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Primulas.

The growth of primulas is now much more rapid. The proper place for them for some time yet is in coldframes. In greenhouses they will become more drawn, no matter how carefully they are tended. Plenty of ventilation at the tops and bottoms of the sashes should be given, where sashes are used. Glass covering is better dispensed with entirely, except to throw off heavy rains. Shade from bright sunshine must be given and for this purpose the light wooden lath shades are better than any cloth coverings. They are cooler and admit air and a sufficiency of sunlight.

The plants should now be ready for their final potting if they are to be in good condition for Thanksgiving and Christmas sales. This applies more especially to the Sinensis section, which sells particularly well at these holidays. The obconicas and Kewensis are usually in better condition in February and March, but a good many can be flowered for Christmas. In giving the final potting, a good compost is one of two-thirds well decayed pasture loam, one-third cow manure, screened, and a good dash each of sharp sand, powdered charcoal and soot. Be sure to pot the Sinensis sufficiently deep, so that they are not wobbly; if properly potted they should not need any supports.

Propagation.

While we may not get frost for some time, yet it is well to take clippings of some of the more tender bedding plants now. Many growers wait and lift a few old plants of coleus and alternanthera. These plants make ideal harbors for mealy bug; rather than lift old roots, fill a few flats with alternanthera cuttings—they root quickly in sandy soil. The same holds good of coleus. Heliotrope is a popular bedding plant, of which a batch of cuttings should also now be taken. If you want to increase your stock of crotons, colored dracaenas, Pandanus Veitchii, dieffenbachias, acalyphas and other tropical bedding subjects, now is a good time to put them in the propagating bench. If well watered, shaded and kept close, few will fail to root.

Calceolarias.

During the summer months these make slow growth, but with the advent of cool nights they take on a new lease of life. Green aphid is the bane of calceolarias. If, however, they are in a frame, the proper place for them until the end of October, it is easily kept in check by fumigation. Pot them along before the pots get at all matted; or the plants will do little good. Spray over at midday on warm days and throw off the sashes at night, unless a rain storm seems imminent. The small plants like a soil with considerable leaf-mold in it, but for the later shifts use loam, cow manure and sand. Some fine broken charcoal is also good for calceolarias.

Transplanting.

Now is the time to transplant the seedling pansies, violets, forget-me-nots, daisies, aubrietias, alyssums and other spring-flowering bedding plants. Where large quantities are grown, beds on ground with a gentle slope can be utilized, but the average country florist, growing only a few hundreds or thousands, will find it better to prick them out directly into coldframes, using a light and moderately rich soil. Do not place any sashes over them until really sharp winter weather sets in.

Hydrangeas.

Hydrangea plants which have been pot-grown are the best adapted for early forcing. Presuming that they have been grown in the full sun, the wood should now be getting hard. To prepare plants for early forcing, gradually reduce the water supply, in order to further mature the wood and foliage. When time permits, it is a good plan now to pot up a good batch of the field-grown plants. They always lift well. There is no need for a large ball, or pots of unwieldy size will be needed. I prefer to shake away most of the soil, taking care, of course, to keep all possible roots intact. Pot firmly, soak well with water and stand them where some lath shading can be run over them during bright sunshine for a few days. Spray several times daily and the plants will soon become established and stand full sunlight.

Amaryllises.

Give amaryllises the full sunlight now if they have been kept well fed throughout the summer. The bulbs will have increased wonderfully in size. Do not dry off the plants at all yet; such treatment is unnatural and only weakens them. About five or six weeks hence some of the leaves will be turning yellow; then gradually reduce the water supply. Common-sense culture is frequently not given to these showy plants; not infrequently we have seen them, after flowering, laid on their sides under some bench to rest, where they will remain until a year hence, when perchance they will throw up some feeble spikes. The best growers of amaryllises rest their plants but little; in fact, the plants sometimes do not shed all their leaves. A long, severe drying off is more harmful than beneficial.

Lorraine Begonias.

The early plants of Lorraine begonias will require considerable attention now. If not staked up and tied securely, they will soon be so twisted and broken as to be useless. Whenever possible, use stakes which are thin, green and inconspicuous. It is better to keep the flowers picked off for some time. These begonias are now often seen nicely bloomed in October. From Thanksgiving to Christmas is the best selling period for them. The earliest plants, which are well established now, received liquid manure every fourth or fifth day. All of this class of begonias prefer a light to a heavily shaded house. Little shade is now needed for them. Cuttings just rooted will prove serviceable in small pots or pans. A year ago there was quite a scarcity of the small sizes, but a surplus of the big specimens. Never use a heavy soil for these big begonias. A compost of one-half flaky leaf-mold and one-half loam, with some well rotted manure and sand added, and rather loose potting, seems to suit them.

Stevias.

Stevias should now be carefully lifted where they have been planted outdoors. They are brittle, and careless handling will break many shoots. After potting, keep them shaded and sprayed for a few days. Keep the plants outdoors just as long as possible. Stevias are injured by the least breath of frost, however, and should be stood where they can have some protection on a cold night, if space indoors is not ready for them. Night winds are liable to cause havoc among them and the plants should be stood where they will not be wind-swept.

ANOTHER DOUBLE CALLA.

Callas with double spathes are by no means rare, but the accompanying illustration shows one of peculiarly regular form, the two segments being almost identical in size and shape. This is a spotted-leaved calla grown in a 6-inch pot by Edwin W. Hambright, Philadelphia, who says the plant aroused much comment. Florists with whom these freaks appear frequently turn them to excellent account through calling them to the attention of the editors of the local papers, who usually are glad to print notices that bring in many visitors.

A NEW LONG ISLAND PLANT.

At Northport, N. Y., on Long Island, Arthur Cockcroft has just started in the business with an iron-frame greenhouse 55x400 feet. The accompanying illustration shows a view looking from the center toward one end of the house. It will be noted that all the benches are on pipe frames, built with the Lord & Burnham special bench fittings. The house is heated by hot water, using a No. 14 Kroeschell boiler, the identical boiler exhibited by Kroeschell at the Baltimore convention of the S. A. F., in connection with the Kroeschell system of threaded tube piping. There are 15,000 lineal feet of 2-inch pipe, with flows and returns, for this house.

Planting was completed August 12. The house contains 27,000 plants and they are starting off wonderfully well in this light house. The varieties are Mrs. C. W. Ward, Pink Delight, Enchantress, White Enchantress, Sangamo, Splendor, Winona, Dorothy Gordon, Victory, Beacon and White Perfection. The cut will be sold on consignment in the New York market.

Mr. Cockcroft intends to make a specialty of the rooted cutting business and of young stock for the trade. With this purpose in view a propagating house 20x142 has been constructed in the same first-class manner as the work on the main house. In the picture J. George Jurgens is seen. He is the foreman in charge for Mr. Cockcroft.

VALUE OF HORSE MANURE.

Will you please inform me, approximately, what manurial and chemical properties would be likely to be contained in a cord of horse manure, with the average amount of straw bedding in it, if it has been thoroughly rotted down for six months outdoors and turned frequently, so as not to be allowed to burn? W. C. W.

This is not an easy question to answer. The value of the manure depends on the food of the animal, on its age, to some extent, and on whether it has been kept under cover or exposed to the weather. The New York Cornell station gives the fertilizing constituents and value per ton of the manure of a horse, liberally fed and given sufficient bedding, as follows: Water, 48.69 per cent; nitrogen, .490 per cent; phosphoric acid, .260 per cent; potash, .480 per cent; value per ton, $2.21. Compared with cow manure, I find this difference: Water, 75.25; nitrogen, .426 per cent; phosphoric acid, .290 per cent; potash, .440 per cent; value per ton, $2.02.

The figures in these tables represented the amount and actual fertilizing values of carefully preserved manure, both solid and liquid, of well fed and cared for animals. The manure was in each case protected from leaching and in some cases a little gypsum was used as a preservative. The tables showed that, as regards value per ton of normal manure obtained, hens excluded, sheep and hogs stood first, horses second and cows third.

The Massachusetts Experimental Station, at Amherst, made numerous analyses of manure produced on different farms in the state and the actual averages were: Nitrogen, 0.47 per cent; phosphoric acid, 0.33 per cent; potash, 0.49 per cent; water, 69.6 per cent.

It must be remembered that about one-half or more of the value of the excreta of horses and cows is contained in their urine, and where this can be saved and mixed with the solid manure a better balanced fertilizer is the result. The liquid of horses contains 89 per cent water, 1.20 per cent nitrogen, a trace only of phosphoric acid and 1.5 per cent potash and soda. With all water removed, the composition of dry matter of solid and liquid horse manure is as follows: Nitrogen, solid, 2.08 per cent; liquid, 10.9 per cent; phosphoric acid, solid, 1.45 per cent; liquid, a trace; potash and soda, solid, 1.25 per cent; liquid, 13.6 per cent.

Manure loses its value from fermentation and leaching from the weather. Such as is stored under cover will not lose in value one-third as much as that exposed to the weather. Experiments at several stations show a loss of thirty to fifty per cent in six months on manure stored outdoors, and to lessen this loss it is better to get it on the land at shorter intervals where covering can not be done. On this subject a whole volume could be written. Please remember that in actual practice probably not over fifty per cent of the values given is realized. C. W.

Joliet, Ill.—Albert G. Rott will again have charge of the florists' department at the Will county fair. Numerous exhibits are expected.

Alton, Ill.—Joseph Krug & Sons are busy hauling several cars of coal from the railroad yards to their greenhouses. They always have their sheds full when time for firing arrives.

THE DAHLIA FARM.

J. Murray Bassett and James Weller, trading as Bassett & Weller, have twelve acres of dahlias at Hammonton, N. J. Their grounds are divided into three farms, one at the residence of each partner and a larger one midway between. Their acreage shows an increase over that of last season, when J. Murray Bassett carried on the business alone. This increase is based on sound business, for not only is the demand for dahlias growing, but the firm has contracts outstanding that make additional space under cultivation a necessity. These contracts are for a specified number of roots of certain varieties, to be delivered in the fall or spring, as the case may be. To encourage this demand, the members of the firm are taking extraordinary precautions to avoid mixture. They were much impressed by discovering not less than seven varieties in a small order for one variety of dahlia sent out by a first-class house. To avoid the possibility of such an error, a careful system of detection and destruction of rogues has been put into operation and systematically pursued. The result is most encouraging. Mr. Bassett spoke with pride of the stock being true to name, as he pointed to the well grown fields that have been safely carried through three successive droughts into a condition of sturdy growth combined with unusual productiveness.

A discussion of varieties brought out in comparison with Lyndhurst, showing points of improvement entitling them to thorough trial. The striking feature of the pink class in commercial dahlias is the improvement of Delice, now considered as even better than the great Kriemhilde.

Two striking varieties are coming to the front among the whites: Perle de Lyon is a beautiful decorative variety, possessing so many of the desired qualities that it is more highly prized than the older Perle d'Or; Corona, sometimes styled the carnation dahlia, sometimes the gardenia dahlia, is a wonderfully productive variety, with pure white flowers, highly prized for every-day design work.

Yellow Duke looked well in the fields; it is seemingly more popular than the older Mrs. C. W. Bruton. The single varieties in all colors—Century type, of course—are extensively cultivated. The plants were exceedingly vigorous and full of bloom. This question of bloom brought out an interesting point. Storm King is so persistent a bloomer that in order to get fine roots the flower stems were all taken off—Storm King being a variety that will bloom itself to death, as the growers express it; that is, it will bloom to the detriment of the roots.

The cooling room contained some fine stock. In addition to the varieties mentioned, were Arabella, Sylvia, Lyndhurst and some others, too well known to need description.

Bassett & Weller have the prettiest

HARDY PERENNIALS.Attractive in Early September.

In early September the herbaceous borders are once more quite attractive. The comparative dearth of good flowers during part of July and early August is now well made up, and while the showing may not prove so interesting as in June, there are many good things now in bloom. The perennial phloxes still make a gorgeous showing. Late rains have wonderfully helped, and where care was taken to cut the heads off the early flowering varieties, these are now giving a nice second crop. Phloxes are, perhaps, the most generally useful of all herbaceous plants. There are now so many fine varieties purchasable at low rates that there is no excuse for clinging to the old sour colored sorts, still too much in evidence.

Delphiniums and Aconitums.

Delphiniums are sending up a nice second crop of spikes and will flower for some time yet. The aconitums are still good. These are superb perennials, not half enough appreciated. I have never seen them so well grown as at Bar Harbor, Me., where they are a feature in almost every garden, six to eight feet in height. A. Napellus, dark blue, is still one of the best. There is also a white form, alba, and tricolor, blue and white, which is striking. A. autumnale is a fine dark purple variety, and the new A. Wilsoni, from China, light violet in color, is distinct. This by no means exhausts the list of aconitums. I counted fifteen or sixteen distinct forms a year ago at Bar Harbor, in the Mount Desert Nurseries.

Other Purples and Blues.

Liatris pycnostachya, Kansas gay feather, four to five feet high, carrying bold spikes of purplish flowers, is grand for massing. It flowers a long time and is still effective. The button snakeroot, L. spicata, and L. scariosa, deep purple, are two other members of the family still in bloom. All are of easy culture and well adapted for cutting. Statice latifolia, the great sea lavender, with its great heads of small blue flowers, still blooms. This is lasting and fine for cutting. I have seen it used to good effect in funeral designs. S. Tatarica, with purplish red flowers, now flowering, is less attractive than S. latifolia, but makes variety. Stokesia cyanea is a fine native plant. Its fine sky-blue flowers, four inches across, are still being produced. This is sometimes called the cornflower, also Stokes' aster. A white form of this is also now offered.

Boltonias and Goldenrods.

Boltonias are among the most valuable of September blooming plants for cutting. B. latisquama, pink tinged with lavender, is the best sort. There is a dwarf form of this, growing only twenty-four inches high, while the type attains a height of five to six feet in good soil. B. asteroides, white, is also a splendid perennial.

Few gardens cultivate the solidagos, as they are so commonly found in a wild state. These are much appreciated in Europe and make superb clumps in the borders here. Few hardy flowers can be arranged more beautifully in vases. Such varieties as altissima, Dahlia Perle de Lyon.

Mr. Bassett's fondness for Jack Rose, justified by some superb flowers that improve wonderfully in size and coloring under certain favoring weather conditions. Two other scarlet dahlias are worthy of mention in the crimson-red class; one is a cactus variety from the west, the other a decorative seedling of their own; both are interesting greenhouse in Hammonton. It has just been completed and was built by themselves, of King construction. It is 28x60, semi-iron, with concrete walls, and of best practical design, including 16x24 glass in sides and roof. It is designed for the general market, but may be used to further their dahlia industry in the spring. Phil.

Canadensis and rigida are well worthy of a place in any herbaceous border.

Silphiums.

The silphiums are too robust for the average perennial border, but for dotting between shrubs, or where they can have ample room, they are bold and striking subjects. As they grow six to nine feet high and spread rapidly, they must not be cramped for space. S. perfoliatum, cup plant, and S. laciniatum, compass plant, each carrying big, handsome yellow flowers and splendid foliage, are both good.

Thalictrum dipterocarpum is the latest of the meadow rues to flower. Its heads are lilac mauve in color. Centaurea montana, sometimes called the perennial cornflower, is still in bloom, as are its white and pink forms. This perennial gives a succession of flowers for a couple of months. Chelone Lyoni is an excellent herbaceous plant, with purplish red flowers and glossy foliage, attaining a height of three feet, worthy a place in any collection.

Tritomas.

The tritomas or kniphofias have been flowering for weeks and will persist until sharp frost finishes them. These need frame protection or a well drained piece of ground, well protected with leaves, to winter them successfully in New England. T. Express is the earliest sort to flower. Other fine varieties are: R. Wilson Kerr, rich orange scarlet; Pfitzeri, orange scarlet, and uvaria grandiflora, crimson shaded yellow. Tritomas are easily raised from seed. They are fine for cutting and are much used in retailers' windows in August and September.

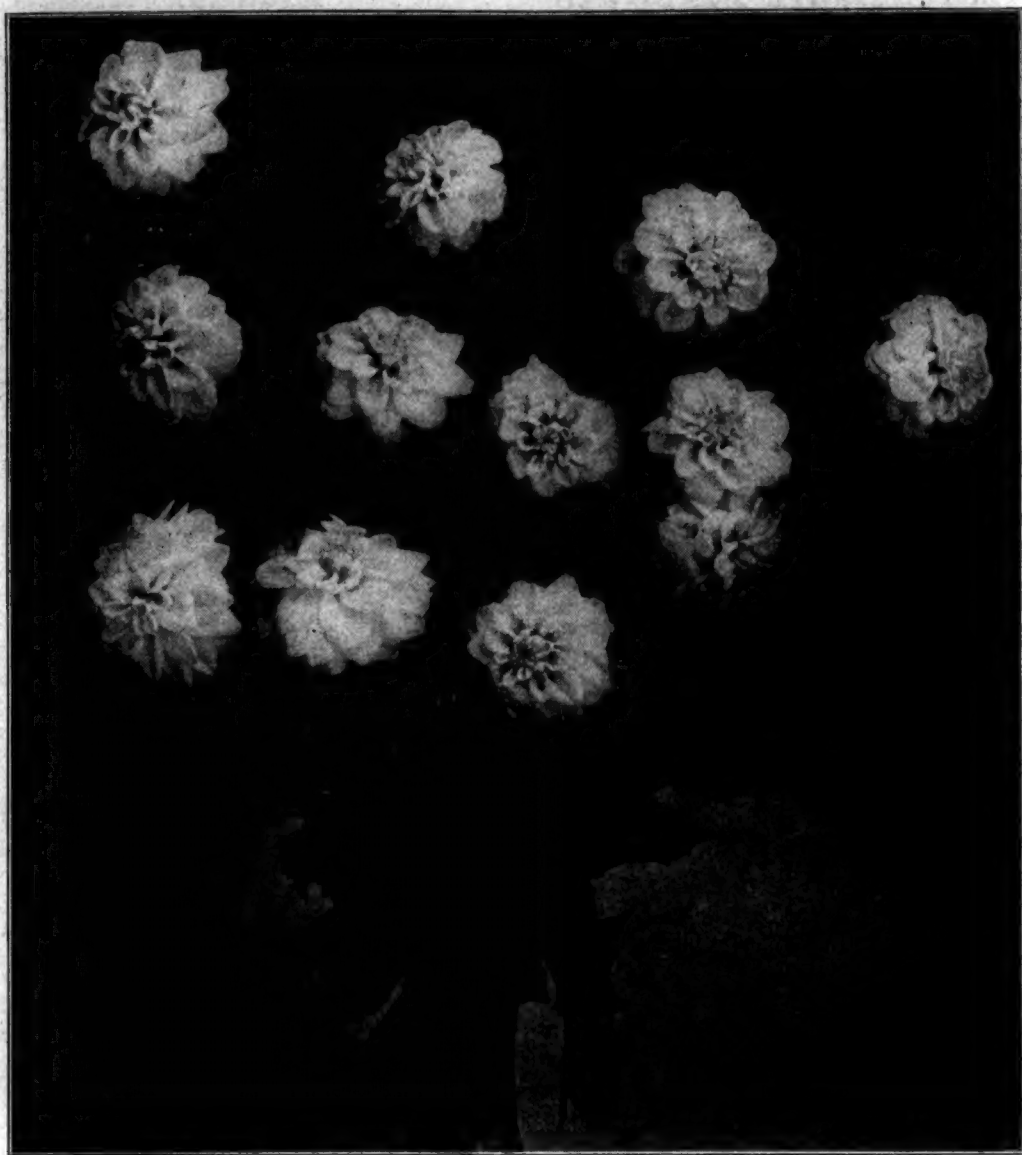

A Host of Yellow Flowers.

A host of yellow flowers are now coming in season. This color is often almost overwhelming in September and October if the several helianthus are not kept in bounds. H. multiflorus plenus and the variety Soleil d'Or are excellent florists' varieties. Of the single sorts H. rigidus Miss Mellish is fine; H. mollis has pale yellow flowers and silvery leaves, and Wolley Dod is deep yellow. This trio is an excellent one. H. orgyalis, with willow-like leaves, follows in a few days. Trained to single stalks, it branches to the ground and is fine. H. Maximiliani, the latest of the family, will not flower for nearly a month.

Helenium autumnale superbum and the variety rubrum are robust perennials, which make striking color masses in fall. Both are fine for cutting and they are of the easiest possible culture, just as easy as Rudbeckia laciniata Golden Glow, which has grown so common that people have tired of it. Nevertheless, it is a stately and showy plant. R. triloba, five to six feet high, with deep golden flowers, is useful in September. This is a single variety; the centers are black. R. Newmani, with single yellow flowers and a cone center, has just passed.

A Trio of Whites.

Eupatorium ageratoides, white snake-root, is a grand perennial for cutting. E. serotinum, white, somewhat taller in habit, is also good. Funkia subcordata grandiflora, with its big, pure white flowers and large, handsome leaves, is now at its best. It likes a little shade, but thrives well even in full sunshine.

Dahlia Corona.

* Hibiscus Moscheutos and its fine variety, Crimson Eye, are still in flower. These are specially good on the edge of ponds, as are the lythrums, of which roseum superbum is superior to Salicaria.

Anemones.

In the Japanese anemones we have plants not half enough known and valued by florists. These need a sheltered border or should be well covered in winter. Their flowers are now appearing and will be produced until November. There is no finer perennial for cutting. A. Japonica alba, single white, is still hard to beat. In good soil it will grow four or five feet high. A. Queen Charlotte, semi-double light pink, is fine. Whirlwind, double white, and Lady Ardilaun, white, with overlapping petals, go to make up a splendid quartet. These anemones should not be fall planted. Once acquired, they can be propagated ad libitum from root cuttings.

Bulbous Plants.

Among bulbous plants montbretias are effective in the borders. If divided in the fall and covered with leaves they flower earlier and better than when lifted. There are now some fine varieties of these, such as Germania, Lady Hamilton, George Darwin, Martagon and others, with flowers far surpassing in size those of the old sorts, like crocsmæflora, Pottsi, Gerbe d'Or and Etoile de Feu. Galtonia (hyacinthus) candicans is a grand bulbous plant for the borders, and flowers a long time. It is cheap and is so effective that it should be more largely grown. It is perfectly hardy in New England. Some lilies still remain. L. Henryi is passing, but L. speciosum and its varieties will prolong the season for some time yet. This, by the way, is the time to plant that grand variety, L. candidum. Be sure to buy the true broad-petaled, north-of-France grown bulbs. Plant four inches deep and get them in the ground as soon as received, as they will probably be making both roots and foliage when received.

W. N. Craig.

LIME FOR GARDEN SOIL.

Would it be advisable to use a little air-slaked lime to sweeten garden soil when making a seed bed for pansies, centaureas and other annuals which are likely to damp off? Would the lime help to keep angleworms and grubs from boring through the bed?

W. C. W.

Lime applied once in three years is a necessity in many cases to keep the soil sweet. Try blue litmus paper on your soil. If it turns pink after exposure to the wet soil, lime is needed. Of course, in acid soils such seedlings as you have named would be much more liable to damp off. The lime would also help to keep worms and grubs out of the soil. Soft coal soot is also excellent for helping to clean out the latter. Do not use manure at any time when liming, as it would mean the loss of much of the fertilizing properties of the manure.

C. W.

Findlay, O.—E. J. Foster & Son, of South Cory street, have completed an addition to their greenhouses. Their trade is steadily increasing.

TO EXTERMINATE MEALY BUG.

I am sending you some samples of leaves which are infested with mealy bug. I have never had any experience with this before. It came onto the place in a shipment of ferns and now it has spread all over the stock. Can you tell me what I should do to kill it off the place?
R. T. F.

If this is not the common mealy bug, it is so closely allied as to be undistinguishable. There are two varieties of mealy bug which infest greenhouses. The common one, which you seem to have, has a fringe of spines around the body, the two at the hinder end being the longest. In the less common form these hinder spines are often as long as the body itself. Female mealy bugs lay several hundred eggs each. These are carried under the hinder part of the body. After laying the eggs the parent dies and the eggs hatch in two weeks. They become adult in six to eight weeks, sucking the juices from any plants they are on.

There are several ways of extermination. Force of water, properly directed, should clean them off the bulk of foliage plants. Of course, some will crawl back after being washed off, but persistent use of the hose will make their position on many plants untenable. One or two of the more powerful nicotine extracts, evaporated over wood alcohol lamps, will kill the bugs. A second or third application should be given, for the newly hatched young from eggs. Fumigation with hydrocyanic acid gas is undoubtedly the best way, however, to exterminate such pests as mealy bug, scale, white fly, etc. Directions for the use of this have been often given in The Review. Choose a cool evening always for this form of fumigation and give a short exposure if you can ventilate your houses from outdoors. Few plants are injured by this gas in cold weather and it would certainly be the cheapest and simplest way to clean out the bugs. Of course, great care is necessary in using this gas, as it is deadly to human beings as well as to all other living things.
C. W.

TO KILL COUCH GRASS.

I herewith send a sample of some grass which is growing on my place. Kindly tell me the name of it and how I can get rid of it. I salted it and plowed it and raked it off the best I could, but it roots at every joint. It is certainly a sticker.
F. F.

Couch grass, or witch grass, as the weed forwarded is commonly called, is one of the most stubborn of grass weeds to control. If on land which you can plow, turn it over as soon as you can and keep it well harrowed. If this could be done during the hottest summer weather, two or three weeks of this treatment would almost clean out the grass. If it continues to trouble you next year, I would advise sowing some strong growing crop rather thickly, so as to smother it. Fodder corn would answer well for this purpose. In land planted with trees, shrubs or herbaceous subjects all that can be done is to use the hoe or cultivator persistently. The only way to clean out this and many other weeds is to till the ground well. This weed can be killed out if you keep at it persistently.

MILWAUKEE.The Market.

Last week witnessed the opening of the season of 1911-12. A few social events, with a good run of funeral work in the latter part of the week, gave most of the florists a fair amount of business, and it was a pleasure to fill orders, as there was enough stock of good quality to meet all demands. The supply of asters and gladioli is not quite as heavy as for some time past; especially is there a falling off in the poorer grades, no doubt due to the small returns received for them. The supply of roses is about equal to the demand. New carnations are still a scarce article; but are not much missed. The green goods market is well supplied.

Various Notes.

The entertainment committee of the Milwaukee Florists' Club has all preparations completed for the annual picnic, to be held at Stappelfeld's grove on Sunday, September 10. It is now up to the members and their friends to make the occasion a success. To get to the grove, take the Fox Point car, which leaves every hour, at East Water and Wisconsin streets, get off at the Green Tree road and walk east a short distance. Prizes have been donated by members, as in former years; so come one and all, to help make merry.

The Burlington Floral Co., of Burlington, Wis., is shipping quite a few carnations, of good quality, to this market and they find ready sale.

The G. H. Hunkel Co. reports the arrival of a carload of bulbs. Mr. Hunkel, of this firm, will take a business run through the Badger State this week.

William Zimmermann, who was spending his vacation at Minocqua, Wis., was obliged to return earlier than he anticipated, owing to a rush of funeral work in the latter part of last week.

The Baumgarten Floral Co. was quite busy with funeral work when the writer called. The firm is looking forward to a most prosperous season.

Mrs. Ennis, of the Wisconsin Floral Co., left September 2 for Portland, Ore., to be gone about three weeks. Her daughter will have charge of the store in the meantime.

William Currie, of Currie Bros. Co., returned from the east August 30. He has been enjoying life on the shores of the Atlantic ever since the S. A. F. convention.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. is making extensive improvements at the Brown Deer plant, by laying cement walks in the rose houses and building a coal shed, 35x80. Their stock out there is looking well.

Will Kennedy, of the C. C. Pollworth Co., is busy taking in the sights at Niagara Falls and other large eastern cities. The firm reports business as highly satisfactory last week.

Though most of the flower stores were closed for the afternoon on Labor day, the whole force of J. M. Fox & Son were obliged to keep busy getting out orders instead of celebrating.

J. E. Matthewson, of Sheboygan, Wis., took a run down to this city in his new car August 31.

Mr. and Mrs. Ollie Zech, of Chicago, spent part of their honeymoon trip in our midst last week. We hereby extend to them our best wishes for a bright and happy future. Other visitors were E. O. Lovell, of Grand Forks, N. D., and George Vatter, of Marinette, Wis.

The Wisconsin state fair takes place September 12 to 16, and no doubt many of the craft will drop in to say "Hello!"

OBITUARY.E. R. Meserve.

E. R. Meserve, a prominent member of the trade at Los Angeles, Cal., died of pneumonia, August 31, in his home at Signal Hill, a suburb of Los Angeles, after an illness of five days. He was a native of California and had been engaged in horticultural pursuits all his life. He had a range of greenhouses at Signal Hill and was also a member of the Los Angeles Flower Market. He is survived by his wife and two children. His father is horticultural commissioner of Los Angeles county.

Linnaeus Cox.

The death last week is reported of Linnaeus Cox, one of the well known figures in the Philadelphia district. His greenhouses were at 5815 Cottage street, Wissinoming.

William Peck.

William Peck, owner of the City Greenhouses, at Baraboo, Wis., was killed at Grand Marsh, Wis., Saturday, August 26, when he fell from a flat car on a gravel train. He was born at Ableman, Wis., April 1, forty-four years ago, but had made his home at Baraboo most of his life. He was a conductor on the Chicago & Northwestern railway, for which road he had worked for nineteen years. He was always a great lover of flowers and about seven years ago he built the first of his greenhouses in the city of Baraboo. Since that time he has added to his greenhouses as increased trade required and materials already on hand would have increased his glass area to 10,000 feet. He managed this establishment while still retaining his position on the railroad. It had been his intention to quit the railroad and give his whole attention to the greenhouse business in another year, when his tragic death ended his plans. The funeral was held from his home in Baraboo, Monday, August 28. Members of the B. of R. T., O. R. C. and K. of P. lodges attended in a body, as well as a host of other friends. There were a great many designs and other floral tributes. He is survived by his wife, to whom he had been married but five months, and three children by a former marriage.

Patrick Maier.

Many of the acquaintances of Patrick Maier, of Pittsburgh and Woodville, Pa., will be surprised to learn of his death. He had not been in the best of health for some time, but his illness was not considered serious. His physician stated that careful nursing would be necessary, and a system of treatment was begun at the Passavant hospital, where he died on Saturday, September 2. He was still a young man. He was a successful grower and well liked by the craft. His greenhouses and farm are located at Woodville, Pa.

BOSTON.

The Market.

At last we are enjoying clear weather; it seemed good after eight days of steady rain without sunshine. The damp weather, while excellent for vegetation and filling depleted reservoirs, put a quietus on any activity in the plant trade, and the last week, with the exception of September 2, was exceedingly dull. The present week things look a little more encouraging. With the influx of people from shore and vacation resorts, business has received a slight fillip; it might be greater, but it will grow, it is hoped.

Roses are improving; the wet spell was hard on them and only the use of constant steam heat kept mildew from raising havoc with them. American Beauty, Prince de Bulgarie, Killarneys and Wards are now excellent. Carnations, so far, are few and cut but little figure. Asters continue the leading flower. They are moving better than a week ago, but are still in heavy oversupply, as are gladioli. The latter are fine and it is a pity they are selling so indifferently. Sweet peas are scarce and are of inferior quality. So far the mums seen are all Golden Glow and these are hardly needed with so many fine asters. Lilioms, also, are still in overstock. Valley does not sell well. Euphorbia corollata are seen in quantity; so, also, are candytuft, cosmos, centaureas and other colored flowers. Cattleyas continue scarce. Gardenias are hardly seen at all. A little Bouvardia Humboldtii continues to come in. Trade is quiet in both asparagus and adiantum at present.

Market Auction Sales.

The two wholesale markets held their annual auction sales of stalls September 2. Many growers hope the date will be made the Saturday after rather than before Labor day another year. At the Boston Coöperative Flower Market there was, as usual, a large attendance of growers and over 100 stalls were disposed of. W. H. Elliott secured first choice for $115. Among other high bidders were John Barr, John McFarland, Arthur Griffin, N. F. Comley, Edward Wood, James Wheeler and others. The premiums are in addition to an annual rent of $25 per stall. The total sales netted more than a year ago and the directors were well pleased with them. W. W. Tailby made an efficient auctioneer.

At the Boston Flower Exchange, Inc., prices ruled remarkably high and bidding was keen. The sales netted several thousand dollars more than in 1910. Among some of the leading buyers and premiums paid were: Pierce Bros., four stalls at $165; William Sim, four at $160, two at $175; S. J. Goddard, $175; Montrose Greenhouses, three at $175; W. W. Edgar Co., $155; Geo. E. Buxton, $155; Wm. A. Hastings, five at $147.50 to $155; Sutermeister Estate, two at $130; A. Christensen, two at $135; Mann Bros., three at $150, one at $115; J. A. Budlong & Sons Co., two at $150, one at $75; A. S. Parker, $145; H. L. Cameron, $145; W. C. Stickel, $150; Paine Bros., two at $127.50; W. C. Ward, $100; J. J. Fee, $135; S. J. Reuter &

Boston Visitors at B. Hammond Tracy's, Wenham, Mass., August 26.

Son, four at $165; W. C. Ward, $100; Willard Hill Greenhouses, $95; W. O. Howard, $90; W. R. Nicholson, two at $155; Neal Boyle, $150; S. Wheeler, $87.50.

Various Notes.

Thomas Roland reports his big stock of hard-wooded and other plants as being in excellent shape. His large new house at Revere, 50x100, is being built; it will probably be devoted to sweet peas the first season. Mr. Roland will add a block of plant houses to his Revere plant in 1912.

A movement has been started for a new horticultural club for Boston, with a small and limited membership. A meeting looking toward organization is called for September 6. The committee calling the gathering consists of J. K. M. L. Farquhar, P. Welch and W. J. Stewart. There should be ample room in Boston for a club of this character, which will not conflict in any way with existing organizations.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pegler arrived here September 2 on the Lusitania, having been delayed a week owing to the strikes in England. They report a delightful visit in the real American weather prevailing in England.

A. Leuthy returned August 31 from his annual European trip, per S. S. Vaderland. He reports unprecedented drought in Germany and Belgium and that everything had a burnt-up appearance. Azaleas, he states, had made only short growths and no buds were showing when he was in Ghent. Prices are higher all around for them, but Mr. Leuthy secured about 20,000.

Charles Rapp, foreman on the Thorne estate, Millbrook, N. Y., has bought the Tuttle Greenhouses, Melrose Highlands, Mass., and will make carnations a specialty, but will also grow a special line of plants and flowers for retail trade.

The annual show of the products of children's gardens was held at Horticultural hall, September 2. The long drought early in the summer considerably affected the exhibits, but they were, nevertheless, quite interesting. The collection of vegetables, flowers and native plants from B. Hammond Tracy, Jr., were noteworthy.

Arthur Griffin, of Woburn, has his carnations in splendid shape. He grows 20,000 of the leading sorts. Mr. Griffin, who is an expert plantsman, also has a grand stock of the fine Gloriosa Rothschildiana. He has a new salmon salvia which is decidedly distinct.

From August 25 to August 31 over five inches of rain fell—a steady week of rain, such as has only once previously been recorded in Boston in fifty years. We are still several inches short of the normal precipitation, which in Boston is 42.5 inches per annum. August temperatures were almost normal.

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Gray returned home this week from their European trip, coming by way of Montreal.

Club meetings will be resumed September 19. A large influx of new members is assured. Vacation experiences, instead of a regular lecture, will be the feature of the meeting.

Charles J. Harvey, of Needham Heights, is shipping quantities of fine asters; also an excellent lot of gypsophila.

P. J. Van Baarda, A. K. Rogers and Peter M. Miller attended the annual picnic of the North Shore Horticultural Society at Manchester, August 30. A large crowd was present, though the weather was not favorable.

Owen G. Owen and Herbert Clark, of Southampton, L. I., were among the visitors last week.

The big vegetable show which opens September 21, on the occasion of the convention of the American Market Growers' Association, promises to be a superb one. Entries are arriving from as far away as Canada. There are 130 classes, with premiums as high as $100 for some of the classes.

S. J. Goddard speaks highly of Chrysanthemum Smith's Advance, which promises to be ready with him about October 1. W. N. Craig.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week opens with perfect weather—cool, sunny, inspiring. The cut flower market has been marking time, and while the advance can hardly be said to have begun, stability and hope are in evidence and the future is bright with promise. The eight days of rain did incalculable good. Schools are opening this week, always a happy harbinger of activity. The return from Europe has set in early.

American Beauties did not sell well last week. The top price was only for the few. Accumulations of the long stems fell to half their normal value the last of the week. The retail demand continues light and there are no especial causes for demand in weddings or funerals. The theaters, however, begin to assert their needs.

There are few good roses of any kind, but in another week the supply will be normal and the new stock nears perfection. The short-stemmed stock goes at unheard-of figures, and some of it does not go at all.

Carnations are rapidly improving, both in size and stem, and the price follows quality. Lilies have not gone above $3 per hundred, but the advance to $4 this week is hoped for. Valley stays at $2 per hundred for the best. For orchids, 75 cents remains the top figure. Gaskelliana is about over, and labiata is arriving. Of the lower grades and varieties there are some ten in the market, but demand for these is transitory. Another week will see the departure of the gladioli as a market menace, but of asters there is apparently no end. Every wholesaler was loaded with them Saturday, and their benches looked like the usual fall flower show at the American Institute as to quality. The cooler weather and improving business outlook should make the prospect better before the present week has ended.

Various Notes.

Next Monday evening, September 11, the opening meeting of the New York Florists' Club takes place at the headquarters in the Grand Opera House building, at west Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue. This will be convention night and those who were unable to attend the Baltimore reunion will hear all about it. Unique exhibits are promised and the house committee is preparing a proper welcome for all who come. Visiting florists in the city are cordially invited and also to the bowling at Thumm's alleys in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Maynard, of Detroit, and Mr. and Mrs. Meinhardt, of St. Louis, were enjoying the beauties of the great white way all of last week and are still in the city. Miss Meinhardt, ex-president of the Ladies S. A. F., was a recent arrival from Europe, and her relatives remained over from the convention to welcome her.

Arthur T. Boddington reports John B. Orth, of McKeesport, Pa., and E. W. Clark, of New London, Conn., as recent visitors. William Hunt, of Boddington's, has just completed a successful western trip and leaves next week for his annual vacation in the Adirondacks.

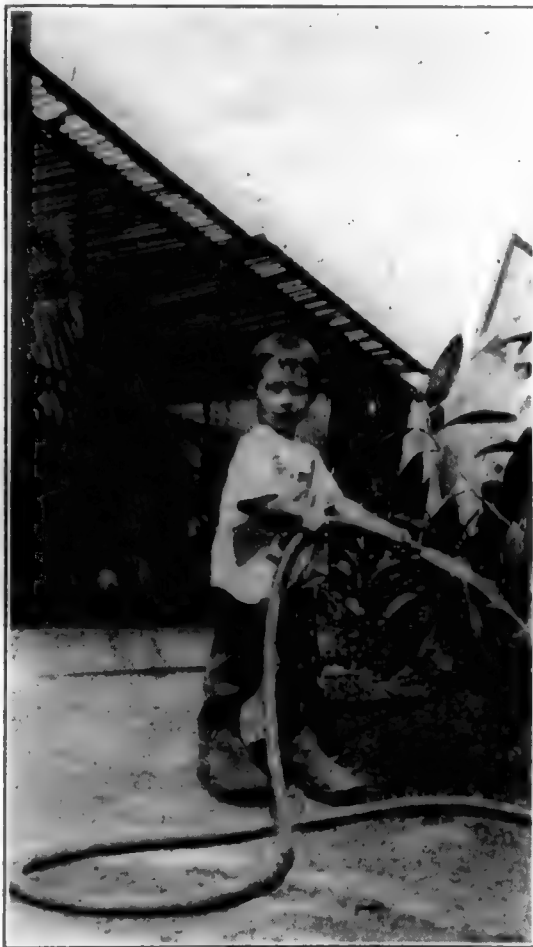

G. Van Der Horst, representing C. Keur & Sons, of Hillegom, Holland, is in the city and has established an office at 25 West Broadway.

Geo. Stumpp has an interesting story to tell of his European trip with his family.

John A. Foley was rejoicing, September 1, on the third visit of the stork to his home, this time with a daughter.

The lecture on plant life, Saturday, September 2, at the Bronx park museum, was well attended. The hour is 4 p. m. The lectures are of national reputation, and the course will extend every Saturday afternoon until November.

The fall fairs have begun in earnest. Last week the Dongan Hills show on Staten Island brought out enormous crowds. Several of New York's prominent seedsmen were represented. Saturday, Sunday and Labor day the Sangerbund Association, which includes many of the Long Island florists, began its annual exhibition at Ridgewood Park, L. I. Marquardt's column of fruits and vegetables was, as usual, the main attraction. The carpet bedding and plant exhibits of the Flatbush and Long Island florists, as in other years, maintained their reputations. The prizes were many and valuable. The entertainment continues over Sunday, September 10.

The MacNiff Horticultural Co. will open the auction season September 19, with a big offering of bulbs, plants, palms etc., with R. MacNiff on the rostrum.

Gus Massas, at Seventy-seventh street and Broadway, has opened a branch store at Manhattan street and Broadway.

H. E. Froment has returned from his rest at Saratoga and Lake George, and Jonathan Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, is home from a long holiday at Nahant, Mass.

Joseph J. Levy is back from his summer with his family in the Catskills.

G. A. R. Kervan is back from the Grand Army reunion at Rochester.

The sympathy of the trade is extended Arthur Hunt in the loss of his daughter.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., Chicago, is in town on his way to visit violet growers up the Hudson. This is the third successive year Mr. Michelsen has been in the New York market on Labor day.

Reed & Keller's new floral album is now ready.

E. S. Miller, of Wading River, was in the city last week, rejoicing in the first prize honors won by his new gladiolus, Fascinator, a charming addition to the pink varieties.

John Lewis Childs displayed at the last horticultural exhibition at Bronx park nearly 100 varieties of gladioli. The display of water lilies by Wm. Tricker, of Arlington, N. J., was one of the most interesting features of the exhibition.

Wm. Elliott & Sons will open the auction season September 12, Tuesday, with a sale of bulbs, foliage plants, etc.

A show of dahlias, asters, etc., is to be given by the Horticultural Society of New York at Bronx park September 16 and 17.

At the opening of the Hippodrome, September 2, the president of the New York Florists' Club sent his wife, the prima donna of the play, a magnificent horseshoe of Beauties. Many of his friends in the New York club were on hand to speed the sweet singer in her engagement for the winter season.

J. Austin Shaw.

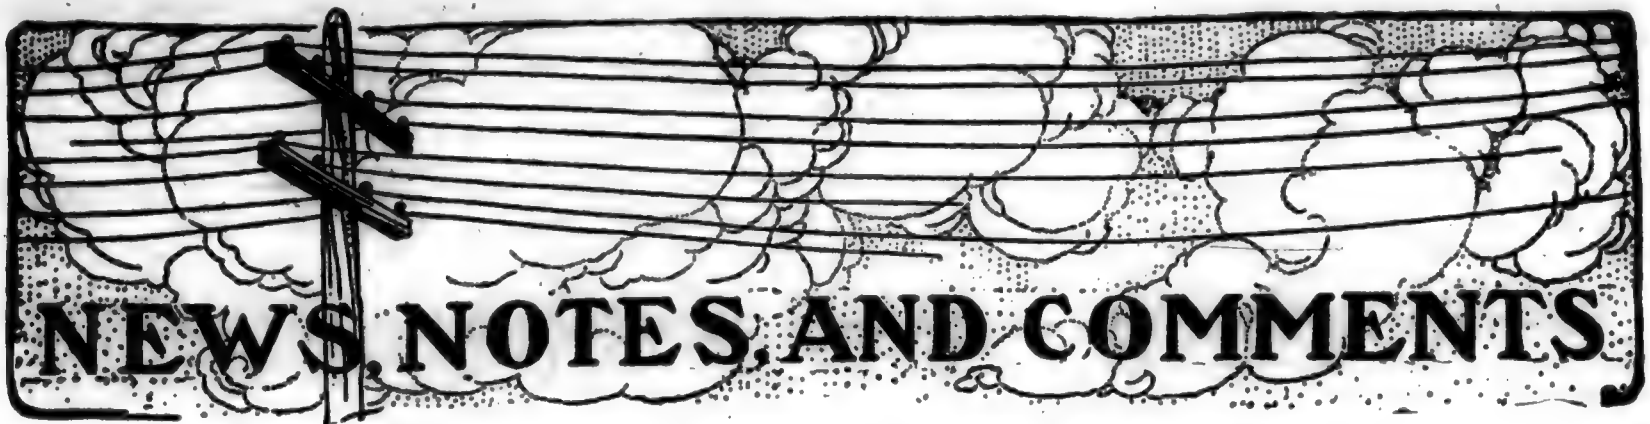

THE YOUNGEST FLORIST.

The Review here presents a picture of the youngest working florist, Frank Fillmore the Fourth, of St. Louis, Mo., in his working attire. He was three years old August 13. He was caught in the act by The Review's correspondent on a recent visit to the greenhouses of the boy's grandfather. Is some precise reader prepared to prove that Frank is not really the youngest in the trade? Well, he is at least among the youngest, and it is certain that no one can beat his record by more than a year or two.

There are four generations of Franks in the Fillmore family. The great-grandfather is 86 years old, a well known florist, still hale and hearty. The grandfather's age is 62 and, like his father, he is likely to live till he reaches the hundreds. Then comes the boy's father, aged 30; he, like his father and grandfather, is hard to beat in a day's work about the greenhouses. And the youngest Frank—does not the portrait give pretty good promise that he will follow in the footsteps of the three Franks before him?

Forest City, Ia.—The Hill City Greenhouses, owned by Willard Secor, have opened a retail store on Payne avenue, in St. Paul. The greenhouses have been practically rebuilt and much enlarged during the last two years.

Tuxedo, N. Y.—George Stewart reports excellent business, with bright prospects for a good fall. Stock is in fine shape. F. Bentley is doing extensive landscape work, with plenty of work ahead for some time. Tom Murray, superintendent on the Pierre Lorillard estate, is planning extensive improvements during the fall.

NEWS, NOTES, AND COMMENTS

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Fishkill, N. Y.—Miss Young, manager of Spy Hill Conservatories, is taking a well-earned vacation.

Troy, Ala.—Mrs. Fannie Starke is building a large addition to her greenhouses. The new space will be used for carnations.

Baraboo, Wis.—William Peck, proprietor of the City Greenhouses, was run over by cars at Neenah, August 26, and killed. He was recently married.

Wallingford, Conn.—Rowden & Mitchell have completed a new range of handsome appearance, with a front wall of cobblestones set in concrete. Their stock is in first-class shape.

Rockville, Conn.—Theo. Staudt has been rebuilding with material supplied by the Lord & Burnham Co. and will have a complete range by the end of summer. The next move will be the erection of a store upon land recently purchased.

Tampa, Fla.—Mrs. Knull, wife of F. A. Knull, of the Knull Floral Co., has been visiting her parents at the greenhouse establishment of William Terrell & Son, Warsaw, Ind. Though the weather here, Mr. Knull states, was warm for a time, the heat was not so severe as in the north, as the highest temperatures here were from 86 to 92 degrees.

Champaign, Ill.—The greenhouses of Thos. Franks & Son recently had the unique distinction of being the scene of a wedding. The Miller-Newton wedding ceremony was performed in the palm house, with an embankment of ferns and palms as a background, two large plants placed on pedestals to form an altar, and baskets filled with choice ferns hanging overhead.

Fall River, Mass.—Chatterton Warburton has a sport from Maryland which he believes will make good. He has seen others, but says this is entirely distinct. He has Mrs. Aaron Ward in fine condition and finds a ready sale at $1 per dozen for first crop buds. A new house, 12x90, is being built for ferns. A wreath of orchids is not an unusual order at his up-to-date store.

Hornell, N. Y.—The Wettlin Floral Co. has a large stock of asparagus, cyclamens and primroses, the demand for which increases each season. The new double marguerite, Mrs. F. Sander, is an acquisition; it will prove valuable for design work. Mr. Wettlin recently paid a visit to an old employee, Paul M. Olm, of Bath, Me., and was surprised at the vigorous growth there of stock generally, which he attributed to the damp air and suitable soil. Mr. Olm is doing well.

Malden, Mass.—Burgess & Cooney are building another greenhouse, about 30x100.

Whitman, Mass.—A. A. Reed has been making extensive improvements at his greenhouses on West street.

Ishpeming, Mich.—Trebilcock Bros. have started work on new houses that will largely increase their facilities.

Alvin, Tex.—H. M. Farrell, a grower of cut flowers, tuberoses and citrus stock, reports that he is selling his business and will retire from the trade.

Danvers, Mass.—A. A. Rackliff, at 12 Lawrence street, who began the culture of dahlias a few years ago for the sake of the outdoor recreation and for the benefit of his health, has developed a business of some commercial importance, though he still conducts the enterprise chiefly for pleasure rather than profit.

Utica, N. Y.—C. F. Baker & Son, 59 to 61 Cornelia street, are erecting two iron-frame greenhouses, furnished by the King Construction Co. The business has outgrown the capacity of the present houses, which were built thirty years ago. The new houses are each 28x100, with an extension fronting on Cornelia street, which will be used as a show office.

Portland, Conn.—Otto Keser says he never felt so dry in his life, or rather never experienced so dry a time as this summer, when so much stock had to be left to the mercy of the weather. His carnations looked good, but his asters, as elsewhere outside, were almost a failure. His cannas are good; King Humbert is the most popular variety in the Connecticut valley.

Whitemarsh, Md.—The fifth annual dahlia and flower show at the greenhouses of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co. will be held September 26 to 29, in connection with the harvest home festival of Ebenezer Methodist Episcopal church. The meeting of the Maryland State Horticultural Society will occur on the first day. Among the features of the show will be forty acres of dahlias and ten acres of cannas.

Ashtabula, O.—Gallup Bros., the vegetable growers, have purchased thirteen acres of ground just east of the Sanborn road, in Saybrook township, and are planning to begin the erection of a range of greenhouses there next summer. Edward P. Gallup, who will be the manager at the new houses, will also erect a residence on the Sanborn road and will occupy it, with his family. It is understood that the price paid for the new property was about $300 per acre.

Waltham, Mass.—The Kidder greenhouses, on Worcester lane, have been purchased by Harvey Whittemore, son of Henry Whittemore, former superintendent of schools in this city. It is understood that Mr. Whittemore will improve the property and engage extensively in the florists' business.

Great Barrington, Mass.—William Hall Walker, the owner of the famous Brookside estate, is planning to add a great many improvements, including the building of an Italian garden that will cost, it is said, about $50,000. The plans for the garden were drawn by Ferncio Vitale, of New York city, who makes a specialty of such work.

Herington, Kan.—J. A. Gordon, proprietor of the Herington Greenhouses, has been notified to vacate when his lease expires February 1, 1912. Mr. Gordon has interested other business men here, however, and the money has been raised to build two new houses near the business district, these houses to be ready before the present lease expires.

Watseka, Ill.—M. E. Wyatt, who has been employed for several years at the Wyatt greenhouses, has purchased the entire establishment from his aunt, Mrs. S. M. Wyatt, who has managed the business since the death of her husband a year ago. The young man proposes to make such improvements in the place as will put it in first-class condition.

Terre Haute, Ind.—The Terre Haute Florists' Club held its first annual outing August 29, at Forest park. The participants numbered more than fifty and included both employers and employees. The firms represented were: John G. Heintz & Son, N. B. & C. E. Stover, Cowan Bros. & Co., Fred Wunker & Sons, Terre Haute Rose & Carnation Co., Henry Graham, Harry Richmond, Saenger Bros., and Thomas Stevenson, the new owner of the Otto Heintz place.

Sheridan, Wyo.—The Sheridan Greenhouse Co., recently organized, has purchased a half-acre tract on Beaver street, near Pioneer park, and will erect greenhouses there, beginning with one house, 25x150, besides a propagating room, an office and other buildings. Carnations and potted plants only will be handled the first year. It is the intention that additional ground shall be secured later, to be used for the growing of nursery stock. The members of this firm are H. A. Loucks and S. L. Caple. For the last two years Mr. Caple has been associated with Mr. Loucks in the Sheridan Music & Floral Co. Mr. Loucks will manage the affairs of the new company.

Port Huron, Mich. — M. Ullenbruch was one of the judges at the flower show recently held at the Grand Trunk railroad shops at Battle Creek. The Grand Trunk flower show is an annual affair, but was never before attempted on so large a scale as this year.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Officers for 1912: President, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; vice-president, August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; secretary, John Young, Bedford Hills, N. Y.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Chicago, Ill., August 20 to 23, 1912.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

ARECAS have had a notable rise in popularity coincident with the decline of the latania.

THE jobbers are stocked up with plant tubs, manufacturers having made such tempting prices last spring that many people overbought.

WHO can explain the ups and downs of trade? July generally was busier than florists ever before had known the month to be, but August was not up to last year.

THE hardy ferns in New England have suffered considerably this season because of the long spell of hot, dry weather. It has burned them on many a hillside.

DAHLIAS in New England are proving a disappointment to many, because of the long, dry, hot season, and it has been necessary to abandon some of the local shows.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

SUCH display of color as Dreer and Michell recently have been making at their trial grounds beside the Pennsylvania railroad must do great good in fixing the names of the concerns in the minds of the people who ride in the trains.

NEVER a week passes but The Review receives inquiries that are neither dated nor signed. Every legitimate inquiry is answered, but no attention is paid when the writer cannot be identified. This applies to A. H., Jax., Fla., who uses a postal card, and to "A New Subscriber," who asks about wood ashes.

THE National Council of Horticulture has discontinued supplying articles to the daily and weekly newspapers and the newspaper syndicates. Last year the American Seed Trade Association was the only one of the national organizations to contribute to the fund for the work, so this season no appropriations were asked.

"WHY is it so many florists send out business letters on 'any old kind' of paper? Don't they know that retail prices usually are charged to those whose letters do not give evidence of connection with the trade?" The speaker was one of New York's leading seedsmen. Printed letter-heads are so inexpensive no florist should go a day longer without them.

THE long, heavy, steady rain that was general through the east last week relieved the drought conditions that had prevailed for a long time and which were menacing many lines of business. While the downpour interrupted such trade as was doing at the moment, it was of great value to florists, replenishing many a failing water supply and putting fresh life into trade.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Apparently the ebb tide in the market did not come until August 31, for some of the wholesale houses reported it not only the lightest day of the month and the summer, but also the dullest day in the last two or three years. With the arrival of September there was a change for the better and both Friday and Saturday made fair records. Monday also, although it was Labor day, a holiday that does absolutely nothing for florists except to give the opportunity for a half day's rest, brought a fair number of shipping orders, so that the consensus of opinion is that there will now be steady progress toward good business. It is noteworthy, however, that for several weeks the demand, such as there was, has been most unsteady. Monday would hold out hopes of better business, but sales would dwindle through Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, with a spurt of shipping again on Friday and a fair city demand Saturday morning, with little doing Sunday. This condition may continue.

A decrease in supplies, particularly of gladioli and short roses, has as yet had no marked effect on the demand for other stock. While some of the big cuts of short roses have passed, there still are enough to go around, with other growers just beginning to cut. Of the longer roses there are so many, in proportion to the call, that even the best sell below their usual values at this date. One hardly could ask finer Killarney, White Killarney, Maryland or Richmond for the beginning of the season. Other varieties, though offered in less quantity, also are good. Fine Beauties also are plentiful.

The aster glut shows signs of passing. It has lasted longer and been worse than usual this summer, though the asters were late in coming in. Fine stock has sold cheaper than ever before. The flowers now arriving in large quantity are about the best of the season. Gladioli have ceased to be much of a factor.

The new crop of carnations is coming on in fine shape. Already the supply is quite large and the stock is unusually good, stems being of excellent length. Easter lilies are no longer a glut, though there are as many as can be sold. Auratum is done. Tuberoses have been added to the list. Cattleyas continue scarce. There is plenty of valley for the small demand. A few sweet peas are seen, but there is no special call for them; they deserve a rest for a few weeks, for the winter supply will break all records if all goes well. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are seen of widely varying quality. Some are commanding $3 per dozen in small lots, while others are scarcely salable at any price.

The green goods market is quiet; enough of everything to take care of the demand. Wild smilax can be had on a few days' notice, but is not yet carried in stock.

The Luxemberger Schobermesse.

The big event of the early autumn at Rogers Park is the annual Luxemberger Schobermesse, which this year broke all records. It is held on Labor day and the Sunday preceding, and with perfect weather, the crowds were

HERE YOU CAN GET BEAUTIES

Fine Quality—All Lengths—Any Quantity

Our present cut of Beauties is large and fine—the quantity is so good that we can fill the largest orders at a moment's notice. Really no limit to our supply. Most of the cut runs to medium and long stems. Large heads, splendid color, strong stems, perfect foliage. Those who are looking for a thoroughly satisfactory supply of Beauties should get acquainted here.

Fancy Asters

The late Asters are extra good and our supply continues large. We urge all buyers who can use good Asters in quantity to give this stock a trial. The supply will last as long as weather conditions continue favorable for plants in the open—and the quality, you will say, is above any other Asters of the year. At the same time market conditions are such that prices are moderate—really low in comparison to the quality of the stock.

KILLARNEYS

PINK OR WHITE—LARGE SUPPLY.

We are furnishing buyers all the Killarneys they need, in any length up to 18 to 24 inches. The color of the pink is something wonderful—better than it is in winter. These roses are business-builders. Once tried, you will use no others.

Fancy Valley

You will need Valley every day, now that the season is opening again. We ALWAYS can supply, but why not place a standing order, for shipment (with the other stock you need) every day, every other day, or twice a week?

Carnations

The new crop of indoor Carnations is on. Nice, clean flowers and stems lengthening every day.

Lilies

We can supply all the Easter Lilies you can use. Try us any day in the year.

HEADQUARTERS FOR ALL GREENS

Here you get the best Fancy Ferns, all the Smilax and Asparagus strings you want, Sprenger and Plumosa bunches, Mexican Ivy and Galax. No order too large for our facilities and no order too small to receive our careful attention.

great. The display of fruits and vegetables was wonderfully fine and the cut flowers and plants made a splendid showing, although the number of exhibitors was not so great as in some other years. It has become a habit with Victor Bros., who are prominent in Luxemburger councils, to annex most of the premiums for cut flowers, and this year they took all those offered for roses and carnations. They were first for fifty Beauties, for fifty Killarney, for fifty White Killarney and for fifty Jardine; also first for display of carnations, showing Bonfire, Enchantress, White Enchantress, White Perfection, Lawson, White Lawson, Washington and Winsor; also first for asters in four colors, white, pink, lavender and purple. In addition to the exhibits winning premiums, they showed two vases of fifty Killarney, one of Richmond, one of White Killarney, one of Uncle John and a vase of twenty-five Beauties, all fine, long-stemmed stock.

Vaughan's Seed Store was first on cut blooms of perennials, with twenty-five handsome vases. The same exhibitor was first for gladioli, showing possibly 200 spikes. The Ringler Rose Co. was second on gladioli, and Meyers, the Rogers Park grower, second on asters.

In plants, the George Wittbold Co. was first on a fine collection of decorative stock, Fischer Bros., of Evanston, being second. There were two excellent exhibits of Boston ferns, Charles Schleif, 5655 East Ravenswood avenue, being first and Nick Reding second. An amateur grower named Parmantier had twelve enormous celo-

Weather in August.

The temperature for the month of August was nearly normal, the mean of 71.8 degrees comparing with 71.2 degrees as the average for the forty-one years since the government has been keeping records at Chicago. The total rainfall of 3.72 inches, while exceeding the normal, fell mostly during the second decade of the month. The sun shone an average of 10.4 hours per day, being seventy-six per cent of the possible number of hours.

Various Notes.

Some of the wholesalers who put in the new automatic telephone have discovered that, while they now are paying $7 per month, no more than two or three of their customers ever use this phone; that the old Bell phone costs $10 per month and that in proportion to service rendered the charge is only a fraction of the cost of the

The Batavia Greenhouse Co. has just finished and planted another new house for greens and finished a propagating house.

August Poehlmann is at Lake Mills, Wis., with his family and the auto on a fortnight's outing. Adolph Poehlmann also is away.

Miss M. C. Gunterberg, on her return from Rhinebeck, says the violet growers are not yet sure of their crops, there having been a bad season for the plants so far, to which John Sinner adds that a decrease in the violet output at least won't hurt the sale of sweet peas, which are pretty sure to be more plentiful this season than ever before.

Frank Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co., arrived home Monday morning, having Sundayed pleasantly with customers at Houghton, Mich.

Otto W. Frese says the first month's business for the Chicago Flower Growers' Association showed a steady increase from day to day and that now many of the stockholders who have not heretofore cut anything are beginning to be heard from.

— DAHLIAS —

QUALITY IS FIRST CONSIDERATION

Our growers are producing only the best varieties for cut flower purposes. Dahlias have made a place for themselves as a cut flower, and you cannot afford to ignore them. The best proof is the increased demand each season. When you buy our Dahlias, you have the satisfaction of getting the best you can buy. To prove what we say, try a sample shipment. The quality and value will be a surprise to you, and every flower will be in perfect condition.

Hay fever completely floored Louis Wittbold for a day or two last week, but he is around again now, although still suffering considerably from the malady. Yellow mums are now in bloom at the Edgebrook greenhouses.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The phenomenal rainfall which ended with the close of August played an important part in the cut flower market, shortening indoor and temporarily damaging outdoor crops. Both are now recovering, but the effect of this flood was felt until Labor day was past. Asters are in tremendous oversupply. It is a pity that so much fine stock comes at once, for it does not bring proper returns. The poor asters fare worse. Roses shortened sharply during the storm; good pink were scarcer than white. There was no actual advance in prices, except on shorts, but the average price was decidedly better. A few more carnations are coming in; some good red were seen with moderate stems, in addition to the white and pink. Easter lilies continue prominent; really good stock is in pretty active demand. The first cattleyas have appeared; they brought an astonishing price—see list. Dahlias are coming into season. Another week will give us longer stems in all colors. Cosmos has come. The midsummer market has been equal to last year—perhaps a little more than equal. July was better, August not so good. Considered together, they are satisfactory to most of the wholesalers.

Club Meeting.

September 5 Joseph Heacock presided over a fairly attended meeting of the Florists' Club that was full of life throughout. The Baltimore convention was ably discussed by Robert Kift, John R. Andre, Wm. P. Craig, Adolph Farenwald and John Westcott. Baltimore hospitality was warmly praised. It was decided to give a banquet in honor of the club's silver anniversary October 3, after the annual meeting, tickets $3 each. Ladies are invited.

Nominations for officers for next year were made, as follows: President, J. Otto Thilow; vice-president, Thomas W. Logan; treasurer, George Craig; secretary, David Rust.

The Leo Niessen Co. exhibited four magnificent vases of dahlias for the Peacock dahlia farms. They were Dorothy Peacock, Golden Century, Twentieth Century and Eckford Century. Flower, foliage and stem were remarkable. The Leo Niessen Co. also exhibited a box of fancy dahlias, showing the careful packing.

Robert Bragg, who is at the helm of the Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. during the absence of George Auegle in the south, comments on the fine quality of the gladioli.

Duncan Macaw has some splendid chrysanthemums at Norwood.

J. Murray Bassett says that about fifteen years ago, when he induced his father to ship dahlia flowers to this market, he personally cut, packed and shipped them before breakfast each morning. Now it takes at least half a dozen people to do this work during the blooming season.

The Market.

The month of August was no exception to the rule of other years, business being quiet. Stock of nearly every description is overplentiful at the commission houses. The exception to the above is roses, which have been rather a scarce article, more especially in the better grades. Carnations are improving daily, stems getting longer and flowers of better size. Asters are good, but a glut on the market at present. Even the good blooms are not selling as well as might be wished by the growers. The gladiolus is another flower which has been more or less of a glut all season.

No florist should be without them. You should sell millions upon millions of them." ours very truly, "ALPHA FLORAL CO."

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

The Market.

The first few days of September showed a little activity among the florists, but things are not at all steady as yet, and funeral work is still the bulk of the business done by the retailers. The growers at Kirkwood, Olivette, Clayton and other local points are kept busy putting things in shape for the fall and winter season.

The receipts at the wholesale markets have been heavy, the bulk of the consignments being outside stock. Pink and white Cochetts have been coming in heavily, with some of extra fine quality. Cuts from the young plants of Killarney, Richmond and Maryland are looking well and meet with a good demand. There are also a great many Beauties coming to this market, and carnations are showing fairly well as to flower, but have short stems. Lilies and valley were in good demand and abundant supply all last week.

Gladioli are coming to an end, although quite a few are still coming in, daughter and Charles, Jr., spent the summer in Detroit with Mr. Kuehn's parents, returned home last week.

Fred Ostertag is again with his brother, of the firm of Ostertag Bros. Henry, who was recently bitten by a dog, has fully recovered. They are looking forward to a good fall and winter business.

George Waldbart did not make his usual summer trip this year, contenting himself with frequent trips to his summer home in the country. Andy Hoffmann and Dave Bauzhof, his able lieutenants, have the place in fine shape for the busy season.

C. C. Sanders' new store, which recently collapsed while in course of construction, will soon be completed, as an extra force of men has been put on the work.

The chances are good that at least twenty-five members of the Florists' Club will make the Chicago trip next month. Anyone wishing to go should make known his intentions at the club meeting, Thursday, September 14.

The bowling season is about to open and the florist bowlers will again take a hand in the various leagues. They are: C. A. Kuehn, Carl Beyer, A. Nibling, A. Ryan, George Schriefer and J. J. Beneke. These six are to meet after the season is over and roll as a team to represent St. Louis at the S. A. F. convention in Chicago next August.

Jabez Gadd is no longer in the employ of the Eggeling Floral Co. This firm expects to remain in the old location for a few months more, at least until after the holidays.

The St. Louis Florists' Club will hold its installation meeting in the club rooms in the Odd Fellows' building,

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First Vice-Pres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

LOECHNER & Co., New York, received sixteen cases of bulbs on the steamer from Bremen that docked August 29.

ON the steamer from Copenhagen that reached New York August 29 there were 1,318 bags of seeds consigned to order.

FLOWER seed crops in England are reported as being specially good quality this year, the warm, bright weather ripening the seeds perfectly.

DARWIN tulips are expected to be in specially good demand this season, and many of the autumn catalogues give them greater prominence than heretofore.

ARTHUR L. DEAL, representing W. W. Johnson & Son, Ltd., Boston, England, and son of E. J. Deal, general manager of that concern, was at Chicago this week.

THE French bulbs that were shipped via Genoa have at length all got in. The Duca d'Aosta, which docked at New York August 30, brought only two cases, consigned to order.

THE Roswell Seed Co., Albuquerque, N. M., has started work on a new packing shed with side-track facilities. The company is a heavy buyer of fruit on the trees and does its own packing.

ONION sets are considerably better in quality than last year, according to Knud Gundestrup, of the Kirkeby & Gundestrup Seed Co., Chicago. The yield being smaller than last year, the demand is good.

C. E. KENDEL, secretary of the American Seed Trade Association, has issued the stenographic record of the twenty-ninth annual convention, held at Marblehead, Mass., last June.

THE McMillan Seed Co, Atlanta, Ga., has removed to larger quarters at 27 South Broad street. J. C. McMillan, Jr., has recently returned from a visit to California seed growers. The business was established by his father in 1877.

THE 1911 crop of Harrisii is about all in. The boat from Bermuda that reached New York August 28 brought only nineteen cases of bulbs: eight consigned to L. D. Crossmond & Co., four for Henry & Lee and seven for Ralph M. Ward & Co.

THERE has been great heat in all the European seed growing districts, but particularly in Germany, France and England, for many weeks of the summer, but this has recently been succeeded by reasonable temperatures, according to cable reports.

THE leading paper at Macon, Ga., recently printed a half-page illustrated write-up of the Georgia Seed Store, owned by Joe Flournoy, grocer, and managed by H. W. Cameron. The first catalogue will be issued January 1 and a bid made for mail-order business.

THE customs officials are not satisfied with certain recent decisions of the Board of General Appraisers as to the duty on celery seed, and the Treasury Department has instructed the Assistant Attorney General to appeal the case of the classification of celery seed under the tariff act to the Customs Court. Duty upon celery seed has been assessed at the rate of 10 cents per pound under paragraph 266. The Board of General Appraisers decided that celery seed should be permitted to come in free of duty under paragraph 559 as a crude drug.

THE seed growers in Europe, after several cold, wet seasons, have had one of the hottest and driest on record. Disastrous as were the former, the reverse has proved worse.

CALIFORNIA, in spite of the poor crop of sweet pea seed this year, is supplying a constantly increasing part of the world's requirements. The exports run far into the tons.

BULB growing in Holland is increasing steadily. There were in 1904 about 8,067 acres devoted to bulb growing. This area reached to over 11,375 acres in 1910, while the total export amounted to over 16,966 tons weight, according to statistics of the Holland Department of Agriculture.

A COMBINATION of a number of the largest growers of potatoes in Aroostook county, Maine, has been formed under the title of Aroostook Potato Growers' Association. The object is to pool the product for economy in handling and marketing, as well as buying fertilizers and supplies. The association is in the form of a stock company, capitalized at $100,000, of which L. E. Tuttle, of Bridgewater, is president and Guy C. Porter secretary.

SEED CROPS IN CALIFORNIA.

The accompanying illustrations show the onion and lettuce crops of the present season on the Milpitas farm of the Kimberlin Seed Co., Santa Clara, Cal. The mountains in the background belong to that part of the Coast range that borders the Santa Clara valley on the east. As will be noted, the foothills of the mountains are cultivated to a considerable elevation, but only the valley lands are used for seed crops.

The men seen in the onion field are Harvesting Onion Seed on the Farm of the Kimberlin Seed Co., Santa Clara, Cal.

Chinamen, and a photograph of such a crew at work is difficult to obtain, as the Chinese have a belief that to be photographed leads to misfortune. The seed heads of the onion have to be handled carefully, to avoid losing the seed. The man grasps the head with one hand and cuts the stem with the other. As the heads do not all ripen at one time, two or more pickings are necessary. In the case of lettuce the whole plants are cut and these are stacked together on large sheets of canvas, where they are permitted to dry until ready for threshing. These finer seeds are threshed out on the sheets with the flail.

Though no rain falls during the summer months, there is no irrigation of the seed fields, but thorough cultivation is employed to hold the moisture from the winter rains until the crop is made. In preparing the ground, if the soil lumps any after plowing and harrowing, the roller is used and one large grower has rollers so designed that they follow the cultivator between the rows in later operations. This extra fining of the soil he finds makes two cultivations equal in effectiveness to three without the roller attachment.

In plowing these large areas steam tractors are used, turning six or eight furrows at a time. At the same time the large amount of hand work later required makes the work more like gardening than farming. In the old days of long credits one of the growers spoke of onion as a three-year crop. "One year you plant the seed, the next year you plant the bulbs, and the third year you get some money—maybe," was the way he put it.

POSITION OF DISCLAIMER.

Must be Brought Within Letter.

Acting as a result of an item in the Seed Trade Department of The Review, a committee of the American Seed Trade Association, after an investigation of court decisions, has sent out a report to the effect that, to have legal standing as a part of the contract, the seed trade disclaimer should be printed on the letter-head between the date line and signature, or else there should be within the body of the letter a direct reference to the disclaimer if printed elsewhere on the letter-head. The committee recommends the latter course as having certain advantages over the former.

History of the Case.

The attention of the trade was first called to the matter by a note in The Review for July 28, 1910, as follows:

An attorney whose specialty is commercial law states that no part of what may be printed on a letter-head is a part of the contract unless it be between the date line and the signature, except a reference appears between those parts to practically bring the outside words within the body of the letter itself. This would apply to the non-warranty clause as printed on most seedsmen's stationery.

This was the subject of considerable discussion among the trade and many letters reached The Review, from seedsmen who wanted further information. These were advised that the note was based, among other things, on a decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois in which it was held that "printed matter in a letter-head forms no part of the letter written on the sheet, and will not qualify an absolute contract which results from an acceptance of an offer by such letter." See 153 Ill., 102. As a result some of the trade printed stationery on which the disclaimer appears just below where the typewriter puts the words "Dear Sirs."

President Page, in his annual address to the American Seed Trade Association at the Marblehead convention in June, 1911, referred to the importance of this point and there was general discussion of it, with the result that a committee (consisting of Curtis Nye Smith, attorney for the association; Kirby B. White, of D. M. Ferry & Co., and S. F. Leonard, of Leonard Seed Co., was appointed to consider and report. Secretary Kendel now has mailed the committee's report to each member of the association. It is dated August 11, 1911, and is as follows:

The Committee's Report.

To the President and Members of the American Seed Trade Association:
At the last annual convention of your association the undersigned committee was appointed to investigate and report on the question: "Is it necessary for seedsmen to have the usual non-warranty clause printed on their stationery between the date line and signature in order to make such clause an effective condition of the contract of sale made by the correspondence between the seller-seedsmen and the buyer?"

We beg to submit our report as follows:

From information received, we understand that the question arose from a decision of the Supreme Court of Illinois found in the case of Summers vs. Hibbard, 153 Ill., 102, and we briefly note the facts of that case. Hibbard made Summers an offer to buy certain sheet iron. Summers gave an unqualified acceptance of said offer on their stationery, which carried on the top of the sheet above the date line, firm's name, etc., in small printed type the clause, "All sales subject to strikes and accidents." Summers failed to deliver and set up as a defense this clause, claiming it as a term of the contract. The court held that the written terms of the contract were absolute, definite and conclusive and that the printed clause was antagonistic to the written terms and must therefore be discarded.

In the later Illinois case of Anaconda Copper Mining Co. vs. Houston, 107 Ill. App. 183, there was a printed clause at the top of the stationery and above the date line, etc., preceded, however, with shipping instructions in typewriting. The court held such clause a part of the contract, saying: "There being a written designation of the shipping route at the head of the letter sheet in close proximity to the printed condition * * * and there being no inconsistency between the written and printed parts of the contract * * * the acceptance of the order without objection * * * constituted an agreement to * * * ship in accordance with * * * the printed clause."

LILIUM HARRISII

(THE BERMUDA EASTER LILY)

LET US SUPPLY YOUR WANTS IN LILIES THIS SEASON

We think we can make it to your advantage to do so, as regards both quality and price.

The stock that we offer is not gathered indiscriminately from all kinds of sources, but is grown for us by a few selected growers whose stocks have been worked up from the true, original stock. In order to insure the health of the product, the bulbs are not grown on the same field oftener than one season, other crops being grown on the field the preceding year. The ground is thoroughly manured when the previous crop is grown, leaving it in a high state of cultivation, and when the lily bulbs are planted no fresh manure is used; this prevents disease and insures a crop of strong, healthy bulbs.

In addition to this, we do not dig our bulbs as early as they are usually dug, but leave them in the ground until they are thoroughly ripened and matured. When Harrisii is good it leaves little to be desired. There is very little, if any, stock obtainable as good as the stock that we are offering. We are supplying only this one grade of selected stock and when this is disposed of we shall have no more to offer.

While the quality of the stock that we offer is of the highest, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices of those who offer the ordinary stock gathered from indiscriminate sources. We are sure buyers will find our stock very satisfactory, and much more so than the Japan-grown Longiflorum, which has badly deteriorated in recent years.

Bear in mind that we were the original introducers of Harrisii in Bermuda, and that we have exceptional facilities for obtaining our present supplies. Also take note that the smallest bulbs that we offer are 6-7 inch bulbs, not 5-7 inch, as usually offered.

6-7 inch bulbs, 335 to the case, $15.00 per case; full thousand lots, $ 40.00 per 1000
7-9 inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 16.00 per case; full thousand lots, 75.00 per 1000
9-11 inch bulbs, 100 to the case, 18.00 per case; full thousand lots, 175.00 per 1000

The court reviewed the Summers case, explaining the difference in facts of the two cases. "It is also suggested that there would be no dispute if in the typewritten part of the letter a direct reference to the printed clause was made;" and the court gives this dictum:

"We are inclined to the opinion that without some such reference a printed condition should not be considered a part of the written contract where an absolute order is given in writing and accepted by the other party."

We have also considered other Illinois cases and there appears no divergence from the law as above stated: American Express Co. vs. Pinckney, 24 Ill. 392; People vs. Dulaney, 96 Ill. 503; Michaelis vs. Wolf, 136 Ill. 68; Peek vs. Seoville, 43 Ill. App. 362; Langdale vs. Illinois, 100 Ill. 263; Loveless vs. Thomas, 152 Ill. 479, 482; Chicago vs. Weir, 165 Ill. 582; Bennett vs. Giles, 111 Ill. App. 428.

Therefore, answering the query above propounded, so far as the decisions of Illinois are concerned, we are of the opinion that the seedsman can print his disclaimer clause at the top, or at the bottom, or on the reverse side of the letter sheet, upon which he is making his contract of sale, and have same an effective condition of his contract, PROVIDED in the written part of his letter direct reference to such clause as a part of the contract is made, as, for example, "Subject to the above (or below, etc.) printed conditions we offer (or accept), etc."

We suggest that this method of placing the disclaimer clause at the top or bottom of the letter sheet, with direct reference thereto in the body of the typewritten letter, has an advantage over printing the clause between the date line and signature, inasmuch as not all correspondence of seedsmen constitutes offers or acceptance of prices or terms of sales, and the direct reference above advised distinctly comes within the ruling of the Anaconda case, above cited, and many other decisions, and will avoid the possibly unfavorable judicial determination that the printed clause is antagonistic to the written terms and so void.

And as to the law in states other than Illinois, our investigations indicate that most courts sustain, while some courts do not establish the Illinois doctrine of exclusion of printed clauses outside of the date line and signature, unless referred to in the body of the letter, on the well known theory that a document must be read by its "four" or "eight corners." Yet we maintain our opinion above expressed and for these reasons:

First. The courts might decide, under the facts of the particular case (as in the Summers case), that the printed disclaimer clause was not contemplated by the parties as a condition of the contract.

Second. Even if the courts held that the printed clause was a condition of the contract, yet it may be decided that the printed clause was antagonistic to the written terms and so void under a well established rule of law, because the written words propose to sell certain seeds carrying an implied warranty as true to type, etc., while the printed clause expressly robs the written words of any such force. Of course, all this is obviated by the direct reference in the written agreement to the printed clause.

long time destroyed the store of the Barteldes Seed Co., 1518 Wazee street, August 25, causing a loss of from $25,000 to $30,000 on the stock of seeds, chicken feed and sundries. The stores of the seed company form an L from Wazee to Fifteenth street, the entrance to the wholesale and shipping department being at 1518 Wazee and the entrance to the retail store at 1521 Fifteenth. The fire started on the second floor over the shipping department and so far as can be determined was caused by a spark from a neighboring chimney which dropped through an open skylight. The fire was discovered by one of the shipping clerks, who went to the loft to get some bagging. At that time the blaze had a good start and the fire gained rapidly before the department was able to get a stream of water working.

C. R. Root stated that the loss was covered by insurance and that business would not be seriously interrupted, shipments going out as usual next day from the main warehouse.

Boddington's Quality Christmas and Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas

ALL true stocks of Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas will be scarce this season; some varieties are a total failure, owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. We can make immediate delivery of the varieties marked with a star (*), the balance we are expecting from our grower in California at any time. Our advice to intending planters is to order early.

Our stocks of Christmas-Flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasingly popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period, and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" and include Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed from selected stocks by the leading California Growers and Specialists of Sweet Peas. Our output last year was nearly 6000 lbs. No kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

WINTER FLOWERING SWEET PEAS AT NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW, BOSTON, MARCH 25th TO APRIL 1st, 1911.

Partly showing Mr. Wm. Sim's Exhibit, which won the majority of the leading prizes—seed almost exclusively supplied by "Boddington." Sim's Sweet Peas were one of the sensational Exhibits at this Grand Flower Show—average length of stem being twenty inches.

At the Exhibition and Convention of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, July 12th and 13th, 1910, we again won the C. C. Morse & Co.'s Silver Cup for the finest and best collection of Sweet Peas open to the trade only.

Boddington's Quality Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas

BODDINGTON'S EXTRA EARLY CHRISTMAS WHITE SNOWBIRD. An exceptionally early Sweet Pea for indoor flowering—will bloom six weeks after sowing. Color clear white, upon long stems; habit fairly dwarf and of exceptionally free-flowering qualities. Without doubt the finest early white for indoor planting. We sell one grower in Pennsylvania 35 lbs. of this variety every year, name on application.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS PINK. This is the earliest and most profitable and useful Sweet Pea in cultivation, as by sowing the seed under glass in latter part of August, flowers can be cut from Thanksgiving on during the winter months.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS WHITE. A companion to our Christmas Pink. Just as free and profuse a bloomer.

BODDINGTON'S CANARY. Similar to the above, but flowers of an exceptionally good yellow.

BODDINGTON'S FLAMINGO. Color scarlet; free-flowering and early.

STEM-ROT ON ASTERS.

I have lost fully forty per cent of my asters, mostly from the effects of a black or brown streak running from the ground half way up the main stem. This has developed about the time the flowers began to open. I use old cow manure, applied in the fall and turned over at that time, and I kept the soil well cultivated and watered. With the exception of this trouble the plants are vigorous. Is this another form of stem-rot? What is the remedy? W. C. S.

Your plants undoubtedly have stem-

Giant-Flowering

Cyclamen

For the last 15 years we have selected three-fourths of our seed bearing Cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no fizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers, that don't have to be petted to be grown into a choice salable plant—a well built, five petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize-winner. Received first and second prizes at the Toledo Florists' Club meeting early in November, when blooming Cyclamens were scarce. Seed of this, my own grown strain, in five separate colors, $1.00 per 100; $6.00 per 1000; $25.00 per 5000.

YOU Will find all the best offers all the time in the Review's Classified Advs.

When your competitor cuts prices below the living line, you had better raise yours and give value for the money, because it won't be long before you will require a larger capital to supply your competitor's trade. It's a good deal easier to get a fish hook in than it is to get it out, and so it's easier to reduce prices than it is to raise them, in regard to flowers. You will always find the low priced man flourishing while the prices last, but when circumstances compel him to raise them, and eventually he must, his trade will find their way to the other fellow, just as sure as the Hollanders come in the spring. Away down deep in the American buyer's heart there is a sneaking dislike for a cut-priced man and a wholesome respect for the man they can't saw down in price. The reason is because a buyer never knows when he touches bottom in dealing with a cut-priced man, and he is always afraid his neighbor is getting the same goods for less money. He is willing to pay as much but don't wish to pay more. No argument can down the fact that the man who maintains a decent price and delivers an article accordingly, is bound to win out in the long run. Horseshoe Brand Bulbs are marketed at a profit—principally because we are not philanthropists as yet—but the profit is not larger in the aggregate than it should be, and not nearly as large in proportion to the investment as the grower makes. They are marketed on their merits and not on the price, and they have generally been found to be worth all and more than they cost. If you want really good bulbs—try them.

rot. The presence of this blight is first indicated by the normal color of the stem turning a dull, yellowish green near the ground. This soon runs the whole length of the plant on one side. While one half of the plant appears green and perfectly natural, the remaining half has a wilted and faded appearance in the smaller leaves, becoming weaker and poorer near the ground. This stem-rot is caused by a fungous growth in the pores through which the water passes. This fungus plugs up the openings and prevents the passage of any water or sap through the stem. The plants finally die from lack of water and food.

Ferns that are Ferns Fancy and Dagger

Packed and shipped by myself. Old customers know what that means, when they see whose adv. this is, and new customers will know if they try a case from me. I have not bothered you with writing this summer, telling you that I had the only Ferns there were in the market, but starting Sept. 1st, I am right on the job with an unlimited supply; you should place your order with a man that can and will supply you until new crop next spring at a reasonable price. There will be no harm done if you ask me for my price for the balance of the season, and it may do you a lot of good.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston June 1912.

MEMBERS of the Peninsular Horticultural Society were guests at the nurseries of J. G. Harrison & Sons, Berlin, Md., August 24.

ARTICLES of incorporation have been filed by the Adams-Robertson Co., Chicago; capital, $5,000; object, a general nursery business; incorporators, Walter F. Butler, E. A. McClintock, William K. Pattison.

R. B. WILSON, of Emmett, Idaho, who owns a nursery near there, has been placed on a committee of three to represent the state of Idaho at the international tax conference at Richmond, Va., September 14.

WM. A. PETERSON, Chicago, has recently recovered from a severe attack of tonsillitis. Shipping of peony roots began August 31 at Peterson Nursery and it was reported that the orders on hand at that date were fully equal to anything in the history of the concern.

THE J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., Pomona, N. C., has recently invested in 700 acres of land in Harnett county, for growing nursery stock and to provide soil for the company's greenhouses at Greensboro. The branch at Kernersville will be discontinued and the property of 500 acres put on the market.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY, working in conjunction with the Growers' and Shippers' Exchange, a company incorporated under the laws of the state of New York, with over 1,100 fruit growers as stockholders, will establish a public box apple packing school at the public market in Rochester, in charge of George Crefwell, expert from Hood River, Ore. Rochester has been selected as the place to hold the school on account of its being the most accessible point from all parts of the New York apple belt.

THE DEPARTMENT'S POSITION.

In the circular recently issued on the proposed legislation to authorize a quarantine against nursery stock, the Department of Agriculture says over the signature of Secretary Wilson:

"The mere statement of conditions is sufficient to show the need, but a strong concerted effort is being made to array the nursery trade of this country against such legislation and put this important industry in the very unfair attitude of opposing reasonable legislation, which is quite as much for its own protection as it is for the protection of fruit and forest interests. In view of the evident misunderstanding which is being broadly circulated in relation to the intent of the proposed act and of its probable manner of enforcement, and the groundless fear that the Secretary of Agriculture or his experts would take an unreasonable attitude toward the nurserymen, it seems desirable to make a fair statement (1) of the conditions calling for such legislation, (2) the history of the efforts to secure it, (3) an explanation of the scope and working of the bill now before Congress, and (4) the relation of the Secretary of Agriculture and his assistants to the enforcement of such a measure.

"Practically all of the European powers have very stringent plant-inspection laws, and, in the case of the United States, absolutely prohibit the entry of nursery stock. Apples and other American fruits are admitted only when the most rigid examination shows freedom from insect infestation. Canada and other important British possessions have similar protective legislation.

"The United States is the only great power without protection from the importation of insect-infested or diseased plants, and thus becomes a sort of dumping ground for European refuse nursery and ornamental stock. This does not often apply to the importations of the larger and reputable importing firms, but does apply to the poorly-packed miscellaneous ornamental and other stock imported by department stores of large cities or that sent to this country to be sold under the hammer by auctioneers for whatever price may be obtained.

"The immediate danger which led to the recent effort to secure legislation was the discovery in 1909 of the abundant importation and wide distribution into the United States of nursery stock infested with brown-tail moth nests and occasional egg masses of the gipsy moth. During the years 1909 and 1910 such infested stock was carried into twenty-two states, covering the country from the Atlantic seaboard to the Rocky mountains. During the first of these years no less than 7,000 winter nests of the brown-tail moth, containing approximately 3,000, 000 larvæ, were found in shipments into New York state alone—seed material enough to infest the whole United States within a few years.

"More than half of the important insect enemies and plant diseases now established in this country have been brought in on imported nursery stock, and new insect enemies and new diseases are being thus introduced every year. Twenty different insect pests, new to this country, some of them very formidable in the Old World, have been intercepted in the inspections of the imported material by this department this year, and this does not include the introduction of brown-tail moth nests and other European pests with imported seedling stock.

"A properly enforced quarantine and inspection law in the past would have excluded many, if not most, of the foreign insect enemies and plant diseases which are now levying an enormous annual tax amounting to several hundred million dollars on the products of the farms and orchards of this country.

"In spite of the many pests which have already gained foothold and the control of which will be a permanent annual charge on production, there remain many other insect pests and plant diseases with equal capacity for harm which, fortunately, have not yet come to us, and it is to protect from these new dangers that legislation is now sought, not with the intention of prohibiting the trade in imported stock, but to throw such safeguards around it as will most protect both the importers and the subsequent purchasers of such stock.

"The insect pests and plant diseases that have come in are probably here for all time, but certainly no reasonable objection can be made to the effort to safeguard the future. The conscientious importer will be benefited, and the home producers, the dealers, and all the great fruit and forest interests will be protected by suitable inspection and quarantine legislation.

"The San Jose scale had become established in California on stock introduced from China about 1870, and was known to be one of the most serious of orchard pests. With proper supervision and quarantine it undoubtedly could have been limited to the Pacific coast indefinitely. A quite unimportant importation of stock from California by a prominent Missouri nurseryman in the early nineties established this scale in several eastern nurseries, and this led to the first concerted effort to obtain a national quarantine and inspection law. The failure to reach an agreement among the nurserymen, fruit growers and entomologists as to suitable legislation prevented anything coming from this effort, although several bills were introduced in Congress from time to time. In the meanwhile the San Jose scale became so widely distributed by transportation on nursery stock that quarantine against this insect was no longer practicable, and the country is now being taxed, and probably will be for all time, many million dollars annually, because there was no law under which strong hold could have been taken of this danger at the outset.

"As elsewhere noted, the recent effort to secure legislation followed the entry and wide distribution in this country of brown-tail moth nests on nursery stock, chiefly from northern France. The discovery, about the same time, of the entry of the potato wart disease from Newfoundland, and the white-pine blister rust, chiefly from one district in Germany, greatly emphasized the immediate need for Federal control.

"In view of these special dangers, a new bill was drafted and submitted to Congress. This measure passed the House, and would undoubtedly have become a law in due course except for season. Chrysanthemums have arrived, but from all accounts will not be plentiful for several weeks. Other kinds of outside stock move slowly. Japanese lilies are in good demand, but owing to the continued cool weather they do not open as fast as they should and the retailers complain that it is difficult to handle them to advantage. Dahlias, gladioli and other similar stock do not touch the popular fancy and are not netting the growers much money.

Valley is scarce and is not produced in quantity over the daily demand. Orchids are plentiful and are selling about as usual. There is a scarcity of smilax, but other greens are about the same as they have been for several months.

THE DEPARTMENT'S POSITION.

the objection made to it by the legislative committee of the National Association of Nurserymen. This committee expressed itself as recognizing the need of legislation, but desired certain changes made in the proposed bill, and in response to their request the bill was withdrawn for conference and amendment. The principal objection of the nurserymen had been to the examination of the imported stock at port of entry. This objection was met by providing for such examination at the point of destination, on the premises of the importer. A number of other changes were also made at the instance of the nurserymen, including all the important ones asked for except the elimination of the power of establishing foreign quarantine against particular plants to keep out diseases or insect pests which could not otherwise be excluded. This provision was aimed particularly at such dangers as the potato wart disease and the white-pine blister rust, which no inspection or disinfection would reach, and would seldom, if ever, apply to the regular import trade of seedling nursery stock, and, if the bill was to have any real value, this power could not be omitted.

"The bill, as thus amended, was introduced during the second session of the Sixty-first Congress, and was favorably reported from the Agricultural Committee of the House on January 6, 1911. Owing to the legislative conditions of the concluding session of this Congress and the low place of this bill on the calendar, to get a consideration of the subject, it was necessary to put the bill on the Unanimous Consent Calendar. In this manner the bill came up for consideration February 6, was objected to by a member, and fell back to its regular place. Near the closing days of the session the bill was again brought up on the Unanimous Consent Calendar. No opportunity was possible in the few minutes allowed for debate to present the merits of the measure, and it failed to secure the necessary two-thirds vote to pass it under suspension of the rules.

"The measure now before Congress radically differs from the one before the preceding Congress, as will be seen from an examination of the copy of it given below. The chief point of difference is that inspection of imported nursery stock is left to the different states instead of being undertaken by the Federal Government. A complete system of notification is provided for, however, both through the requirement of a permit and by subsequent advices to be given by the customs offices, the broker or first receiver of the stock, and the common carrier transporting it. The other features of the bill remain much as before. This bill has been introduced into both House and Senate, and it is expected to come up for consideration next winter at the first regular session of the present Congress."

White House

THE "PRINCE OF QUALITY," WHITE.

The largest white carnation in existence at the present time.

Princess Charming, one of the finest carnations ever sent out. Color of Enchantress, but has a much longer and stiffer stem. Positively will not split and is absolutely free from disease.

Field-grown plants of the above, $ 12.00 per hundred.
100.00 per thousand.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Crisp, cool weather has made a stir in the trade and things are moving at a more rapid pace. Social functions are gradually resuming their activity, and weddings are numerous for so early in the season. Trade in general is growing and will soon be back to its usual fall proportions. On the whole, summer trade was heavier this season than last, perhaps due to the several conventions held here during the summer. The fall trade promises to be unusually good, judging from a few early indications.

The fall weather has made roses especially good. Lilium auratum is flooding the market and is selling at a low figure. The quality is good, however, and a few large funerals made these lilies salable. Harrisii lilies are fine and are bringing a good price. There are a number of good varieties of asters on the market, good in quality and firm in stem. Gladioli are better than ever; Americas are the most pleasing in color for funerals and are the best sellers. The gladioli with fancy markings, in named varieties, find favor for all occasions. Valley is getting larger and firmer, and it, too, shows the effect of the cool weather. It is quite scarce, nevertheless, and the price is high.

In garden flowers, gaillardias, helianthus, cornflowers, Golden Glow, heliotropes, hydrangeas, asters and gladioli are the most in demand. There is an unusual demand for yellow flowers this fall, especially for wedding decorations and for luncheons. It is almost impossible to fill the great demand.

Flower carnivals have become exceedingly popular in the towns in the vicinity of Rochester. They are of value to the retail trade, by fostering the love of flowers and thus increasing the flower business.

Various Notes.

H. E. Wilson is growing some fine lily of the valley, which finds a ready market, as valley is scarce.

W. W. Summey is growing some fine asters in pale lavender and white.

GERANIUMS

== ARE OUR SPECIALTY ==

WE ARE preparing to grow Geraniums on quite an extensive scale for next season, and claim to have the largest stock and most complete collection in the country, and are making very interesting special prices for November and December delivery. Write us about your probable requirements and we will convince you that it is more to your advantage to buy just the kinds you want in the Fall than to bother with saving a few stock plants and working up stock yourself.

We have ready for shipment about 250,000 plants in 3-inch pots at $3.00 per 100, $25.00 per 1000, which would make fine stock for fall and winter sales.

POINSETTIAS

We have them in large quantities and of the very highest quality. No finer plants have ever been shipped out on orders than what we are supplying our trade.

If you want strong plants for cutting at Xmas, we can give them to you eight to ten inches high. If you want short, sturdy stuff for pans, we can give them to you four to six inches high. All grown from top cuttings and shipped from 2½-inch pots.

ROCHESTER.

Miss Margaret Horne has returned from Saranac Lake, having had a most restful time.

The Oak Hill Country Club had a unique table-decoration recently, representing a miniature golf links, with benches, seats, sand boxes, red flags, balls, etc. The work was done by J. B. Keller's Sons.

The carnival of flowers at Lancaster, N. Y., was a great success. The judges were B. S. Meyers, Lancaster; Fred Wise, East Aurora, and C. T. Guenther, Hamburg, N. Y.

George Keller has returned from his fishing trip at Stony Lake, Canada. He reports a big catch.

Charles Vick was judge at the flower carnival at Churchville, N. Y., held August 30 and 31. Mrs. E. Payne, a florist of that town, was the other judge.

James F. Smith, of Boas & Co., Philadelphia, called on the trade last week.

Mrs. F. J. Keller and her daughter, Susie, have returned from Detroit, Mich., where they spent one week in the company of F. J. Keller.

A. T. Vick, of Albion, N. Y., was in town last week. He has some special work for the county fair, to be held there September 15.

E. C. Campbell had a fine window display of gloxinias not long ago.

W. L. Prussia, president of the San Jose, Cal., park system, was a visitor here recently and inspected the local system.

Henry P. Neun, the box manufacturer, who purchased a greenhouse on South avenue about one year ago, is sending some good White Killarney roses into market.

J. J. Karins, of Henry A. Dreer's, was in town calling on the trade. He was on his way to the west.

The Market.

Trade conditions remain about the same as last week.

Various Notes.

The Roepke-Rieman Co. has an unusually fine lot of cyclamen this year. Robert Ellis, with Bertermann Bros. Co., was away on his vacation last week.

A. Wiegand & Sons have just completed a new house and have installed cement benches.

John Chisholm, formerly of Indianapolis, but for the last year of Seattle, is back here for a short visit.

George Wiegand has returned from a week's auto tour in northern Indiana and Chicago.

Sydney Smith has been cutting some good carnations.

The florists' picnic, held at the Roepke-Rieman grove, east of the city, was attended by about forty florists and their families. One of the events of the day was the ball game between the "Wets" and "Drys," headed by Will Roepke and Homer Wiegand. After thirteen innings of strenuous playing, with the score 10 to 10, and the pitchers exhausted, it was decided to play another game in the near future to decide the championship. One of the features of the game was the batting of Will Smith, a professional ball player secured by Will Roepke, who fanned out five times. There were numerous events for the children, with suitable prizes provided for the winners. H. L. W.

DES MOINES, IA.

State Fair Flower Show.

There was an excellent showing by the local florists at the state fair, held in the closing days of August. The awards were:

Floral design—Lozier, first; Iowa Floral Co., second; Wm. Trillow, third.
Brides' bouquets—Lozier, first; Wm. Trillow, second; Iowa Floral Co., third.
Basket of flowers—Lozier, first; Iowa Floral Co., second; J. S. Wilson Floral Co., third.
Vase of flowers—J. S. Wilson Floral Co., first; Lozier, second; Iowa Floral Co., third.
Twenty-five red roses—Lozier, first; J. S. Wilson Floral Co., second; Wm. Trillow, third.
Twenty-five pink roses—Wm. Trillow, first; Lozier, second; Iowa Floral Co., third.
Twenty-five white roses—Wm. Trillow, first; Lozier, second; Iowa Floral Co., third.
Twenty-five yellow roses—Lozier, first; Wm. Trillow, second; J. S. Wilson Floral Co., third.

The Society of Iowa Florists held its annual meeting during the fair. There were many talks on trade topics, but only two papers were read: "The Care of Plants in Parks and Lawns," by J. D. T. Fulmer, and "Suggestions on Florists' Supplies," by Roy Wilcox.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Elks' aviation meet, on the heels of which followed the Kentucky state fair, offered the occasion for the Louisville florists to primp up by means of novel and attractive windows. The city was thronged with sight-seeing visitors, coming in from all directions, and the competition for recognition was strenuous. Enterprising activity was in evidence throughout the retail districts, and the florists, though given a good race, easily held their own with beautiful window and store displays.

One of the catchiest and most novel window displays was that of C. B. Thompson & Co. A 4-foot operating aeroplane, decorated in Elks' colors, pulled and tugged at invisible wires and appeared as if, at any moment, it might dart out through the glass, the propeller being revolved rapidly with the aid of electric fans. The ground was a bed of green, with white and purple asters forming the letters B. P. O. E., and the back was banked with ferns and palms, from which the rays of a small, powerful searchlight were thrown on the throbbing machine. Many visitors called to compliment Mrs. Thompson upon the work of her window dresser, Miss Nellie B. Able, but Mrs. Thompson is in Michigan at present, on her vacation. P. F. M.

Ottawa, Ill.—Lohr Bros., who are operating the King greenhouses, have their stock in good shape and cut the first carnations of the season September 1.

THE HOME OF THE ARAUCARIA.

Araucarias! Araucarias!! Araucarias!!!

Fresh and Green.

We have them by the thousands—front, sides, back, everywhere.

No one can beat us in this line.

WARNING.

DON'T BE DECEIVED! Now, as well as for the last 25 years, we hold the ground as leaders in the importing, growing and shipping of our specialty, the Araucaria.

Our 25th Anniversary

Every successful business house has an anniversary, so have we—This is our 25th anniversary of importing, growing and shipping our specialty, the Araucaria. Starting 25 years ago with only 100 plants, see now—Spring, 1911—we imported from Belgium 10,000; more are coming with the azaleas this fall! What caused such an immense growth? Advertising alone has not done it. First, we are honest and square in our dealings; second, cash sales to everyone, therefore our customers don't have to pay for deadheads; third, we pay cash—get good value for money and sell cheap; fourth, prompt delivery.

Our so well-known Christmas Begonia Erfordii, a constant bloomer for the fall holidays, and during the whole winter is never without a flower; in light pink, pink, dark pink and turning gradually into a bright red (big trusses of flowers), 2½-in. pots, $5.00; 3-in., 8c; 4-in., 12c.

Heacock's Palms and Ferns

Home-grown, strong, clean and well established, describes our Palms—no more words are necessary.

"Our satisfied customers are our best advertisement." One customer who has been dealing with us for years sent in an order for $1500.00 worth of Palms without seeing them. Another, whose order last year amounted to $700.00, gave us an order for $1600.00 this year. Send for our new booklet and give us a trial order.

Lay in your Palms in September, while you can have them shipped by freight. Our facilities for shipping are of the best. We ship by freight to every state in the Union. We have 40% more glass this year. Most of it is devoted to Palms. We are particularly strong in the larger sizes (7, 9 and 12-inch).

We grow all our Kentias above 6-inch size in cedar tubs made especially for us, avoiding breakage of pots in shipment and giving better results to our customers; and, while they cost us several times what pots would cost, we sell them for the same money. They are the neatest, lightest and best tub ever introduced. Painted green, with three electric-welded wire hoops. We order these tubs by the carload.

Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

Greenhouse Heating.

TWO MISSISSIPPI HOUSES.

We have just built another carnation house, 30x80, and should like to know what amount of piping will be needed to keep it at 55 degrees, with the outside temperature 10 degrees above zero. Please let us know, also, how many 2-inch returns a 2½-inch flow will carry. We have 2-inch and 2½-inch pipe on hand and also some 3-inch, and should like to use it if possible. Also let us know the amount of piping required for a house 29x54, under the same conditions.

D. F. C.

The number of returns of the size mentioned which can be supplied by 2-inch and 2½-inch flow pipes will depend to a considerable extent upon the length of the house. In an average house a 2-inch flow will supply 200 square feet of radiating surface, but if the coils are short 150 square feet would be a maximum. A 2½-inch flow pipe would handle 100 per cent more radiation and a 3-inch flow would handle three times as much as a 2-inch flow.

For a house 30x80 feet, to obtain a temperature of 55 degrees in weather 10 degrees above zero, either two 3-inch, three 2½-inch or four 2-inch flow pipes, with nine 2-inch returns, should be used. The same arrangement could be used in the house 29x54 feet.

A FEW HEATING PROBLEMS.

I have a few heating problems upon which I should like some advice. Our plant is steam heated. One boiler has already been installed, with a steam trap system for returning the condensation. I wish to install another boiler, for use in extremely cold weather, or in case of disability of the one now in use. The boilers will be set side by side. The steam trap, I suppose, must be set in such a position that I can serve whichever boiler I am working, and I expect to use valves on steam outlets between the boilers and steam main, to cut out whichever boiler may not be in use.

In case the boilers are both in use and are both open to the same steam main, will the steam trap serve them both at the same time, so that the proper water level will be maintained in each boiler, especially if they are not connected at the blow-off? Or should they be joined together at the blow-off, so that when working together an equilibrium will be maintained by the connections at both steam outlets and blow-off? In that case will it be advisable to connect the steam trap outlet, or return, to the blow-off, so that it can send the condensation to the boiler in that way?

In using a steam trap for returning the condensation to the boiler, is it not all right to let this returned condensation come back to the boiler through the blow-off opening? If not, where is the best place? For a boiler fifty-six inches in diameter by twelve feet long, is a 1½-inch opening large enough for the blow-off? The boiler I contemplate installing has this size of opening, and it is in the rear head, as close as possible to the bottom shell. I had thought it should be larger, and should be in the bottom of the boiler, about six inches from the rear end—about two and one-half or three inches in size. In that case, which would be the better, a reinforcing plate riveted to the inside of the boiler, or a flange connection riveted to the outside of the shell, into which the blow-off pipe would be screwed? W. H. C. & C.

One steam trap will answer for several boilers, no matter how or where they are connected. In most boilers the only provision for returning the condensed water is through the blow-off outlet.

An outlet one and one-half inches in diameter is large enough for a boiler of the size described. It is customary to have it in the bottom of the boiler, near the rear end, but it could be in the rear end; the only objection to this would be that the boiler would not blow out as clean as when the outlet is in the bottom. Either method of making the connection could be used. The usual method is to have the plate on the outside of the shell. If the shell is weak, a reinforcing plate would be helpful in strengthening the boiler.

CONNECTING TWO BOILERS.

Will you tell me how to connect two boilers as a battery, but so that either one can be used, or both? One boiler has three 3-inch flows and four 3-inch returns; the other has two 4-inch flows and two 4-inch returns. Each is rated for 2,000 feet of radiation. Would it be satisfactory to put the three 3-inch flows into a 5-inch, put on a valve and lead into a 7-inch drum, doing the same with the two 4-inch flows and taking the mains from these, also following the same plan with the returns? We do our own fitting and should prefer the simplest way of doing the work. J. S.

The question does not state whether the boilers are to be used for steam or hot water, but, judging from the size of the pipes, it is presumed that hot water is to be used for heating. Without knowing more definitely regarding the arrangement of the pipes and the location of the houses, it is not possible to give any positive advice, but the plan proposed can quite surely be used and no changes can be suggested. While a 7-inch pipe might be needed for the drum, a 6-inch pipe would probably answer for the purpose. The main thing in arranging the pipes is to have the two boilers connected as directly as possible, so that, whether one or both are used, the connection of the flow pipes from the drum will be as direct as possible with both of the boilers. For hot water the arrangement for connecting the returns should be practically identical with that used for the flows.

STEAM OR HOT WATER?

I have a hot water boiler with a grate two feet six inches in diameter. How many square feet of glass, in roof and sides, would it be safe to heat with this boiler in zero weather, if the required temperature is 50 degrees? I also have a steam boiler with a grate surface 18x24 inches. How many square feet of glass would it heat to the same temperature? I wish to pipe a greenhouse, 20x86. If I heat it with hot water, how many rows of 3-inch boiler tubes will be needed to heat it to 50 degrees? How many rows of steam pipes, and what size, would suffice for the same house? I am located in Rhode Island. J. C.

The hot water boiler with a grate two feet six inches in diameter will answer for about 6,000 square feet of glass. The steam boiler with a grate 18x24 inches should not be used for more than 2,000 square feet of glass. A house 20x86 feet can be heated by means of eight runs of 3-inch boiler tubes. Seven or eight 1 1/4-inch steam pipes would suffice for the same house, if a temperature of 50 degrees is desired.

A WISCONSIN RANGE.

At present we have six greenhouses, heated by hot water, and we intend to change the heating system to steam. We also intend to build six more houses, adjoining the present ones. The completed range will consist of an east and a west section, separated part of the way by the boiler room and part of the way by only a passage, and each section will contain six houses, all running east and west. We prefer to use two boilers and should like to know what would be the necessary horse-power of each. Please state, also, how many runs of pipe will be needed in each house. We want the heating outfit to be ample enough so that there will be no trouble in maintaining the proper temperature in the coldest weather. We inclose a diagram of the

are all satisfied with the results it has given, and many duplicate orders is the proof. This Valve will maintain a steady pressure on the low side, no matter how the initial pressure fluctuates. By carrying 40 or 50 pounds pressure on the boiler and setting the valve to carry 5 or 10 pounds on the line, you always have a reserve to fall back on in case of a sudden drop in temperature. to be heated to 52 degrees; two houses 21 by 149 feet, to be heated to 60 degrees; one house 23 by 149 feet, in which 60 degrees is desired; one house 21 by 125 feet, requiring 60 degrees, and two houses, respectively 21 and 23 feet wide by 125 feet long, in which a temperature of 50 to 54 degrees is desired. To maintain the temperatures named, two fifty horse-power boilers will be required. One boiler of this size would answer in mild weather. In the six houses for which 52 degrees is desired, use one 2-inch flow and six 1 1/4-inch returns. For the 60-degree houses take one 2 1/2-inch flow and ten 1 1/4-inch returns, and for 50 to 54 degrees use one 2 1/2-inch flow and eight 1 1/4-inch returns.

IN SOUTHERN GEORGIA.

I wish to inquire about the heating of my new greenhouse, which is just being built. It is 18x85 and five feet four inches to the eaves. It will require a temperature of 60 degrees. How much piping will be needed in it, using a 3-inch flow and 2-inch returns? I also have an old house, 16x128 and four feet to the eaves, which I run at a temperature of 50 degrees, and it is at present heated with one 3-inch flow and six 1 1/2-inch returns, three at each side. Both houses will be heated by one boiler. They run north and south and are three feet apart. J. T.

In a house 18x85 feet, with two walls exposed, in the state of Georgia, it will be possible to secure a temperature of 60 degrees by using one 3-inch flow pipe and eight 2-inch returns.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Trade continues about the same as for the last few weeks. City trade has amounted to almost nothing for the last week, funeral work making practically the only demand on stock. Not until the people begin to return from their summer outings will business improve to any extent.

Society will again take up its abode in the city after the middle of September, and the subsequent social affairs will improve business conditions considerably.

Stock continues to improve and roses are being received in large quantities, but the several days of heavy rains have hurt outside stock materially. Carnations are beginning to make their appearance, but are of rather poor quality and short-stemmed. Asters are being overdone, as usual, and can be had at any price and, with the advent of dahlias, there will be plenty of color to the window displays and market stalls. Q.

Club Meeting.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Baltimore held a meeting August 28, at the Florists' Exchange, St. Paul and Franklin streets. Robert L. Graham, president of the club, presided.

It was voted that the club subscribe $100 toward defraying the expense of the Fifth Regiment's visit to Atlanta, Ga. It was also resolved that the club take steps to organize a women's auxiliary society in connection with the organization. The Washington club has recently been successful in doing this, and it is thought by the members that it will not be a difficult matter for the Baltimore club to accomplish.

Noah Flitton, secretary of the club, read the report of the committee of final resolutions of the convention, in which it was stated that the convention had been the most successful ever held in the twenty-seven years of the organization. The report concluded with the statement that the committee had noted with pleasure the display of banners and other decorations of welcome throughout the city during the convention.

When Mr. Flitton had finished reading the report a certificate of merit was awarded to Edward Kress, of this city, who introduced the new deep crimson seedling rose which was so much admired by the visiting florists.

On Wednesday, September 27, the members of the club will leave Mount Royal station at 8 o'clock in the morning to attend the fifth annual dahlia and flower show, which will be held at the dahlia and canna farm of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., Cowenton, Md. The party will leave on a special train and will be met at the station by teams, which will convey them to the farm.

Waterbury, Conn.—Saxe & Floto have the new range planted to carnations and chrysanthemums. The Lord & Burnham latest idea of concrete and iron will be adopted in the future.

Outside of funeral work there is little doing here. Flowers are none too plentiful and asters are chiefly depended upon. They retail at 35 cents and 50 cents per dozen. Roses are good at from $1 to $1.50 per dozen. Sweet peas have had a poor season and are about all gone now. Some nice gladioli are seen at $2 per dozen and the few carnations that are coming in bring 50 cents.

Graser & Humphreys had 12,000 asters planted in the field, but only 2,000 are left to tell the story of the summer's vicissitudes, and these are producing few good flowers. The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

GUINEA PIGS WEED LAWNS.

W. C. Egan has unearthed the following in a report from the United States consul at Nottingham, England:

"A curious, but successful experiment is being made on a number of private lawns in Kent, and is about to be tried by a golf club in the neighborhood of Greenhithe. The idea is the novel one of substituting the guinea pig for the mowing machine and the weed killer.

"Around the lawn is arranged a low wire barrier, and into the inclosure are turned a number of guinea pigs; or better, a passage is made from their hutch to the lawn. The animals at once attack all the worst weeds—the plantains first, then the dandelions and daisies. These broad-leaved plants, which no mowing machine will touch, are killed by the persistent cutting of the guinea pigs' teeth. When they have finished the weeds, which are broad-leaved and succulent, they proceed to the grass. In a short time the lawn looks as if it had been cut by the closest machine. The persistent cutting of the leaves kills the weeds, which can stand almost any other treatment, but does no harm to the grass.

"One lawn, formerly a mass of weeds, has been made to grow nothing but the finer grasses. Another is still under process of treatment. The half of it in which the guinea pigs were first set to work has been cut quite evenly and very closely. For golfing it is as fast again as it was under the administration of the mowing machine, and not a weed is visible. The other half, where the animals have just been turned loose, is a mass of dandelions.

"In this neighborhood it has been found that the guinea pigs do not suffer at all by being left to work in winter as well as in summer. Indeed, they are healthier than under the usual treatment of those who keep them as pets. An astonishing demand for the animals has grown up in the neighborhood, and if the inland golf clubs, which have great difficulties with plantains, take to the new method the guinea-pig population is likely to go up in the ratio that the natural fecundity of the animal suggests."

Hunt's "Elastic-Lyke"

Greenhouse Glazing Putty

"SEMI-LIQUID"

Absolutely the best glazing product ever produced. Guaranteed to be made of purest, double boiled Linseed Oil and Pure White Lead. Weighs 16½ pounds to the gallon; each gallon will cover 300 running feet. Can be used in machine or putty bulb and we guarantee that ten years after using all that is necessary is to break the outer film and the body will be soft and pliable. Impervious to water and will not heave in cold, nor run in warm weather; in fact it is "MANUFACTURED TO MEET THE EVER INCREASING DEMANDS OF THE MAN WHO WANTS THE BEST." 1 gal., $1.40; 5 gals., $6.75; 10 gals., $13.25; 20 gals., $24.45; 1 bbl. (50 gals.), $62.50.

HUNT'S "Simon Pure" Dough Putty

This is a strictly pure putty compound of whiting and double boiled Linseed Oil and so compounded as to make it impervious to moisture; frost will not crack it, no crumbling by change in temperature, and is smooth and easy to apply.

100 lb. cases, $3.05.

The putty in these cases is put up in 25 pound skin bladders. This is an advantage, as one bladder at a time can be used without exposing the balance to the air.

100 lb. steel jackets (bulk putty), $2.90.

Barrels of about 800 lbs. bulk, per 100 lbs., $2.55.

For those who use dough putty there is nothing on the market that is better or of higher quality.

Glazing Tools

We handle all kinds of Glass Cutters and Glazing Points, but list here only those that we consider the best.

Hunt's Galvanized Glazing Brads

5 gallon kits..... 8.50
10 gallon kits..... 16.70
25 gallon bbls..... 41.00
50 gallon bbls..... 81.00

Reasons why you should use Hunt's Greenhouse Pure White Paint:

1st. It is made to withstand the excessive moisture and variation of temperature which is so prevalent in greenhouses.

2d. It will cover more surface than any other paint now on the market, making it cheaper in price than paint of inferior quality.

3d. It will not peel, blister or crack, hence will outlast by years other products and add to the life of the house without any additional expense.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Last week was one of the duller of the season and no business of any consequence was transacted. A few small funerals were hardly noticeable and the long spell of damp, rainy weather kept what few persons are in the city indoors, so that few transient sales were reported. Roses are better, both in supply and quality, and the same is true of asters. A few gladioli, dahlias, Easter lilies and the first of the mums constitute the range of varieties, but there is nothing doing. Prices are normal.

Various Notes.

Those interested in the formation of the wholesale flower market held another meeting August 30, at Narragansett hotel, with a good attendance, and completed the organization by the election of the following board of directors: John A. Macrae, Alexander Macrae, Walter S. Nichols, W. Cushing and Frederick Hoffman. A store is to be leased in a few days for headquarters. It is understood that, now that the market is an assured fact, a number of growers have signified their intention of joining.

L. Engel, manager of the flower department for L. Dimond & Sons, Inc., reports three times as much business to date this year as during the same period last year.

The continuous rain which began on the morning of August 25 and ceased on the morning of September 1 was gladly welcomed by the florists, as wells and water supplies were getting dangerously low.

T. J. Johnston & Co., on Weybosset street, are showing the first chrysanthemums of the season. They are the Golden Glow and stand up well.

Miss Minna Williams, daughter of O. H. Williams, for whom she is bookkeeper, is on her vacation at Newport.

Some excitement was occasioned one day last week in the retail store of Johnston Bros., of Dorrance street, when a defective electric wire caused an explosion and flash in the big electric cash register. No damage was done.

O. H. Williams was one of the guests at the special dinners given to the office-holders of the town of Johnston at the Pomham club, August 31.

DENVER.

The Market.

The last few days in August were exceedingly dull, but September business started up well indeed, and everyone feels encouraged and hopes that the real dull season is over. With the exception of funeral flowers, little is sold, as the majority of Denver homes have been quite fortunate this year in growing their own flowers. In most of the yards are seen asters, gladioli, cosmos and dahlias, and all the florists are praying for an early frost as the best possible means of getting rid of the garden stock.

Beauties are coming in better every day, both in quantity and quality. Tea roses are quite respectable in appearance since the mildew left them, but the stems are still short. There are quantities of asters, but most of them are of poor quality and are sold at a low price. Carnations are still small and short-stemmed, but are in demand.

Various Notes.

C. Zbindin has taken the store at Fifteenth and Lawrence streets, and so far is quite well satisfied with the results.

Fred Hall has just finished installing a new boiler, and is now busy getting his cellar in shape to receive his winter supply of coal.

Fire broke out in the Fifteenth street store of the Barteldes Seed Co. August 24, damaging the stock to the extent of $45,000. The insurance adjusters have been working in the store since the fire, and have allowed nothing to be sold or taken out. This has been hard on the florists who depend upon this firm for supplies, but Mr. Horlacher says to have patience, and promises it will soon be over. The cellar was filled with fertilizers of different kinds, dried blood, blood and bone, etc., and during the fire the water from above ran down into these fertilizers. It is a great deal of work to get this cellar cleaned out, as the workmen cannot stay in it for more than a few minutes.

Harry G. Rackham, for some years connected with the Park Floral Co., left last Saturday for Detroit, Mich., where he and his father will go into business.

P. O. Hansen, of Greeley, is shipping in some fine asters with long stems. They are far better than any that are grown in Denver.

The Curtis Park Floral Co. has recently improved its property by erecting an iron fence, which adds greatly to the appearance. M. E. J.

Alpena, Mich.—Linke & Son have just completed a new carnation house, 26x80 feet.

Albany, N. Y.—Harry A. Bradt, formerly employed by F. A. Danker, is now with Mark Aitken, at Springfield, Mass.

CROSS SECTION OF A SUNLIGHT DOUBLE GLASS SASH ON A SUNLIGHT FRAME

Here is the sash you don't have to cover

Two layers of glass instead of one. A $\frac{3}{8}$ inch layer of dry, still air between—a perfect non-conductor—a transparent blanket—takes the place of mats and boards.

The saving in time and labor

Sunlight Double Glass Sash will pay for themselves in a single season. They never need covering—and therefore save half the time you have to give to single glass sash in covering and uncovering—in watching them on frosty nights.

Earlier, Stockier Plants

Under Sunlight Double Glass Sash the plants get all the light all the time. Every grower will see at once the value of the earlier, stockier plants resulting. Your crops will mature weeks ahead of the grower's who uses single glass sash—and you will get the benefit of the high prices in the early market.

Here is what one grower says

Harry S. Walker of Terre Haute, Ind., grew cabbage, tomatoes, eggplants and mangoes under Sunlight

Sunlight Double Glass Sash Co.

Double Glass Sash last season. The minimum thermometer was 15 below zero. No plants were injured. He says in part: "Plants grown under single layer sash were not to be compared with mine".

A gentle rain in your greenhouses under your absolute control

How much could you have saved this summer if you had had rain whenever you wanted it?

Would it have been worth the cost of an Irrigating System?

This is the kind of cabbage you can raise with the Skinner System of Irrigation.

The Skinner System of Irrigation has solved the watering problem. It eliminates all risk through drought, cuts down all loss from burnt up crops.

L. Herziger Jr. of Neenah, Wis., saved enough strawberries in three weeks after he installed a

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

LETTERING ON DESIGNS.

In The Review of September 7 there appeared an illustration of a funeral wreath by the Quakertown Plant Co., Quakertown, Pa., showing how lettering should not be done, except where the florist's customer insists on it. Here is another illustration reproduced from a photograph of the work of the Quakertown florist, showing how a long and cumbersome inscription may be handled to good effect, even though the design to which it is attached be neither large nor expensive. In this instance the fellow employees of the deceased took up a collection, raising a not large sum, for which they naturally wanted to make the best possible showing. The draping of the deceased mill operative's chair was the order and the inscription called for was "Sympathy of Quakertown Silk Mill Employees." Six words, some of them long, presented quite a problem for the florist, but by putting them on two streamers of the ribbon bow, doubling up so that in reality the inscription made four lines, the entire inscription was kept in view, while at the same time it did not seem badly out of proportion to the size of the design.

PHOTOGRAPHS AND DRAWINGS.

As Aids in Making Sales.

For aid in displaying flowers and plants and in stimulating customers to see what your descriptions mean, there are numerous helps which can be bought, made or practiced. There should be two places in the store where cards or notes can be written—one where miscellaneous trade can be taken care of, and one for special customers, where much discussion of an order may be carried on without interruption or overhearing. With the small stock of imagination which the average customer possesses, you must either sketch out your proposed decorative plans or have some pictures to show her.

It requires some study to arrange and show these pictures and decide what their quality should be. If nothing better can be afforded, clippings from The Review will do for a beginning. Paste them in an invoice book, classified and spaced. Separate the funeral work from other designs. Do not choose every design that is published, but the best according to your taste and needs. This will make a good beginning.

The Use of Albums.

After a time you will be able now and then to get a snapshot at some of your own best work and will need to have a better way of displaying it. You may have accumulated enough photos to warrant your purchase of a good album for funeral work and one for other designs, such as table centerpieces, house, church and hall decorations, baskets, theater bunches, bridal outfits and corsages.

If you can not get good photo work done near by, it may be more satisfactory to do your own work. The most difficult proposition will be to control the light. Advice from a good commercial photographer may be necessary. However, it is not our business at this time to discuss the process of photographing, but the disposal and value of the photograph.

the times and be ahead of the trade. Your own work in photos will inspire the confidence of the prospective customer. Necessarily one book will not last you always. Let each successive collection show a creditable advance.

It is a matter of regret that so much of one's best work must be gotten out of the shop so quickly after completion that it is impossible to get a snap at it. It is also a matter of regret that so much stock goes to waste during the dull season, and time also passes without fruitage. Why not take this stock, which the dullness leaves on your hands, and work up a few good pieces for model pictures—some of those things to which you could not work up a customer's imagination by verbal description, and some of which might have seemed too difficult except for experiment?

Have the photos mounted on linen, ready for the album. Learn all you can critically about photographs, what

A Cumbersome Inscription Well Handled.

A loose-leaf album, bound so as to stand wear and tear, will be found most desirable. In arranging the photos, group the lodge and society emblems by themselves, baskets by themselves, miscellaneous funeral emblems alone, different treatments of the same design in a group, and so on down the list. Let the collection keep pace with constitutes a good floral photo, how it differs from a portrait photo, how to choose backgrounds and at what angle you can secure the best picture. Preserve the negatives carefully for future use in circulars, announcements and other advertising matter.

In photographing a room decoration it is better to take details rather than the whole room, unless your photographer is equipped with a revolving camera. For instance, a wedding altar, a mantel or a doorway may be sufficient for each picture.

Free-hand Sketches.

For new and original work, free-hand sketches are the best. A certain class of trade wishes designs never before used in the city, and you must be able, without previous study, to suggest plans that are both novel and suited to individual tastes. You must be able to grasp the architect's idea and supplement his work with your decorations. You must respect his structure and not go contrary to his forms and lines.

You may talk to many persons of what you propose to do for them till you are black in the face, and if you can not show them a picture or sketch they are none the wiser. Therefore, draw a few sketches—whether you can or not. Whether the drawing is excellent or not, it shows your ability in new situations and your general preparedness. G. B.

well rotted cow manure, and within the last few weeks they have had one dose of weak manure water, one watering of Totty's fertilizer at the rate of one pound to a barrel, and a coating of lime. We have half of this bed planted with Pennsylvania and the other half with McNiece. The latter are not affected, and are a dark, healthy green down to the soil. What is the remedy? R. E.

The leaves sent by both of these inquirers are affected with a disease which is common to chrysanthemums, particularly at this season of the year, and is called septoria. It is a fungoid disease and is caused by moisture and lack of air. At this season of the year, when the plants have made considerable growth, only a little air can get through the foliage in the center of the benches and it is there that most of the leaf disease starts. If the plants are not affected too far up the stem, the disease does no great harm; in fact, it is rather an advantage, if the leaves are picked off, as it lets more light and air get to the bed. If the plants are badly diseased, the remedy is to pick off all affected leaves, keep the foliage dry, and spray with a solution of sulphide of potassium in the proportion of one ounce to two gallons of water.

Pennsylvania, the mum which has been bothering R. E. in this way, is a weak grower and always was more or less affected with this trouble. The use of the solution of sulphide of potassium, combined with care in keeping the foliage as dry as possible, will serve as a remedy.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

WHEN TO TAKE BUDS.

When is it safe to take buds on Shaw, Enguehard and Yellow Bonnaillon? S. S.

It is safe enough to take the bud at any time now on all these varieties. If it is desired to have Enguehard and Yellow Bonnaillon quite late, the present late crown can be rubbed off and the grower can wait for the terminal, which will appear in two or three weeks, but, so far as safety goes, it is perfectly safe to take the buds any time now.

Charles H. Totty.

TAKING THE BUDS.

This being our first season in growing mums, we should like to ask you when to take buds on the following chrysanthemums, of which we have about 50,000 plants, with the stems so far in good, healthy condition: One and a half houses of Yellow Bonnaillon, one bench of White Bonnaillon, one large house of Dr. Enguehard, one house of President Taft, one bench of Donatello, one bench of Edmond Albe, one house of Timothy Eaton and J. Nonin, four lower benches of Ivory, two benches of Golden Glow, with buds well matured, and about three houses of singles, pompons, etc. So far we have left the latter varieties to grow at their will. If you can help us to this information we shall be grateful to you, as our success will largely depend on the mums. Z. & S.

Any time now is perfectly safe to take the buds. Ivory, in fact, should have been taken two weeks ago to get the best results.

The singles and pompons need but little disbudding. The idea with them is to cut them in sprays and it does not pay to disbud them down, trying to get large flowers out of them. If left to grow much at their own sweet will and loosely looped up, they will make beautiful natural sprays that will sell on sight. If it is desired to have some mums in flower from Thanksgiving to Christmas, I would suggest that Jeanne Nonin, Dr. Enguehard and Yellow Bonnaillon be left growing as long as possible; that is, if the buds which the plants are at present showing are crown buds, these buds can be rubbed off and the side shoots left on to make a terminal bud. If the buds now showing are terminals, of course, this can not be done, but the crop can be held back by keeping the houses cold. Chas. H. Totty.

BOTH HAVE FUNGOUS DISEASE.

Enclosed you will find two leaves of mums which are affected with some disease. Please inform me as to a remedy. E. D. E.

I am enclosing some leaves of the mum, Pennsylvania. There is quite a batch of this mum, the leaves of which are turning brown in this manner. We are careful in watering. When they were planted the soil was mixed with

SWEET PEAS DAMPING OFF.

We have a house of sweet peas which were planted twenty days ago from 2-inch pots, in both pink and white varieties. They are rotting off at the ground. We mixed half rotted manure with the soil and only watered moderately, just as we would other young plants at this time of the year. Would you kindly suggest a remedy? We used four wheelbarrow loads of manure to a 100-foot bench. The soil is black loam. Would it be advisable to plant in hills?

Your soil would seem to have been suitably prepared for sweet peas. Are you quite sure that the drainage is good, and also that the soil is not too acid? It would be well to test it with blue litmus paper and find its acidity. If found acid, lime should be used to correct it. Too deep planting would cause damping off, especially if a spell of sultry weather should ensue right after planting. If your soil is all right there should be no need of planting in hills; all growers of sweet peas that I know of, sow or plant on level ground.

The danger of damping off is much greater in hot than in cool weather. A too close atmosphere is also bad; keep an abundance of ventilation both at the top and sides of the house and do not use any shade on the glass. If your peas had reached any considerable length in the small pots and were planted rather deep to somewhat improve their looks, this alone would cause the trouble. Do not coddle the plants; better keep them at 40 to 45 degrees at night until the flower spikes appear, then advance the temperature a few degrees.

DUTCH BULBS

HOW TO MAKE THEM PAY.

Make Haste Slowly.

Many of the Dutch bulbs are already at hand and the balance will be here shortly. Bulbs, generally speaking, are this season of good quality and the new specific rates of duty, at so much per thousand instead of the former twenty-five per cent advalorem, have in some cases reduced prices and encouraged dealers to import more heavily. Taken all in all, Dutch bulbs last season paid quite well the growers who specialize in them. Of course there are times of glut, just as in the case of mums, violets, roses and carnations, but anyone growing in quantity who possesses good cold cellar facilities can easily hold his tulips, narcissi and hyacinths back for a few days. The average country florist having considerable retail trade cannot get along without bulbs. There are many occasions, when other flowers are quite scarce, when a nice batch of bulbous flowers helps out wonderfully. Not only for cutting are they good, but pots and pans command a considerable sale all through the late winter and early spring. In order to have early flowers, bulbs must be put in the soil right away. For extra early forcing no doubt some are already in the flats, especially if wanted for the holidays, but it does not pay the small grower to force his bulbs hard with the idea of getting a few for Christmas. The prices may be higher, but stems will be short, flowers small and quite a few bulbs will come blind.

Tulips.

There are more tulips grown than any other Dutch bulb. For cutting, narcissi have advantages, but tulips are more popular in pots and pans. There are probably more of the La Reine (Queen Victoria) forced than of all others combined. It is of a charming delicate pink color in winter, coming pure white toward spring. For a later sort, White Pottbakker is fine, but should not be forced so early as La Reine. In pots we have Rose Grisdelin, delicate pink, and Proserpine, silky rose, both good forcers. Cottage Maid also does well under glass. In the way of comparative novelties, somewhat higher priced but grand in quality, are Queen of the Netherlands, satiny pink, a glorious sort; Pink Beauty, glowing rose pink, and Flamingo, light rose shaded white, a striking sort. All of these force well.

In yellows, Yellow Prince is inexpensive and good. Mon Tressor, rich golden in color, forces well also, while Golden Queen should be tried where a big, handsome yellow is wanted. Scarlets are not in heavy demand as cut flowers. Vermilion Brilliant and Belle Alliance are the best for early work. Scarlet Pottbakker is good later. The orange shades are quite popular. Thomas Moore, a sweet scented sort, is the best. Duchess of Parma is rather high in price and not any better in quality. The showy Keizerskroon is an excellent forcer and its color, red with a broad yellow edge, is striking.

If a boiled down list of forcing tulips is wanted the following half dozen will fill the bill acceptably: La Reine, Cottage Maid or Rose Grisdelin, Keizerskroon, Belle Alliance, Yellow Prince and Thomas Moore.

Narcissi.

The French grown Trumpet Majors, Golden Spurs and Emperors are the narcissi to grow for Christmas and early January flowering. They average dwarfer in habit and have smaller flowers than the Dutch stock, however. Trumpet Major, also called Single Von Sion, should be planted in quantity for early work. The flowers are clear golden yellow. There is no better sort to follow it than the well known Golden Spur. This is, taken all in all, the best of all the trumpet daffodils for forcing. Emperor, with its immense trumpets of golden yellow flowers, is a robust grower and sells well after the end of January. Victoria is the best of the bicolored trumpet sorts and its price is now reasonable. Princeps is a cheap and popular forcing daffodil. The flowers, however, lack texture.

There are some of the short trumpet sorts which cannot be overlooked. Among these are Sir Watkin, the giant Welsh daffodil, with flowers four to five inches across; Leedsii Mrs. Langtry and Minnie Hume, with broad white perianths and pale primrose cups, charming and popular sorts; and of course, poeticus ornatus, for early forcing, and the old poeticus for later work are indispensable. All the narcissi and tulips succeed well in flats containing four to five inches of soil. A convenient size is 12x24x4 inches. When in pots or pans, place the bulbs as close together, as they will stand and let the soil just cover them.

Hyacinths.

In pots, pans and glasses, hyacinths sell better than in a cut state. The miniature and second sizes are sometimes boxed and forced, but the sale for these is limited when compared with tulips and narcissi. It is better to buy named varieties for pot and pan culture in order to get exactly the same shade of color in each. A 5-inch pot will hold one good hyacinth bulb, a 6-inch pot, three bulbs. The special pans and pots for bulbs, which are deeper than those in ordinary use, are best for hyacinths. In flowering in glasses use clear, cold water and place a lump of charcoal in each glass to assist in keeping the water pure. Let the bulbs stand just clear of the water and change the water if it shows signs of foulness. Keep in a dark closet or room until the roots have run to the bottom of the water and the growths are started at least two inches.

Before planting hyacinths, rub off all the small offsets on them, as they are of no use.

A few good cheap hyacinths, all single flowered, are as follows: White or tinted, La Grandesse, Baroness Van Tuyll, L'Innocence and Grandeur a Meerville; pink and rose, Gertrude, Charles Dickens, Moreno, Gigantea; blue, King of the Blues, Queen of the Blues, Leonidas, Marie; yellow, Ida, Yellow Hammer. The double hyacinths are less useful than the singles and should not be used for glass culture, owing to the greater liability of the flowers to damp.

Spanish Iris.

Spanish irises are splendid for cutting. They cannot be subjected to hard forcing, like some other bulbs, but in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night do well. They often are grown in benches, but culture in flats is better and permits retarding them over a longer season. A few fine varieties are: Cajanus and Chrysolora, clear yellow; Louise, beautiful pale blue; Midley, dark blue; British Queen, pure white.

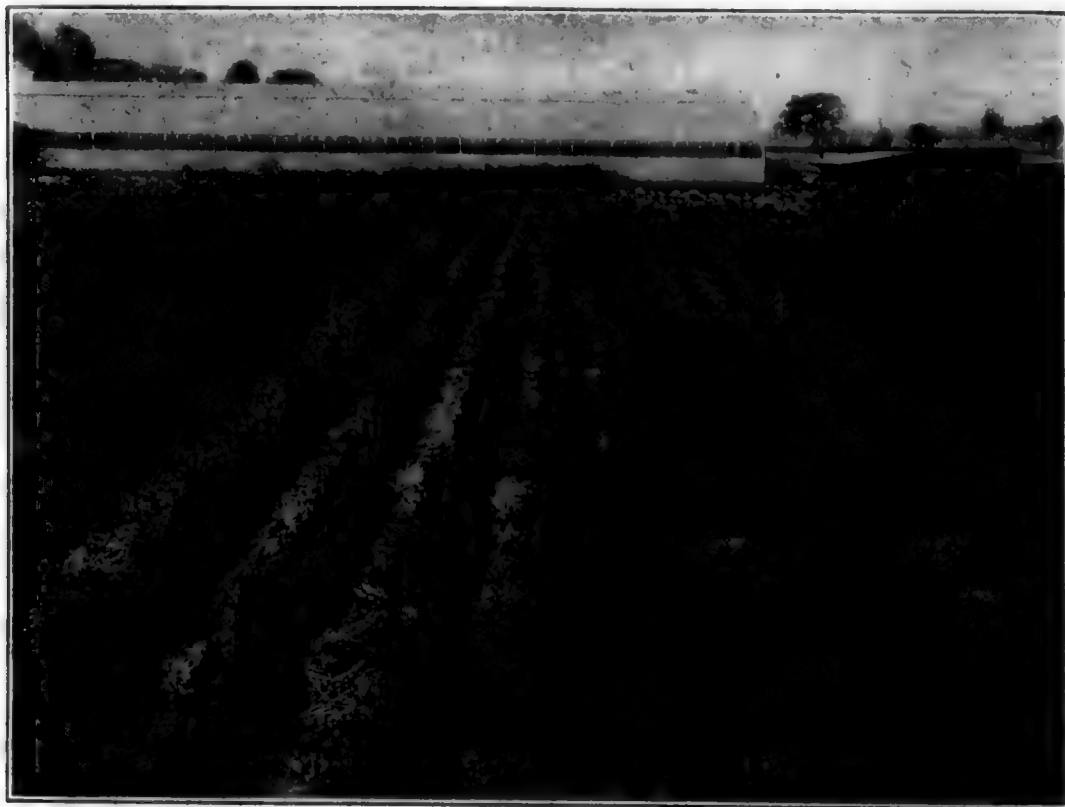

Spanish iris starts to grow soon after being placed in the house. Put them in a coldframe and do not cover with ashes, as in the case of tulips, narcissi and hyacinths. It is easy to keep them in frames until wanted for forcing, as they are perfectly hardy bulbs.

Gladioli.

Increasing in popularity each year are the small, early flowering gladioli, which are splendid for cutting. These can be had in bloom from the end of March until July. Treat them the same as Spanish iris, covering the bulbs two inches deep. The bulbs are small and a flat of the size previously named will hold seventy-five bulbs. Colvillei alba The Bride is an old favorite for forcing, flowers pure white. The cardinalis section contains some gems, among which the following half dozen will be found excellent: Peach Blossom, delicate pink, the most beautiful of all, should be largely grown for Easter and Memorial day trade; Blushing Bride, white, crimson blotches, showy; Apollo, salmon orange; Mathilde, white tinged lavender, fine; Ackermanni, salmon flaked carmine, striking; Pink Perfection, bright rose.

Miscellaneous Bulbs.

Under the head of miscellaneous bulbs comes a number of pretty things that are popular at the up-to-date stores. Among these are ixias, good varieties of which are I. rosea plena Wonder and I. craterioides major. These do well in 6-inch pans in a cold greenhouse. Babianas and sparaxis can be grown in the same way, eight to twelve bulbs per pan. Tritonia crocata in shades of orange and scarlet are charming; six to eight bulbs do well in 6-inch pans. Anemone fulgens, scarlet with black stamens, and A. coronaria The Bride, pure white, are two beautiful windflowers for forcing. They do well in the bench of a violet house or can be planted in flats. They must be grown cool. Ranunculi, both Turban and Persian, with their double, buttercup-like flowers in a variety of light hues, are eagerly sought for by the high class stores. They are better planted out in coldframes or benches than in pots or flats. A violet temperature suits them best. They naturally flower, under these conditions, in late winter.

Soil to Use.

All the Dutch bulbs like a light but moderately rich soil which contains considerable sand. Whether they are placed in frames, on a cellar floor or outdoors, they should be well soaked with water. Too many florists cling to the idea that if they soak them once and then cover up with ashes, no further attention is needed until they are wanted for forcing. Herein lies one great cause of failure in bulb forcing. The bulbs, especially where cultivated in pots and flats, must be kept well supplied with water, even in winter. The soil may look damp on the surface, but the chances are ten to one that it is quite dry below, and unless the soil is moist the results at flowering time will be disappointing and probably blamed on the bulb dealer.

Unpack the bulbs as soon as received, and the earlier they are placed in the soil, the better they will do. They often fritter away their strength lying around in bags and boxes.

Seneca, Kan.—Mrs. M. E. Baldwin has sold the 130 acres known as the Seneca Nursery to August Kramer. Mrs. Baldwin has made no plans as to her future residence.

KNIGHT, STRUCK, DARLINGTON.

The recent news in The Review, that the partnership heretofore existing between Thomas Knight and George F. Struck had been turned into a corporation was merely preliminary to the announcement that the company had taken over the establishment of H. D. Darlington, at Flushing, L. I., the largest nursery in this country for hard-wooded pot plants for Christmas and Easter blooming. Knight & Struck had been Mr. Darlington's selling agent. Now the Knight & Struck Co., which maintains the office in room 5060 at 1 Madison avenue, New York, owns the nursery and greenhouses. Mr. Darlington has joined with Messrs. Knight and Struck as one of the incorporators of the company, which has $75,000 capital stock, and will remain in charge of the growing operations.

The nurseries are situated on Whitestone avenue at Higgins lane, about a mile distant from the town of Flushing, on Long Island. It is a compact establishment, consisting of nine greenhouses and about three acres of land. The entire place is devoted to the growing of acacias and heaths, with the exception of a few other specialties, such as cyclamens, genistas in bush and standard form, forcing shrubs, and so forth. In due time a house or two of orchids will be added, for these have always been one of the specialties of both Mr. Knight and Mr. Struck. The accompanying illustrations give an idea of the layout of the place and of the cultural methods. At present one can admire some fine specimens of Acacia longifolia in 8-inch to 14-inch tubs; A. heterophylla, A. floribunda, A. cultriformis, the latter a free, dwarf-flowering variety; A. Riceana, a dainty light lemon-colored variety, and ten other distinct kinds. Erica melanthera for Christmas is in 5-inch pots by the thousands, also specimens in 6-inch, 7-inch to 10-inch pots. Erica regerminans, the pink variety, is grown for Thanksgiving. Erica cupressina, the popular dwarf, bell-shaped variety, is the Easter specialty. There are also choice things in the way of hard-wooded greenhouse plants, such as lotus, crowea, pultenaea, boronia, etc. One who takes the time for a trip to Flushing will enjoy the visit, for it is seldom that one can find a nursery that makes a specialty of these plants in this country; in fact, it is doubtful if there is another firm that grows this class of stock so extensively as is done here.

Of the members of the firm, Mr. Darlington is one of the old, well-known and successful plantmen growing for the New York market. Thomas Knight, president of the new company, is widely acquainted with the trade through having for some years visited the buyers in the interest of Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., and George F. Struck, the secretary, was for a long time on the road for F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., and Lager & Hurrell, Summit, N. J., so that he has many friends who will be pleased to learn of the way in which he is prospering.

WILL IMPROVE SOIL.

The Middle West Soil Improvement Association, which for the last six months has been perfecting its plans, met in Chicago September 11 and launched its active campaign. The chief object of this movement is to encourage better methods of building up and maintaining soil fertility by the rotation of crops and the use of barnyard manure and legumes, supplemented by fertilizers bearing nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash; by drainage and the scientific use of lime where required. The work is under the direction of H. G. Bell, late professor of agronomy of the University of Maine, and former assistant professor of farm crops of the Iowa State College. The committee has established headquarters at 919 Postal Telegraph building, Chicago, and invites correspondence.

How long shall I continue to pick off the buds of Primulas Forbesi and Chinensis?
A. E. B.

Discontinue picking the flower buds off Primulas Forbesi, obconica and Chinensis about the middle of September. This will give them time to bloom nicely by Thanksgiving and Christmas.

LILIES IN COOL HOUSES.

As Easter comes April 7 next year, what lily or lilies would you advise us to grow in houses where the temperature varies from 40 to about 52 degrees? That is, we have houses where we can give them this temperature.

F. & F.

I would not advise you to try L. longiflorum giganteum in any of your houses. This would certainly not flower for Easter; besides, it does best in a warm house. There remain L. Harrisii, Formosa and multiflorum. The Harrisii will flower the earliest, but this and the other two sorts named should have your warmest house. L.

Formosa is a good lily, variable in height and to some extent in the character of its flowers, but generally free from disease. If you want the flowers for cutting, I would prefer this to either Harrisii or multiflorum, but if pot plants are needed you would do well to grow L. longiflorum multiflorum. It grows somewhat taller than giganteum and the flowers are smaller, but it can be flowered a good deal earlier. Seeing that Easter comes early, you should secure and pot your bulbs in good season. It is easy to retard the stock for a week or two before the flowers open, but you have not the temperature for hard forcing to send along laggards.

C. W.

COMPOST FOR DUTCH BULBS.

Please inform me how to prepare a compost for narcissus and daffodil bulbs from a spent mushroom bed, consisting of six parts of horse manure and two parts of soil.
E. C.

The mushroom bed compost would contain too much manure in itself. Two-thirds loam and one-third of the mushroom manure, with the addition of some sharp sand, will make a good bulb soil.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Never was there known such a season for asters. Thousands of them remain unsold daily. The expressmen seem to be making the most money out of them now, carting the surplus to the river. Every grower of asters within forty-five miles of New York feels like never growing them again. This does not apply to the finest shipments, for the best of everything always brings good returns in the big city.

Dahlias have begun to arrive in quantity. Here, too, only the best can hope for paying recognition and there are some beauties this season. Gladioli seem to have got their second wind. The rains developed an abundance of late blooms and some of the better kinds met with much favor. The large growers near New York have some remarkably fine seedlings that are not yet on the market. There are quantities of Golden Glow, and before the end of the month shipments of chrysanthemums promise to be large. The windows show an abundance of cosmos, hydrangea and goldenrod.

Roses have advanced a step toward legitimate values. The new stock improves daily. The short-stemmed roses.

as usual at this time, are a surplus. The street men offer them at "5 cents" for a bunch of ten. You can imagine their wholesale value. Carnations are coming to the front rapidly. Stems are longer and 2 cents is obtainable for select stock. The short stems stay down at 50 cents per hundred.

There are plenty of tritomas. Valley is advancing and lilies have commenced an upward movement, selling up last week to $5 per hundred. Orchids are not abundant and prices have not changed.

Club Meeting.

Monday evening the New York Florists' Club opened for the season, with President Nugent in the chair. The evening was largely a memorial night in honor of John Birnie, whose sudden death at Baltimore saddened every heart. Secretary Young read the minutes of the club at its special meeting in Baltimore, and spoke feelingly of the tribute to Mr. Birnie at the train. President Nugent also gave a eulogy. Messrs. Totty, Bunyard and Sheridan composed the committee on resolutions, which were read by Mr. Totty and ordered engrossed, framed and sent to the bereaved family. Eloquent tributes were also given by Messrs. Weathered and Berry, and adjournment was taken at an early hour as a token of respect to his memory.

Resolutions of sympathy for Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Schenck and the family of Charles Armitage were also read by the committees appointed.

F. H. Traendly reported for the transportation committee and the committee was discharged with thanks.

Emil Schloss, Walter E. Cook and E. E. Bates were proposed for membership, and the resignation of S. C. Nash, of Clifton, was accepted with regret, he being one of the club's oldest members.

An interesting discussion followed with reference to the next national flower show, in 1913, introduced by F. H. Traendly, who spoke of the adaptability of the new Grand Central Palace for the purpose. Interesting talks in behalf of the show at New York were made by Messrs. Schultz, Weathered, Rickards, Holt, Bunyard, Totty, Lenker and Manda, and on motion of Mr. Totty the club extended an invitation to the S. A. F. to hold the next national flower show in New York in 1913. This met with unanimous approval.

M. C. Ebel moved the thanks of the club to the Baltimore society for its sympathy and kindness on the occasion of Mr. Birnie's death, and Mr. Manda moved the thanks of the club to the Baltimore club for its many courtesies and hospitality during the convention.

The exhibits of the evening were excellent. John Lewis Childs displayed many vases of fine gladioli and also staged two vases of tritomas. E. S. Miller, of Wading River, exhibited vases of gladiolus seedlings. Wm. Tricker showed several plants of his new vinca, and Frank Banning, of Kinsman, O., sent some grand flowers of Gladiolus Panama and his red seedling. Messrs. Miller and Tricker received the thanks of the club and Messrs. Childs and Banning cultural certificates.

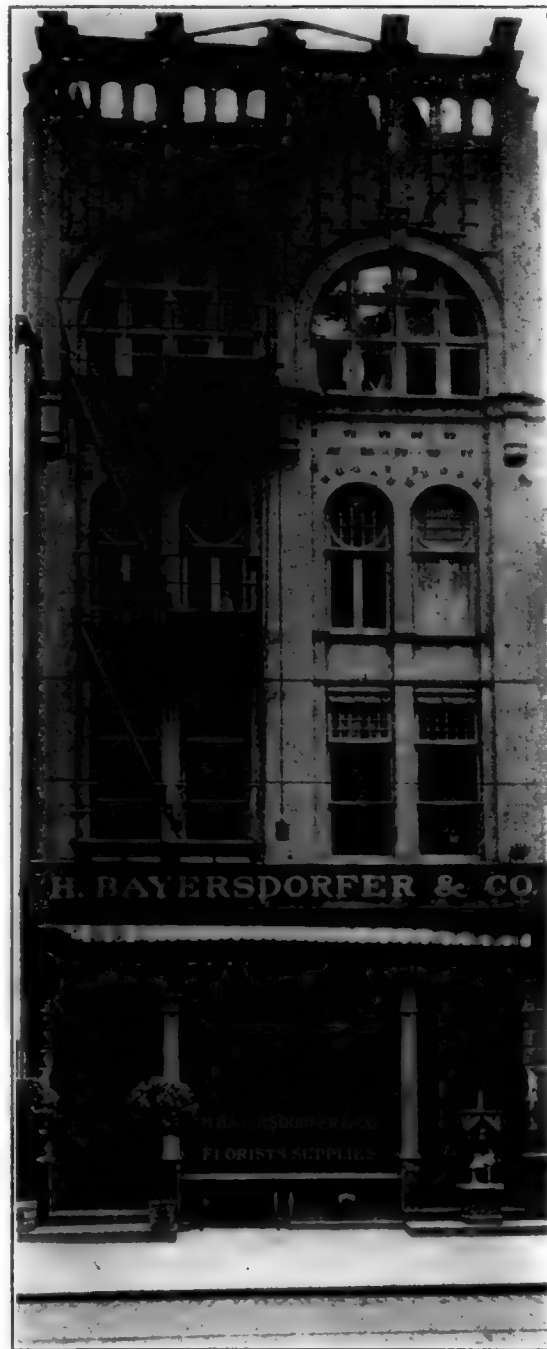

Various Notes.

Patrick O'Mara, of Peter Henderson & Co., returned last week from a ten weeks' European trip, looking the picture of health.

Kessler Bros. are filling their store and conservatories with palms and ferns, their stock of Dreyerii being especially well grown.

A. J. Guttman has secured space in the big room of the Manhattan Plant & Flower Co., in the Coogan building, and will engage in the wholesale cut flower business again. Another acquisition to the wholesale business in the same room is A. H. Pritchard, formerly manager of the retail business of Christatos & Koster, on Madison avenue. B. J. Slinn, Jr., is installing new ice-boxes and other conveniences, in the same large room, which will be occupied this winter by wholesale houses in either cut flowers or plants.

J. J. Fellouris has decided to sublet part of his large store to some firm in the wholesale cut flower business.

Gunther Bros. say their shipments of dahlias have begun and that the season promises well.

H. A. Barnard, of Stuart Low & Co., London, England, is a late arrival.

Charles Millang says he has made some profitable deals of late in real estate on Long Island, and his new auto corroborates the cheerful report. Charles does not hesitate to turn an honest penny in any legitimate enterprise.

George Saltford spent two happy and restful weeks at his old home in Rhinebeck. He says violets could be shipped now if the people wanted them.

Fred Atkins, of Bobbink & Atkins, Rutherford, is back from a two months' business trip in Europe.

September 16 and 17 the exhibition of dahlias takes place at Bronx park. There will be a meeting of the Horticultural Society September 16, and the lecture on plant life at 4 p. m.

September 20 and 21 the eightieth annual exhibition of the American Institute will be held in the Berkeley Lyceum building, 19 West Forty-fourth street. Will C. Rickards will be manager, as usual.

The retail florists in Brooklyn seem cheerful and busy. Phillips had a big wedding last week, and has half a dozen already booked for October. Wilson is busy in both his stores. Jahn is busy with weddings and dinners. Masur has added an upper floor to his store, and decorated and enlarged his quarters.

At Arthur T. Boddington's, Harry A. Bunyard says the increased demand and short seed crop indicates a quick clearance on the popular varieties of florists' sweet peas.

E. Allan Peirce, of Waltham, Mass., was a visitor September 11.

The initiative bowling of the season was enjoyed by a select few on the club's alleys September 11. The plan is to meet at Thum's, Thirty-first street and Broadway, every Friday evening. M. C. Ebel offers a bowling ball as a prize to the visiting member of any gardeners' society making the highest score up to December 31. Among the distinguished visitors Monday afternoon were Messrs. Duckham, Stewart and Traendly. Mr. Traendly's bowling achievements are in his wife's name; since convention the big silver cup Mrs. Traendly won has had several fillings.

W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., will return from his European trip on the Kaiser Wilhelm II, which will arrive September 26.

W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., and wife, mother, brother and sister have returned from a week's auto trip through the Berkshire hills.

Suhrer & Gray have leased the store at 31 East One hundred and twenty-fifth street. J. Austin Shaw.

THE BAYERSDORFER BUILDING.

The accompanying illustrations give an idea of the warehouse of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia.

One of the pictures shows the Arch street front of their 5-story building, which extends back to a street in the rear. Although this entire building is devoted to the company's supply business, it is not large enough. This season another building, across the street in the rear, is being used as an additional warehouse.

Each of the other photographs shows one-quarter of the factory that occupies the front of one upper floor. This factory is becoming increasingly important. Here are made many of the most popular supplies, such as the rattan electric lamp holder, one of the latest novelties. Here, too, are made all the special orders called for to meet special requirements all over the country. Mr. Bayersdorfer has received many letters of congratulation on his firm's exhibit at Baltimore. One writer, who had heard the whole exhibit had been sold, asked whether there was anything left. Phil.

TOLEDO, O.

Florists' Outing.

The Toledo Florists' Club had a pleasant outing on Sunday, September 10, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wonsetler, of Bryan, O. The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. George Bayer, Miss Winters, Harry Heint and family, Mr. and Mrs. G. N. Kellar, S. N. Peck and family, John Barrow and daughter, Josephine, Miss H. Patten, Henry Miller, C. Kaminski and E. A. Kuhnke, all of Toledo; E. Hall, of Clyde, O.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jordan, of Wauseon, and Christ Winterich and family, of Defiance. Mr. Winterich and his people came over in an automobile and caught the rest just as they were enjoying a bountiful dinner at the Christman hotel, as the guests of the Wonsetler family.

After sight-seeing and posing for the camera fiend, everybody, including Mr. and Mrs. Wonsetler, boarded the electric for the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jordan, at Wauseon. Here, again, the party was entertained to the limit and the general opinion of all the visitors was that they would come again.

The Wonsetler greenhouses are in the best shape possible. At Mr. Jordan's the asters were so fine as to arouse the good-natured rivalry of all the growers present and everybody wanted the recipe for the growing of them. The soil seems not to have much to do with the growing, because the plants were in all kinds of soil, from heavy, dark ground to light, yellow sand, and the quality was good everywhere.

In the entire trip there was nothing to mar the enjoyment of anybody.

Various Notes.

Harry Heint is putting in two new boilers.

The Scottwood greenhouses are entirely changed — new houses, new heating apparatus, new office.

Krueger Bros. finished a big new boiler house on their farm.

E. A. Kuhnke has repaired and moved the boilers and is at work putting up a brick smokestack. E. A. K.

BOSTON.

The Market.

We have had a week of dull and, for the most part, showery weather. Such conditions would have been most acceptable in June and July, but now growers and salesmen would like to see clearer skies. Business of late has been poor, on the whole. Saturdays are usually busy days, but September 9 saw trade at a low ebb. The autumn boom is certainly not under way as yet, but with a large part of the vacationists home from the shore and mountain the demand should soon show some improvement.

Asters are in overwhelming supply and dominate everything. Prices have had wide fluctuations. In one case a wagonload sold for $2, and $1 per thousand was no unusual price. The street vendors did a roaring business, selling bunches of twenty-five long-stemmed flowers for a nickel. Gladioli are still plentiful, but the demand is not what it ought to be. Roses are selling fairly well; in fact, they are doing better than any other flowers, but are not in heavy crop as yet. Carnations are short-stemmed and not especially plentiful. Some nice Pink Delight are seen. Lilies are in good supply, as is lily of the valley, but for neither is the demand robust. Orchid flowers continue rather scarce. In the way of outdoor flowers, cosmos, tuberose, dahlias, snapdragons, gypsophila, helianthus and kniphofias (tritomas) are seen. Business continues quiet in the green goods market.

Dahlia Exhibition.

The present season, with its long spell of hot, dry weather, has not been of the most favorable description for dahlias. Nevertheless, there was an excellent show of these popular fall flowers at the annual exhibition in Horticultural hall September 8, 9 and 10, and while the flowers were rather fewer in number than a year ago, the quality was uniformly high. W. D. Hathaway took first prize for twenty-four show varieties, twenty-four fancy, and twenty-four decorative. John K. Alexander had firsts for twenty-four cactus, twenty-four vases of pompons and twelve vases of singles. W. P. Lothrop led for twelve show and twelve cactus, Forbes & Keith for twelve peony-flowered and Mrs. I. A. Towle for twelve vases of pompons and the largest and best collection of named varieties.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had a fine display of Chinese and other lilies;

A Bayersdorfer Workroom.

also a grand table of cannas. Wm. Whitman, N. Sullivan, gardener, had a large display of seasonable flowers. Mrs. Frederick Ayer, Geo. Page, gardener, had a good group of ferns and crotons. Mrs. E. M. Gill had a nice general display. J. N. Flint received a certificate of merit for a seedling decorative dahlia, Dorothy Flint, and honorable mention for Hetta. Forbes & Keith secured a certificate of merit for a seedling cactus dahlia, Rosy Pink. Walter Hunnewell, T. D. Hatfield, gardener, received a first-class certificate for Laelio-Cattleya Goltoiana var. Wellesleyensis (C. Warneri x L. tenebrosa.)

George B. Gill showed seedling cactus dahlia, Mrs. E. M. Gill, awarded honorable mention. Mrs. F. Ayer received the same award for a specimen of Cibotium Schiedeii. B. Hammond Tracy had a superb collection of gladioli, tastefully arranged. These well merited the silver medal awarded. Gladiolus primulinus, a charming yellow species, received a certificate of merit.

There was an excellent display of fruit. The star feature of this department and, in fact, of the exhibition, was the magnificent display of hot-house grapes from Thomas E. Procter, James Marlborough, gardener, the finest lot ever staged in Boston, which received the highest award of the society, a gold medal. The same exhibitor had superb specimens of Sea Eagle, Thomas Rivers and other peaches, and fine trees in pots of plums, apples and pears heavily fruited.

Various Notes.

William H. Elliott is cutting some fine flowers of Christy Miller, a fine new rich pink rose. Mrs. Aaron Ward is now coming with splendid stems and Killarneys are excellent for September.

Henry R. Comley, among other good things, is showing plants of Allamanda Hendersonii, Campanula isophylla alba and passifloras. He has a nice display of choice aquatics and features the new rose, Christy Miller.

Don't forget the club meeting September 19, for which an excellent program has been arranged. The Vegetable Growers' Association of America opens its convention the same evening, also at Horticultural hall, and the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, after transacting necessary business, will probably join with them.

William R. Nicholson is cutting nice flowers of Chrysanthemum Smith's Advance and some extra good carnations.

Thomas Pegler will tell some of his European experiences at the club meeting September 19.

The Vegetable Growers' Association of America, the convention of which opens September 19, in Horticultural hall, is likely to bring a large attendance. The exhibition which the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will hold, in conjunction with the Boston Market Growers' Association, promises to be a noteworthy one.

Penn, on Bromfield street, reports good September business so far.

The Horticultural Club of Boston was organized at a recent meeting held in the Parker House. These officers were chosen: President, J. K. M. L. Farquhar; vice-president, F. R. Pierson; secretary, E. H. Wilson; treasurer, E. Allan Peirce.

The Flower Growers' Sales Co. is the name of a new combination which includes sixteen of the large growers for the Boston market. They control twenty-one stalls in the front part of the market of the Boston Flower Exchange. It is hoped that a system of coöperative selling will reduce expenses considerably. These officers have been chosen: President, E. A. Peirce; vice-president, L. J. Reuter; treasurer, Frank Edgar; directors, Wm. Sim, Thomas Roland, Charles Holbrau, B. Hammond Tracy, A. A. Pembroke, Wm. Jurgens, F. Dolansky, Frank P. Putnam, W. E. Lenk. Offices of the new organization are at 6 Province court.

Miss Gertrude Izette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Roy, of Marion, and William Edmund Hooke were married September 6.

Visitors the last few days have included Wm. Duckham, Madison, N. J.; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y., and W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.

W. N. Craig.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Trade has begun to look up a little of late, but it does not yet keep us on the jump as it will later. The great bulk of the trade among the retailers is in the line of funeral work; nothing else of any note is going on at present. For the funeral of the late democratic politician, Edward Butler, an immense lot of work was turned out, and all in the trade had at least one or two designs to put up.

White flowers of all kinds were plentiful, thanks to the large crop of asters. Cochet roses, light colored gladioli and tuberoses stalks cleaned up nicely all of last week. Roses and carnations have been coming in heavily of late and of fairly good quality. Lilies and valley met with a good demand all the week.

The weather was quite warm during the week and this, of course, had a bad effect on the transient trade.

Various Notes.

Charles Ford, representing A. Herrmann, New York city, called on the trade here last week.

Dave Geddes spent the last few days of his vacation in company with "Billy" Ossick, of Smith's, on a fishing trip, with pretty good luck—so they say.

Charles Schoenle and George Angermueller left September 11 on their postponed fishing trip, to last all the week.

Frank Windler, who was in Chicago last week attending the wedding of his brother, Robert, and Miss Zender, has returned home and is again at his post at Smith's wholesale house.

The members of the Ladies' Home Circle departed September 12 for Chautauqua, Ill., to hold their meeting in honor of Miss Matilda Meinhardt, their secretary, who has returned from a summer trip abroad. Hereafter the circle will hold regular monthly meetings, as usual.

Henry Young, formerly of the firm of C. Young & Sons Co., has opened a retail store at 4651 Maryland avenue. This will be the fifth opening of this store as a flower establishment, but the new firm, to be known as Henry Young & Son, will no doubt make it a success.

E. R. Methudy, of 5943 Easton avenue, reports that he will at once start preparations for the building of a greenhouse plant of 20,000 feet of glass in St. Louis county. He expects to visit Chicago greenhouse builders soon.

The following growers spent a day in this city last week: E. W. Guy and H. Emunds, of Belleville; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville; C. E. De Wever, Clayton; John Connon, Webster Groves; G. G. Edwards, W. J. Pilcher, Hugo Gross and A. G. Ahner, of Kirkwood.

The Shackelford Nursery Co. reports a large amount of orders for fall delivery in all kinds of nursery stock.

Alex. Johnson, out in Wellston, has just completed two new houses for carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Windler, who were married last week in Chicago, send greeting to their St. Louis friends from their honeymoon trip and say they will be at home to their friends after November 1, at 3444 Magnolia avenue, where Mr. Windler has furnished a handsome residence.

Andrew Frick, head of the growing department of the C. Young & Sons Co., shot and killed his wife and then killed himself last week. It is said that the recent hot weather deranged his mind. They had been married twenty-two years and leave five children to mourn their loss.

Park Commissioner Davis has as yet made few changes at any of the parks. John Stocke has been made keeper of Fairground park. It is said that Ernest Strehle will be retained as superintendent, and John Morris, for many years head of the greenhouses at Forest park, is also sure of his job. It would be difficult to find better men for these two positions.

A. J. Bentzen, of the Bentzen Floral Co., and Oscar Huettemann, manager of the Tower Floral Co., say they have had an exceedingly busy week with large funeral designs.

There is some talk going the rounds that two bowling teams will be organized, made up of employees of the four wholesale houses, and there is surely some good timber among them. The following names are mentioned in the make-up of the teams: George Schriefer, Art Meyer, Otto Bruning, Fred Alves, Paddy Patton, Frank Windler, Albert Gums, Will Ossick, William Mitthoefer, Oscar Kuehn and Harry Schlechter. Should the boys organize, the four bosses would hang up suitable prizes to be bowled for. J. J. B.

STAMFORD, CONN.

The regular meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held in the Royal Arcanum hall September 8, President Stuart in the chair. The exhibition committee reported on the final schedule for the fall show and has provided many classes for both the large and small growers, with substantial prizes for both. Three honorary and two active members were elected and eight propositions received.

The judges' report on exhibits awarded certificates of merit to P. N. Popp and A. Whitlaw for collections of dahlias. Carrillo & Baldwin received a vote of thanks for exhibiting a laelio-cattleya seedling. A display of apples by Alex. Geddes was highly commended. Mr. Popp gave an interesting talk on his experience in the culture of dahlias.

John M. Brown gave an account of his recent three months' trip through Great Britain.

M. C. Ebel, of Madison, N. J., was present and spoke of the coming convention of the National Gardeners' Association and the Morris County Horticultural Society's exhibition this fall.

J. B. M.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The cut flower trade was quiet last week, with nothing doing but funeral work, except for a slight flurry caused by the demand for baskets and bouquets for the members of the stock company at Keith's theater at the closing of the season Saturday night. As- ters and roses are plentiful and both have materially improved over a fortnight ago. A few dahlias are making their appearance, but in small numbers, and sweet peas, which market gardeners usually make a substantial side feature during the summer, are apparently a minus quantity this year.

Various Notes.

At the Rhode Island state fair at Hillsgrove last week the exhibits were practically furnished by Joshua Vose, of Pontiac; W. H. Tarbox, of East Greenwich; G. M. McNulty, of Greenwood; George H. Walker, of North Dighton, Mass., and W. D. Hathaway, of New Bedford, Mass., on asters and dahlias, and Daniel A. Clarke, of Fiskeville, on evergreen trees and shrubs.

A large sized model of a biplane, in the corner window of Macnair's new store at Broad and Chestnut streets, attracted much attention last week. The display of cut flowers and plants added to the attractiveness.

Nathan D. Pierce, of the Home Nursery, of Norwood, is in New York and Philadelphia for a couple of weeks, combining business with pleasure.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island will be held at the rooms of the association, 98 Westminster street, Monday evening, September 18.

William Taylor, of Lonsdale, is cutting a nice lot of asters of all the latest varieties, marketing an average of 2500 each day. He has his carnations all benched, including all the leading standard varieties.

Joseph Kopelman has just completed glazing his latest addition to his range of houses at Oaklawn. The interior of his sales store, 25 Washington street, has been completely renovated. New floors of hard wood, new frescoed ceiling and white enameled walls are among the numerous improvements. These, added to the new front, give one of the most attractive flower stores in Providence.

The Burke Rose Co. is showing some fine houses of roses, violets and chrysanthemums.

The John L. Hayes Co. is a new nursery firm that has started at 130 Summer street, Woonsocket. They are growers and importers of hardy ornamental trees, hardy flowering shrubs, evergreens, roses, bulbs, etc.

John Lee, of Lonsdale avenue, Central Falls, is showing a fine collection of dahlias.

F. Dietz, of French street, is building a new boiler house and a propagating house. A new greenhouse, 100 feet in length, is to be erected in the near future.

Albert Vanderbrook, formerly foreman of the Continental Nurseries, and now foreman for the Burr Nursery Co.,

of Manchester, Conn., is visiting relatives in the vicinity of Woonsocket.

The Westminster Greenhouse, Inc., of 1205 Westminster street, has started building a 30 x 35 foot addition to one of its greenhouses.

Wadley & Smythe, of Newport, report this season to have been one of the best in several years.

Lawrence Hay, of East Providence, is cutting some fine asters.

H. C. Neubrand, with W. S. Pino, is spending a few days with his brother at Tarrytown, N. Y.

A fine crop of summer blooming roses is being shown by William Hay, of Oaklawn. They find a ready sale at his wholesale store on Clements street.

Alfred T. Bunyard reports that his first season in Newport has exceeded all expectations.

Martin Ockert, who is now in charge of the Newell greenhouses at Attleboro, has made a satisfactory start and his benches are all looking well.

W. S. Pino, of Washington street, has returned from an automobile trip through southeastern Massachusetts.

Those interested in the establishment of a wholesale flower market report satisfactory progress during the last week. A store has been leased at 45 Washington street and arrangements are being made for the building of such stalls, etc., as may be necessary. Telephone connections and other details are being arranged for and the market will be opened October 2. Those who have already joined the new association include Macrae's Sons, John A. Macrae, Walter S. Nichols, Elmer E. King, Hoffman Bros., O. H. Williams, Burke Rose Co., J. A. Jansen, Albert A. Holscher, Joseph Kopelman and A. Cushing. John A. Macrae is president; Walter Macrae, vice-president; O. H. Williams, treasurer, and Elmer E. King, secretary.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

With the coming of September, trade took a lively spurt and a few large funerals and two weddings of note made last week a most busy one. Cool weather and a scarcity of garden flowers also helped business and prospects are bright for a good fall trade.

Roses are good now and are coming into the market in large quantities. Killarney is fine in color and Tafts are unusually good this week and bring a big price. Marylands are excellent and Richmonds also are good. White Killarney is in splendid condition, while Kaiserins are somewhat scarce, but of good quality. The Wards are still in great demand for all occasions.

Carnations are now coming in, but are taken up in advance of their arrival. The quality is good, considering the hot weather in August, but most of the stems are short. Sweet peas are gone completely, but asters are a drug on the market, although choice ones bring a good price. Gladioli are thinning out. Orchids and valley are in great demand, but are rather scarce.

The demand for flowering plants is good this fall and Boston ferns are also selling well.

Various Notes.

Jacob B. Wiese and Miss Rose Wiese, of Buffalo, spent Labor day here and inspected a few of the florists' stores, getting ideas for the new store which they will soon open at Franklin and Chippewa streets in their own city.

William Keller gave a clam bake to his employees on Labor day. A sumptuous repast was served, including clams in all styles, and all had a most enjoyable time.

A party of friends surprised Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Armbrust upon their first wedding anniversary, September 5, presenting them with a beautiful picture.

Keller has had some good wedding orders lately, notably the one for the Barry-Brewster affair, which kept the force busy for several days.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., is shipping some excellent dark pink Killarney into this market.

Miss Lillian Wheeler has returned from her vacation.

Walter Salmon, of Brighton, is growing some good Kaiserins.

The Rochester Florists' Association held its first regular monthly meeting Monday, September 11.

H. B. Weller, of Salter Bros., has returned from his vacation.

George Bennett made a trip to Toronto recently and visited the fair.

The death of Lewis Chase, president of Chase Bros. Co., is recorded in the obituary column on another page of this issue.

R. H. McKerr, of Canandaigua, N. Y., is putting up another greenhouse.

Visitors: M. Cohen, representing Wertheimer Bros., New York city; R. Karlstrom, representing W. A. Manda, of South Orange, N. J. E. C. A.

DES MOINES, IA.

A five-minute hail storm, which struck this city September 6, damaged property to the extent of about $5,000. The greenhouse losses alone amount to over $3,000. The storm was of unusual violence, with exceptionally large hail stones and a strong wind.

Foster Bros., proprietors of the former Lozier greenhouses, report that every piece of glass in the range was broken.

The Iowa Seed Co. said that its houses at Thirty-first street and Kingman boulevard were untouched, with no glass broken, and the same report came from J. S. Wilson's establishment at Thirty-fifth street and Ingersoll avenue.

Nearly one-third of the glass in the city's house at Union park was broken, and A. L. Bebing's range at Eighteenth and Walnut streets was badly damaged, about 6,000 feet of glass being destroyed.

BERNARDSVILLE, N. J.

At the flower show held here September 6 and 7, a splendid collection of plants staged by William Duckham, gardener to D. W. James, of Madison, was the envy and admiration of the craft, many of whom hope it will induce their employers to build the houses necessary to produce such stock. The plants of Dendrobium Sanderianum were superb and a great factor in securing the gold watch offered by Lord & Burnham as a prize.

William Elias, superintendent for M. P. Bliss, showed field corn with stalks sixteen feet long and ears that measured fourteen inches and were perfectly full.

The exhibits of cut flowers, fruits and vegetables were good and called for some close decisions by the judges.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Trade conditions have not improved any over what they have been for several months. In fact, from some points of view they are much worse, as during July and August there was no more good stock than was needed and there was not much concern about it if there was not much trade, but now the situation is entirely different, as the market is loaded with asters that are much larger and better than the early chrysanthemums are likely to be, and gladioli, roses and lilies are arriving in such quantities that it is simply impossible to unload them at any price. A few of the best take care of the trade and anything which is not first-class finds its way to the garbage can, as there is no price low enough to coax purchasers to buy in quantities and the lot of the wholesaler is not a happy one just now. Pittsburgh never received finer asters or more of them than are coming in just now and the shipper who is sending anything except first-class stock will be lucky to get express charges out of it.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met September 5 at the Fort Pitt hotel, with thirty-five members present, and there were some interesting talks on the flowers shown.

John W. Jones showed late branching asters and outdoor-grown snapdragons in crimson and yellow.

W. J. McFarland had a bunch of Nymphaea dahlias. Neil McCallum had a varied collection, embracing almost everything in tender and hardy flowers in bloom at this time.

There were two exhibits sent in which did not reach the meeting, as they were delivered to the hotel gardener, who locked them in the refrigerator and went home and forgot to put them in the room in which the club met. They belonged to the M. Crawford Co., Cuyahoga Falls, who sent the following gladioli: White Lady, Kunderd's Cream, New America, Jean, Princeps, Bonnie, Winifred, Helen Sill, Margaret and Glory. This collection was considered by those who saw it to contain all the colors that were necessary for commercial cut flowers.

Frank Banning, of Kinsman, O., sent his collection of varieties, which contained Panama, a deeper pink than America; Niagara, America, 1900, Klondyke, Augusta and a number of others, including a lot of what he called Panama bulbs; the boys called them the best cantaloupes they ever tasted. They were sent out among the club members the next day and the only regret was that all were not able to see the collection of flowers and partake of the fruit.

Various Notes.

Paul Randolph met with what might have been a serious accident when he was returning from his new greenhouse plant at Sandy Creek in his automobile. They were making some improvements along the road and in trying to avoid hitting an Italian, who crawled out of the ditch in front of him, he turned his machine to one side and went over an embankment. The machine turned turtle, but Mr. Randolph escaped with a bad shaking up.

The florists who are growing fruits will be interested in a free public demonstration of modern methods of caring for fruit trees. The work of the summer will be reviewed for the benefit of those interested by State Economic Zoölogist H. A. Surface, field demonstration at farms of A. B. Gilfillan, Bridgeville, Pa., R. No. 1, September 18; at farm of Fred Reiber, Butler, September 20, and at farm of Dr. John J. Allen, Monaca, Pa., September 23.

Frank Faulk and family have just returned from an automobile trip to Erie, Buffalo, Cleveland and Niagara Falls, touching at Chautauqua and Conneaut Lake. Except that they were storm-stayed for five or six days at Cambridge Springs, they had a most delightful trip, covering 738 miles and getting home without so much as a puncture. Hoo-Hoo.

The McCallum Co. announces that it will open a wholesale cut flower and supply house September 30 at 341 High avenue, Cleveland. W. Q. Potter, vice-president of the company, will go to Cleveland to act as manager.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade is beginning to liven up a little, but the weather continues warm, with an occasional rain. Carnations have improved wonderfully in the last ten days. Bride and Maid are still small, but Beauties and Killarney are good stock. Asters are more plentiful and some unusually good stock is to be had.

State Fair.

The classes in the floral department, at the state fair, were well filled this year. As usual, the space was inadequate. Following is the list of awards:

Potted plants, Roepke-Rieman Co., first; Pahud Floral Co., second.
 Ten ferns, Roepke-Rieman Co., first; Reinken Floral Co., second; Pahud Floral Co., third.

Fifty scarlet carnations, Roepke-Rieman Co., first; Reinken Floral Co., second; Pahud Floral Co., third.

Twelve yellow chrysanthemums, Roepke-Rieman Co., first.

Display of dahlias, E. T. Barnes, first; Pahud Floral Co., second.

Various Notes.

Alfred Brandt has been advertising a sale of Boston ferns this week. He offered $2 ferns for $1.15.

Alfred Pahud has announced the engagement of his daughter, Louise, and Otto Ashberger. The wedding is to take place October 18.

E. T. Barnes, of Spencer, was in the city this week, being an exhibitor at the state fair. Mr. Barnes is president of the Western Gladiolus and Dahlia Society, which is to have a dahlia show here the latter part of this month.

George Gause, of Richmond, was in the city Thursday, having entered in the best floral arrangement class at the state fair. Mr. Gause exhibited a floral lyre, a tasteful piece of work, and received the second prize for it.

Smiling Frank Farney spent a day with the trade this week.

The Roepke-Rieman Co. and the Pahud Floral Co. got their share of the premiums awarded at the state fair this year.

John Rieman, who usually gets the lion's share of the premiums at the state fair, did not exhibit this year.

Carl Brough, with the Dayton Paper Novelty Co., was a caller this week.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade has improved somewhat since last writing. Quite a lot of good stock is coming in. Roses are improving right along. Mrs. A. Ward is more plentiful and, from all appearances, it is likely to be a good seller; it seems to fill a long-felt want in the way of color, as a great many buyers of it speak of the beautiful autumn colors combined in it. Brides and Maids are better and there is some fancy stock of these to be seen now. The call for Beauties is rather light and a limited quantity is to be seen. Carnations are improving right along. As yet, there is not a great deal of anything but white and Enchantress, but the quality improves from day to day and the demand is about equal to the supply. Some first-class asters are coming in and the better grades sell well, while the poor stock goes begging. Gladioli are still plentiful, but the quality is not as good as a few weeks ago. There has been a good supply of lilies, both Easter and rubrum, and they move well. Funeral work last week used up a good deal of stock, especially in the shorter grades of asters and carnations. Quite a few ferns have been sold in the last week or so and the indications are that there will be a heavy demand for them about the time the plants are taken into the houses.

Various Notes.

E. Metzmaier reports business improving right along.

Sherman Stephens says he has enough funeral-work to keep his force quite busy.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. says business is picking up now and stock is coming on in good shape.

R. A. Currie, president of the Florists' Club, returned from the lakes with some big fish stories. J. M.

Flower Show at State Fair.

The Ohio state fair opened here August 28 and continued through September 1. Heretofore, except by the Livingston Seed Co., little interest has been taken in the floricultural classes. This year it was a pleasure to note the appearance of Sherman F. Stephens, of this city, and August Schneider, of Springfield, O. Charles Jordan, of Wauseon, O., proved himself a most competent judge, his decisions being favorably received by the competitors.

The chief feature was a dining table decoration, which S. F. Stephens won, with a beautiful combination of My Maryland roses and valley. The Livingston Seed Co. was second, using a centerpiece of Mrs. Taft roses and delphiniums. Miss Rachel Smith, of Trinway, O., was third with a neat design of a lake for a centerpiece. Mr. Schneider's flowers being lost in transit, he was prevented from competing in this class.

The designs, bouquets and vases proved quite an attraction on Thursday. The Livingston Seed Co. took first premium on a pair of bouquets of Richmond and Killarney roses. S. F. Stephens ran a close second with a pair of much larger bouquets of lavender and white asters.

S. F. Stephens took first premium on a large funeral design, exhibiting a wreath on an easel; Livingston Seed Co., second. The first premium for a large festival design was won by S. F. Stephens with an appropriate design, a cornucopia or horn of plenty; Livingston Seed Co., second. S. F. Stephens took first premium on collection of five small funeral designs, with Livingston Seed Co. coming in second. The first premium on vase of American Beauties was awarded to Livingston Seed Co. First premium on display of twenty-five varieties of cut flowers was awarded to S. F. Stephens; Livingston Seed Co., second. Vase of flowers not over twelve inches high, Livingston Seed Co., first; S. F. Stephens, second.

Competition was keen in the plant classes. Perhaps the most notable exhibit was a fine specimen of Cycas revoluta, 40 years old, shown by S. F. Stephens, in whose houses it has been for thirty-six years. The plant awards were as follows:

Single specimen palm, S. F. Stephens, first; Livingston Seed Co., second.

Collection of stove and greenhouse plants, not less than fifty, S. F. Stephens, first; Livingston Seed Co., second.

Collection of cannas in bloom, S. F. Stephens, first; Livingston Seed Co., second.

Collection of palms, Livingston Seed Co., first; S. F. Stephens, second.

Porch box filled with plants, S. F. Stephens, first; Livingston Seed Co., second.

Pair hanging baskets, Livingston Seed Co., first; S. F. Stephens, second.

Basket of plants, S. F. Stephens, first; Livingston Seed Co., second.

Vase of plants, Livingston Seed Co., first; S. F. Stephens, second.

The few remaining classes were awarded to the Livingston Seed Co., there being no competition, as S. F. Stephens did not enter in these classes. The Livingston Seed Co. also won first premiums on collections of roses, carnations, asters and gladioli, without competition, except on roses by Mr. Schneider, who took a close second.

OBITUARY.

Lewis Chase.

Lewis Chase, head of the firm of Chase Bros. Co., the Rochester nurserymen, died at his home, 4 Winthrop street, Rochester, September 5. He was born January 22, 1830, at Chase Mills, Me. He began the nursery business in Maine in 1857, with two brothers, Ethan A. and Martin Van B. Chase, and in 1868 he and his brother Ethan removed to Rochester, leaving Martin in charge of the Maine establishment.

The two brothers were pioneers in the establishment of nurseries in Rochester, along with Patrick Barry and George Ellwanger, the original members of the firm of Ellwanger & Barry. In 1878 Martin Chase retired from business, leaving the affairs of the firm to the management of his two brothers, who soon took out a certificate of incorporation under the firm name of Chase Bros. Co. At the time of the incorporation Lewis Chase was elected president of the company, which office he retained until his death. In 1895 Ethan Chase sold his interest in the firm and moved to California, leaving his brother, Lewis, as the only original member of the firm.

September 6, 1855, at Sidney, Me., Mr. Chase married Edwina G. Dyer, who died May 5 of this year. Five children, two of whom died in infancy, were born to them. There are still living three children, Charles H. Chase, Mrs. William Pitkin and Mrs. Arthur H. Dudley, all of Rochester; ten grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Mr. Chase was a member of the American Pomological Society and several other trade organizations.

Louis Nadig.

Louis Nadig, a florist employed by Harry White at North Manchester, Ind., died quite suddenly September 4, following an attack of Bright's disease. He was about 44 years of age and a native of Switzerland. Nothing is known of his family or friends, and the remains were interred in a cemetery plot by a fellow countryman at North Manchester. That relatives exist in Switzerland is known, because Mr. Nadig had expected to receive moneys from there with which he intended to buy greenhouses at Tipton, Ind., and go into business for himself. For a short time prior to his recent engagement by Mr. White, Mr. Nadig had been employed by Wm. Dittman at New Castle, Ind.

John Leavy.

John Leavy, of Greeley, Colo., died September 1, aged 80 years. He was one of the founders of Greeley and was closely identified with all public interests. He was a florist and three days after his arrival here, in 1870, had selected his ground and was busy turning the sod to plant it to trees, shrubs and flowers.

Born in Ireland, in 1831, his parents intended he should be a priest. He entered Trinity college and was an almost daily visitor at the Botanical Gardens in London and there decided to become a botanist.

He and his sister emigrated in the early sixties. He located in New York and finally went into the florists' business in New Jersey. In 1868 he became interested in a colony to be founded at the foot of the Rocky mountains, and after his removal to Greeley he became an expert in the botany of Colorado and to him belongs the distinction of having never failed in the identification of a plant in the Rocky mountain region.

In his later years Mr. Leavy often lectured before the State Normal school on the flora of the region. He was one of the prime movers in getting for Colorado its agricultural college and some of the most valuable agricultural data our government has distributed from the department at Washington are a product of his life's labor.

About a month ago friends persuaded him to go to a hospital for care, but old age claimed him as a victim.

Mr. Leavy is survived by three children, one son and two daughters.

TERRE HAUTE, IND.

Dr. Edward Reiss, of the Terre Haute Rose & Carnation Co., returned last week from a two weeks' vacation in British Columbia. While en route home, his wife was unfortunate enough to lose a bag containing about $2,000 worth of diamonds, which somewhat detracted from what was otherwise an enjoyable trip.

Paul Halbrooks, of Columbus, O., who motored to his old home in Evansville, Ind., stopped off a few hours here to visit the trade.

The newly organized Terre Haute Florists' Club gave its first annual picnic to the employees and their families August 29. It was held at Forest park, a beautiful natural spot six miles from the city, and as every establishment closed at noon, there was a good attendance, sixty-five persons being lined up at the feast, which took place immediately after the ball game was over. The ball game was fast and furious, with a score something like 67 to 59, but the official records failed to show which side won, so it was decided to play it off next year.

Robert D. Heintz, Washington correspondent of Leslie's Weekly, stopped off for a day to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Heintz. Mr. Heintz was on his way to Alaska, where he was sent with Secretary Fisher, of the Interior Department, to get a first-hand insight into the Alaskan troubles.

Leonard H. Mahan, one of the largest lettuce growers in the state, tried growing asters last year as a summer crop in his empty houses, with such good success that this season he planted five houses, each 25x150, with them, and by having the different varieties he can have asters galore all summer. He uses the large sized ribbed skylight glass on all his houses and states that there is no breakage, that the stock never burns and never has to be shaded.

Otto Heintz, of West Terre Haute, sold his greenhouses to a former employee, Tom Stephenson, and will leave October 1 for Oregon, where he has purchased a fruit farm.

Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Stover have returned from a visit with relatives in northern Indiana.

Miss Duenweg, designer at Fred Heintz's, is on her vacation, visiting Cincinnati and Louisville.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Officers for 1912: President, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; vice-president, August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; secretary, John Young, Bedford Hills, N. Y.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.
Annual convention, Chicago, Ill., August 20 to 23, 1912.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

It is poor economy to save coal at the expense of a buoyant atmosphere in the greenhouses. Give the plants air.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THE sixteenth annual flower show of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society will be held at Madison, N. J., October 26 and 27. A schedule may be had by addressing Edward Reagan, secretary.

THIS is fair season, and in many state and county exhibitions the florists are taking a more conspicuous part than heretofore. It is good advertising and usually reaches a class of people not to be got in touch with by the usual means.

RUSCUS has been sold in great quantities this season and promises to be the popular Christmas specialty—but it comes from Italy, where the cholera is disorganizing business, especially shipping, and no one knows what the supply will be.

PREPARATIONS for the S. A. F. convention of 1912, which is expected to break all records, were begun September 7, when, at a well attended meeting, the Chicago Florists' Club voted authority to President H. E. Philpott to organize a full list of committees to carry on the work.

THE WESTERN SOCIETY.

The Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Society will hold its adjourned meeting at Wiegand's conservatories, 1610 North Illinois street, Indianapolis, Ind., September 26. All growers are invited to attend and exhibit.

E. T. Barnes, President.

GLADIOLUS TOPICS.

I have just returned from a most enjoyable trip through Massachusetts to the gladiolus farm of L. Merton Gage, of Orange, the secretary of the American Gladiolus Society. Among his extensive collection are many seedlings worthy of perpetuating, of his own raising, also many of the latest European novelties, and a large block of Mrs. Frank Pendleton, Jr., the exquisite pink which received the society's certificate of merit at Baltimore.

I noticed this year among my seedlings one which has creamy-white variegated foliage. A broad white stripe runs through each leaf and up through each flower sheath. The flower is cerise scarlet, of good form and size and six open at once on the spike. It is also a vigorous appearing plant.

As this is a novelty to me I thought perhaps it might be of interest and would like to know if anything of the sort has ever appeared in other collections.

H. E. Meader.

EXPRESS RATES REDUCED.

A general reduction in express rates applying to all shipments within the state and ranging from ten to twenty-five per cent was ordered last week by the Illinois Railroad and Warehouse Commission, to take effect October 1. The reductions, which have been sought by the Chicago commercial interests for several years, were promulgated by the commission in Express Tariff No. 2, prescribing reasonable maximum rates for the state, in which every change is a reduction.

The tariff prescribes a new schedule of rates per 100 pounds, according to distance, and also a new system of graduate scales, applying on shipments of less than 100 pounds weight, comprising the great bulk of the express business. The most important single reduction is in the rate for 100-pound shipments for distances up to thirty miles, which is placed at 40 cents. The express companies have been charging 50 cents. This covers the Chicago suburban district. The reductions in the graduate scales, however, cover practically all kinds of shipments.

Although there have been threats of a new legal contest by the express companies, several have advised the commission that they are willing to give the new rates a trial.

The schedule of merchandise 100 pound rates ranges from 40 cents for thirty miles or less up to $2 for 500 miles. Between thirty and sixty miles the rate is 50 cents and between ninety and 120 miles it is 60 cents. These rates are not comparable with the present charges because the rates are not now consistently based on distance.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There has been more or less improvement since last report, but it has been what the Irishman described as "steady by jerks." Some days there would be a run of telegraph orders that would make the day look like the real opening of the busy season, but after the spurt the market would relapse to the quiet conditions which have prevailed for some weeks. The aster continues to be the obstacle to a brisk demand in other lines. The expected shortening of supplies in the aster department has not occurred, though the approach of the end of the season is apparent in the condition of some of the stock now coming in. There continue to be more high grade asters than there is any demand for, and there are quantities of the lower grades for which there is no possibility of satisfactory sale. The weather is so fine that the aster growers find everything in their favor except the condition of the market.

The increase which has been noted in the demand has largely been for Beauties, the better grades of Killarneys, and for chrysanthemums. Some of the city stores that handle Beauties in quantity are again doing a fair amount of business and the shipping orders are largely running to roses. Apparently the out-of-town buyers have all the asters that they can use on their cheaper work and they also appear to have as many short roses as are needed. The rose supply here continues good. Killarney and White Killarney are the leaders, of course. But

HERE'S WHERE YOU GET BEAUTIES

Fine Quality—All Lengths—Any Quantity

Our cut of Beauties is large and extra fine—the quantity is so good that we can fill the largest orders at a moment's notice. Really no limit to our supply. Most of the cut runs to medium and long stems. Large heads, splendid color, strong stems, perfect foliage. Those who are looking for a thoroughly satisfactory supply of Beauties should get acquainted here.

KILLARNEYS

PINK OR WHITE—LARGE SUPPLY.

We are furnishing buyers all the Killarneys they need, in any length up to 18 to 24 inches. The color of the pink is something wonderful. These roses are business-builders. Once tried, you will use no others.

Fancy Asters

An Unlimited Supply.

The late Asters are extra good and our supply continues large. We urge all buyers who can use good Asters in quantity to give this stock a trial. The supply will last as long as weather conditions continue favorable for plants in the open—and the quality, you will say, is above any other Asters of the year.

Fancy Valley

You will need Valley every day, now that the season is opening again. We ALWAYS can supply, but why not place a standing order, for shipment (with the other stock you need) every day, every other day, or twice a week?

Carnations

The new crop of indoor Carnations is on. Nice, clean flowers and stems lengthening every day.

Lilies

We can supply all the Easter Lilies you can use. Try us any day in the year.

HEADQUARTERS FOR ALL GREENS

Here you get the best Fancy Ferns, all the Smilax and Asparagus strings you want, Sprengeri and Plumosus bunches, Mexican Ivy and Galax. No order too large for our facilities and no order too small to receive our careful attention.

WE HAVE FOR THIS WEEK

A Large Crop of Fancy Beauties

With our big range of new houses we are cutting a large quantity of fine stock and are in position to make a strong bid for the patronage of out-of-town buyers who want good stock at "live and let live prices."

RICHMOND

A large cut now on; quality as good as the best.

KILLARNEYS

Steady supply; pink and white; give us a chance to show you.

VALLEY

This will be one of our specialties; always can supply.

We shall have a good supply of CARNATIONS all through the season. A full line of all other Cut Flowers and Green Goods.

there are fair cuts of Bride with those growers who still have this variety and it is selling rather better than either White Killarney, or Kaiserin. Richmond is in good crop and the stock is of excellent quality, but the demand is not strong. The buyers, like Mrs. Aaron Ward and Prince de Bulgarie. Of these more could be sold. There are excellent Perle.

Carnations are coming in more numerous than heretofore. Considerable quantities are being picked from the plants in the field and an increasing number of growers are picking from the new plants in the houses. The weather has been so favorable that the outdoor stock is excellent of its kind and the pick from the houses is first-class for so early in the season. All colors now are available with good length of stem. The sale is not brisk and will not be until the aster crop is disposed of.

In the last week or two there has been a brisk demand for the better grade of Golden Glow chrysanthemums and now a few white mums are appearing, the variety being Smith's Advance. The growers have been so put to it to supply the yellow that they have been cutting before the flowers were finished. At the same time there has been low grade Golden Glow which it has been almost impossible to sell. Those who want early mums want them good.

Gladioli still are available in all colors, but they have been relegated to a place of minor importance. A few dahlias are coming, but this flower never has had much importance in this market. Tuberoses are not in heavy supply, but are selling well enough so that the price has advanced slightly. There is rather more valley than the present demand calls for. Orchids have been in strong request, but now labiata is beginning to come in considerable quantity and heavy supplies with moderate prices are predicted for no distant day. Oncidiums already are abundant.

There is no change in green goods, though smilax is a little firmer in price, as the autumn demand is beginning to make itself felt. Orders for wild smilax are beginning to come in, but this article is not yet carried in stock.

Club Meeting.

There was a large attendance at the meeting September 7 and much enthusiasm over the acceptance, by the S. A. F., of the Florists' Club's invitation to hold the 1912 convention in Chicago. George Asmus reported on Express Rates Go Down.

Hundreds of growers for the Chicago market will save money through the reduction in express rates ordered by the Illinois Railroad and Warehouse Commission. Beginning October 1, the rate for 100 pounds must not exceed 40 cents for thirty miles. The growers are now paying 50 cents. The reduction, amounting to twenty per cent, puts the rate back where it was prior to the advance made about three years ago. The saving will amount in the aggregate to thousands of dollars per year.

It appears that the firm knew nothing of the accident said to have occurred two years ago, until action was brought by a contingent-fee lawyer, the plaintiff alleging that he broke two ribs through a fall in the defendant's barn. The insurance company will have to settle in case the employee can prove his case.

SOUTHINGTON, CONN.

The Market.

Business seems to be good, considering the season of the year. Many people are on vacations. Since the rain the florists have been overstocked with flowers. Outdoor stock continues to be plentiful, such as asters, gladioli and sweet peas. Carnations are scarce and short-stemmed. Hydrangeas are beginning to make their appearance. The long looked-for rain arrived last week.

Various Notes.

Olson & Lunden have five houses of carnations and mums. The firm is looking forward to a good business this coming season.

William Fischer, of the Buckland greenhouses, has about completed his two new houses and will start to erect another house before fall.

Earl S. Bavier, of Marion, was a business caller in Plantsville last week.

The Market.

There is an abundance of stock in nearly all lines and an over abundance of asters and white roses. Tuesday morning, September 5, after a half holiday Labor day, the trade was brisk, both as to local and shipping orders, and stock cleaned up nicely. The balance of the week, however, saw a falling off in sales and an increase in the supply of stock.

The Chamber of Industry's west side exposition came to and end September 9, after a successful week. Knobles kept a table decoration going all through the week, changing the color scheme each day. Saturday, the closing day, lavender scabiosa was used, with Shasta daisies, larkspurs and maidenhair, making one of the daintiest tables of the week.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Business is only fair. The supply of cut flowers is increasing faster than the demand, a condition most unfavorable to marketing all the receipts. Dahlias are the leading flower. They are fine, showing a distinct advance in culture, in selection and in management. The heavy rains also have played an important part in their improvement. The wholesalers are sparing no effort to popularize the dahlia. It is certainly deserving, for with no other flower are such values obtainable. Asters evidently are waning. They are plentiful, and many of them are good, but the fancies are not often seen and there are distinctly less of them than a week ago. Gladioli are no longer an important factor. They are still seen, but rarely in quantity. There is a small, steady supply of Golden Glow chrysanthemums. With such fine dahlias in the market, they are not much sought. Cattleya labiata has arrived. The price is falling; $9 per dozen last week has been succeeded by $7.50 and $7.20 per dozen this week; better say 60 cents each. Carnations are improving. Alma Ward has advanced to the top of the list at $3 per hundred. Most of the stock in other varieties is short in stem.

There are lots of roses, but not a whole lot of good ones yet. The best sell fairly well. The difficulty comes with the lower grades. Easter lilies are good stock. Wild smilax has arrived. Shipping is rather light.

Various Notes.

W. F. LaCroix has added one glass house, 28x75, to his lilac forcing plant at Buena, N. J. The term "glass house" is used advisedly. Review readers will remember that the lilac forcing houses are wooden-roofed, with an occasional sash. This is the first greenhouse built for lilac forcing at Buena. It is Lord & Burnham pattern.

The Henry F. Michell Co. made a stunning exhibit at the Farmers' Picnic and Montgomery County Fair last week.

A wonderful fruit arch of colossal proportions was a feature of the Mont-

The Market.

Last week was a quiet one, funeral work forming the main outlet for the cut flowers. Some of the florists are kept busy with outdoor work on lawns, hedges, etc. Asters around here have not done well, on account of the dry season. Rain has been needed badly. Carnations of the new crop are becoming more plentiful and the quality is improving. The florists are looking forward to a good business in the coming winter.

Various Notes.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

August this year was not unlike the same month in previous seasons. It was the same old weather, the same old complaint, "nothin' doin' much," while the same farmers and market gardeners brought in their home-grown asters, etc., by the tubfuls and sold them for the same small price, their efforts nearly killing business for the professional growers and retailers. Business checked up fairly well, however, with previous records, and there was enough to pay running expenses, and in most cases a trifle more.

September started in with a continuation of the August conditions, but a slight improvement was noticed last week, as the funeral orders came in a little more briskly. Carnations of the new planting are cropping quite abundantly at present, the supply far exceeding the demand, while the quality is exceptionally good. Beauties, too, are in a flourishing condition and fine in quality, the demand for them being fairly good. Other varieties of roses, while not cropping heavily at present, are sufficient to meet all demands. There seem to be just enough giganteums in the market to satisfy the wants of the trade, while Melpomene, rubrum and album are in heavy supply; nevertheless, the demand keeps up well on them. Asters are commencing to slack up, while a few Golden Glow

Various Notes.

After being delayed eleven days on account of the great labor strike in London and Liverpool, Mr. and Mrs. George Bartholomew, who sailed for Great Britain July 17, returned home September 6. They report a most interesting and enjoyable trip, but, after all, could not help confessing that they were glad to get back under the stars and stripes. While in England they traveled extensively, seeing many interesting sights. In London, Mr. Bartholomew saw fine carnations, nearly as good as the American carnation in the winter, which were sold on the street for the large sum of one English penny.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston June 1912.

NURSERYMEN will be interested in the notes on European crop conditions on page 54 of this issue.

THE death of Lewis Chase, head of the Rochester nursery firm, Chase Bros. Co., is reported in this week's obituary column.

THE Wagner Park Nursery Co. has been incorporated at Sidney, O., with a capital stock of $100,000, by B. P. Wagner and others.

B. E. GAGE, of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, is making a trip to Omaha, Minneapolis and Duluth in the interest of the landscape department. A new catalogue printed by the Morse people will be out in a few days.

TEXAS NURSERYMEN MEET.

The Texas Nurserymen's Association held its eleventh annual convention at Waco, Tex., September 12 and 13. Following was the program:

Tuesday, September 12, 2 P. M.

Call to order by president.
Invocation, Dr. F. C. McConnell, Waco.
Address of welcome, M. Falkner, Waco, Texas.
Response, M. G. Black, Mt. Pleasant, Texas.
President's annual address.
Report of secretary-treasurer.
Payment of annual dues, certificates of membership.

Appointment of committees.
Adjournment until 8:30 p. m.

8:30 P. M.

Question box.

1. Who are entitled to wholesale trade lists?
2. After two years' test, what is our experience on the replace situation?
3. Eliminating the wholesale purchaser who never pays—how can it be done?
4. Taxation on growing nursery stock.
5. Propagation of apple—are import seedlings superior to home-grown?
6. What is a fair and reasonable cash advance to commission salesmen or dealers?
7. State inspection law.
8. Should we not discourage extravagant statements of land promoters, especially as it pertains to orange and pecan culture in the state?

BORERS ON NORWAY MAPLES.

Enclosed you will find a worm which destroyed all my last fall's planting of Norway maples, boring holes right through the stems. Can you tell me of some means of getting rid of this pest?
W. S. R.

This is one of the borers which attack shade and fruit trees. It is not an easy pest to fight. I would advise that the land where the trees were attacked be well limed this fall. Plow in the lime at the rate of 3,000 pounds per acre and leave it rough over winter. Borers, when once they have appeared, are not easily controlled. Watch for their appearance and dig them out whenever possible with a narrow pointed penknife, wire nail or piece of galvanized wire. If you can not reach them, inject a little carbon bisulphide in the hole and plug the hole at once with putty. The fumes of the carbon will suffocate the borers. This is a somewhat tedious operation, but spraying is of no value, as it is in the case of leaf or bark insects. C. W.

PACIFIC COAST.

San Francisco, Cal.—Emile Serveau, for twenty-five years a florist in this city, and formerly associated in business with his brother, Charles E. Serveau, is now the sole proprietor of the two large stores and of the nurseries conducted in his name. The old Serveau stand at 2112 Fillmore street, where the business was carried on for a quarter of a century, is under the personal direction of Emile Serveau, and the new shop at 128 Post street also is under his management. The nurseries formerly were under the direction of Charles Serveau, but he no longer has connection with any branch of the business.

ABERDEEN, WASH.

The leading social event of the season here was the flower show held under the auspices of the Civic Improvement Association, Saturday afternoon and evening, September 2. A large storeroom at the corner of H and Wishak streets was used for the purpose and was tastefully decorated by the ladies of the association.

The best exhibit in the professional class was made by the Cramatte Floral Co. The entire side window was used, showing the many different styles of designs, and mantel and table decorations put out by this up-to-date firm. The entire exhibits were sold at auction to the highest bidder, with the excep-

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

With the passing of August, business has taken a decided change for the better. The amount of calls for bridal bouquets is equivalent to that in June. Funeral work, also, is picking up. The chief source of worry is the difficulty in securing sufficient flowers to cover the demand. Several days of severe rain storms have practically put all outside stock out of commission. Several shipping points were not affected by the rain, however, and these are the only source of supply for asters. Sweet peas are about exhausted. Indoor stock is also scarce. Carnations are a rarity, which will be the condition for several weeks to come. Roses are far short of the demand. Out at the greenhouses, carnations and roses are making rapid headway and in a few weeks new stock will be coming in. Violets have made their appearance, but it will be several

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Although business is not at all brisk, it shows an upward tendency, which is gratifying to the not overworked florist. There has been quite a bit of funeral work, as well as a fair amount of wedding and other propositions that have used up a lot of stock. We are having a few days of warm weather, which is quite a treat, and the sun actually shows for a few hours daily. Flowers of all kinds are cheap and, with the exception of roses, there is an abundance of everything. Asters are just a little past their prime and we may expect an avalanche of them in a few days. Carnations are not in abundant supply yet and are not as long-stemmed as we should like, but, considering the quantities of other stock on hand, it does not matter much. Valley and lilies of all kinds are in good quantity and move well. Other kinds of Harvesting Seed Crops on One of the Farms of Waldo Rohnert, Gilroy, Cal.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First Vice-Pres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE radish crop in Holland has turned out well. The seed was ripe earlier than ever before.

EUROPEAN seed growers, who had light crops of carrot this season, see in soil conditions a menace to the crop of 1912.

THE boat from Bermuda that arrived at New York, September 5, brought only thirty-five cases of lily bulbs, consigned to L. D. Crossmond & Co.

THE Brown Seed Store, of New Albany, Ind., has been succeeded by the New Albany Supply Co. John Zahnd has secured an interest in the business and will act as manager.

THE long rain has seriously damaged the tomato crop in Maryland, but is Indiana and other western tomato centers the crop is good. Cannerymen in Maryland fear they cannot fill contracts.

THE government crop report as of September 1 was not an inspiring document. It indicates that the corn crop will fall short of last year's by 390,000,000 bushels, the oat crop by 24,000,000 bushels and the wheat crop by 28,000,000 bushels.

W. ATLEE BURPEE has returned to Philadelphia after his European trip and is now engaged in the attempt to form some idea of the value of sweet peas for the advance list that goes out at this date. This is unusually difficult this year, as from the lateness of the season some of the crops are not yet even cut, let alone being threshed.

MAURICE FULD, of Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, commenting on flower seed crop conditions, predicts a scarcity of certain seeds next season. The hot weather and drought have been general in the seed producing districts of this country and Europe. Asters, Mr. Fuld thinks, have suffered so severely that a shortage in the crop of seed seems certain.

CORRECTION

In the view of our Farm, appearing in our double page advertisement in The Review, issue of August 31, at the bottom of the page, looking west, showing beyond the line of Sunflowers, is a part of the Farm occupied by the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co., as a seed farm, and comprising 320 acres. This firm are tenants of C. C. Morse & Co., and will be until the fall of 1912.

To the right of this picture, about two miles, but not showing, is another seed farm occupied by us, 430 acres, known as the Breen place. Still further north, about fourteen miles, are our Gilroy Farms, occupying about 640 acres of seed. Of course one view could not include the various different farms.

The accompanying picture is a reproduction of a photo engraving used by C. C. Morse & Co. in their advertisement which appeared in the August 31 issue of the Florists' Review. The picture and wording of the advertisement might convey the idea that this entire picture is a part of 900 acres grown to seeds by them in one tract. This is not the fact, as our seed ranch of 320 acres, most of which appears in the picture used by them, is a part of the 900 acre farm referred to by them in their advertisement. The buildings and the immediate foreground of the engraving are part of the C. C. Morse & Co. ranch. Everything in the rear of the long row of sunflower which crosses the picture from right to left are the Crops of the Pieters-Wheeler Seed Company, about 320 acres.

We are taking this opportunity of notifying the trade of the facts in the case. We are still growing seeds on the same tract of land, which our Company, and its predecessor, has occupied for about 5 years. We will again grow seeds on the same tract for 1912, and have just secured another 300 acre tract near Hollister.

We have recently installed new machinery in our Cleaning House, including an Air Compressor for thoroughly cleaning the mills between each run of seeds. We are the first and only California Seed Growers to introduce this additional precautionary device. All our seeds are grown from selected stocks, carefully Rogued and Cleaned and high grade in quality.

We will have some surplus Onion, Lettuce, Radish and Sweet Peas which we will be glad to quote to Seedsmen interested.

Prices for growing crop 1912 will be promptly named on request for same.

Winter-Flowering Sweet Pea Seed

Bound Brook, New Jersey

Boddington's Quality Christmas and Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas

ALL true stocks of Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas will be scarce this season; some varieties are a total failure, owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. We can make immediate delivery of all the undermentioned varieties. Our advice to intending planters is to order early.

Our stocks of Christmas-Flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasingly popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period, and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" and include Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed from selected stocks by the leading California Growers and Specialists of Sweet Peas. Our output last year was nearly 6000 lbs. No kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

WINTER FLOWERING SWEET PEAS AT NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW, BOSTON, MARCH 25th TO APRIL 1st, 1911.

— Partly showing Mr. Wm. Sim's Exhibit, which won the majority of the leading prizes—seed almost exclusively supplied by "Boddington." Sim's Sweet Peas were one of the sensational Exhibits at this Grand Flower Show —average length of stem being twenty inches.

Boddington's Quality Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas

At the Exhibition and Convention of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, July 12th and 13th, 1910, we again won the C. C. Morse & Co.'s Silver Cup for the finest and best collection of Sweet Peas open to the trade only.

- BODDINGTON'S EXTRA EARLY CHRISTMAS WHITE SNOWBIRD. An exceptionally early Sweet Pea for indoor flowering—will bloom six weeks after sowing. Color clear white, upon long stems; habit fairly dwarf and of exceptionally free-flowering qualities. Without doubt, the finest early white for indoor planting. We sell one grower in Pennsylvania 35 lbs. of this variety every year, name on application. Oz. 30 cts., ¼ lb. 85 cts., ½ lb. $1.50, lb. $2.50.
- BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS PINK. This is the earliest and most profitable and useful Sweet Pea in cultivation, as by sowing the seed under glass in latter part of August, flowers can be cut from Thanksgiving on during the Winter months. Oz. 25 cts., ¼ lb. 75 cts., ½ lb. $1.25, lb. $2.00.
- BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS WHITE. A companion to our Christmas Pink. Just as free and profuse a bloomer. Oz. 15 cts., ¼ lb. 50 cts., ½ lb. 85 cts., lb. $1.50.

- BODDINGTON'S CANARY. Similar to the above, but flowers of an exceptionally good yellow. Oz. 35 cts., ¼ lb. $1.00, ½ lb. $1.75, lb. $3.00.
- BODDINGTON'S FLAMINGO. Color scarlet; free-flowering and early. Oz. 50 cts., ¼ lb. $1.50, ½ lb. $2.75, lb. $5.00.
- Christmas Meteor. Scarlet; fine open red flower. Oz. 25 cts., ¼ lb. 75 cts., ½ lb. $1.25, lb. $2.00.

as to their vitality. On this point one of the large concerns at Salt Lake City writes:

"In reply to your inquiry of August 31, we are sorry we cannot give you any definite information relative to the vitality of seed peas grown on irrigated land in Utah, but our opinion is that they would fulfill all requirements."

The Vogeler Seed & Produce Co., of Salt Lake City, says: "There are a good many seed peas being grown in Utah, our mountain valleys being especially adapted to the proper growth and development of garden peas, the vitality of which we deem equal to the Michigan and Wisconsin grown and far superior to the California grown stocks. We believe that if some experienced growers would locate in this section they could develop splendid trade."

A contract pea grower whose operations do not include the Utah district says: "The growing of seed peas under irrigation is still in the experimental stage. As far as the vitality is concerned, there is no reason why peas grown in this way should be less vital than those grown where irrigation is not needed. The one doubtful feature is whether or not the type can be maintained where irrigation is used. In any event it is thought that it will always be necessary to come back to the naturally grown product for the stock seed."

BAD PROSPECTS.

"It would be a doleful story," says one of the large New York importers, "if we told all the facts, but we think the trade should know what we have written. Shall be glad to verify any of the statements made, if necessary, as all are taken from recent reports." What he wrote follows:

"The hot summer weather and long continued drought in Europe are having a disastrous effect upon growing crops. In England and many parts of France and Germany there have been no effective rains for over three months, and in places where stock could not be artificially watered the growing crops are shriveling up. The following items are hard hit:

"Manetti stocks come principally from England and France. In both countries there will be less than half a crop. The grade of those shipped will necessarily be inferior. Practically all of the available crop was bought up before June. It is doubtful if American buyers will get more than sixty per cent

(THE BERMUDA EASTER LILY)

LET US SUPPLY YOUR WANTS IN LILIES. THIS SEASON

We think we can make it to your advantage to do so, as regards both quality and price.

The stock that we offer is not gathered indiscriminately from all kinds of sources, but is grown for us by a few selected growers whose stocks have been worked up from the true, original stock. In order to insure the health of the product, the bulbs are not grown on the same field oftener than one season, other crops being grown on the field the preceding year. The ground is thoroughly manured when the previous crop is grown, leaving it in a high state of cultivation, and when the lily bulbs are planted no fresh manure is used; this prevents disease and insures a crop of strong, healthy bulbs.

In addition to this, we do not dig our bulbs as early as they are usually dug, but leave them in the ground until they are thoroughly ripened and matured. When Harrisii is good it leaves little to be desired. There is very little, if any, stock obtainable as good as the stock that we are offering. We are supplying only this one grade of selected stock and when this is disposed of we shall have no more to offer.

While the quality of the stock that we offer is of the highest, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices of those who offer the ordinary stock gathered from indiscriminate sources. We are sure buyers will find our stock very satisfactory, and much more so than the Japan-grown Longiflorum, which has badly deteriorated in recent years.

Bear in mind that we were the original introducers of Harrisii in Bermuda, and that we have exceptional facilities for obtaining our present supplies. Also take note that the smallest bulbs that we offer are 6-7 inch bulbs, not 5-7 inch, as usually offered.

6-7 inch bulbs, 335 to the case, $15.00 per case; full thousand lots, $ 40.00 per 1000
7-9 inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 16.00 per case; full thousand lots, 75.00 per 1000
9-11 inch bulbs, 100 to the case, 18.00 per case; full thousand lots, 175.00 per 1000

FERNS

We have an exceptionally nice lot of ferns in the following varieties—good, bushy, well-grown plants that will please the most critical buyers. Plants have been grown in pots and are thoroughly well established and nicely finished.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis and Piersoni, 6-inch pots $0.50 each Nephrolepis Elegantissima, Piersoni, Bostoniensis and Harrisii, heavy 8-inch plants . . $1.00 to 1.50 each Nephrolepis Elegantissima, Bostoniensis and Harrisii, heavy 10-inch plants 2.50 each

Our position in the trade is somewhat like that of an umpire of a base ball game. We get cussed a good deal and, of course, have some enemies, for no man can have friends without enemies. However, we go right along pounding stone and doing what we believe is right, whether it be for our own good or for the good of the hive in general. We make mistakes, to be sure, but ultimately we hope to be better understood and want the good will of all. Now, there is one secret we have, and we're going to let you in on it. It's a sort of woman's secret, though, and you know a woman has only two views of a secret—either it's not worth keeping or it's too good to be kept. Our secret is too good to keep, so you may tell it to anyone you want—and it's just this, that Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs have honestly got most other brands skinned a mile. More care and labor are expended upon them than you have any idea of. Nothing that human hands can do is left undone to make them better bulbs. They are priced as reasonable as we can afford to sell them. Try them, if you don't know them—they are money-makers. Prices upon application.

Vegetable Forcing.CUCUMBERS FOR THANKSGIVING.

Will you be good enough to tell me about the culture of cucumbers? I have a house ten feet wide and want to grow cucumbers under the glass. Would White Spine be the best to grow for Thanksgiving? Please tell me the right distance from plant to plant and how many trailers to grow to each plant. How far back should the seed shoots be cut and what length should the vines grow to produce a good crop? What is the right temperature in the winter? T. B.

Cucumbers must have a warm house and good, rich soil. A temperature of 68 to 70 degrees at night and 85 degrees on bright days is about right. They are harder to grow in the fall than in the spring, and if you can not give them their requirements it would be better not to try them now. Lettuce is safe and surer in the fall and winter.

Start the cucumbers in pots, one plant in a pot, and plant them two feet apart in the row. Each row should have a bed three or four feet wide. Train up the stalk as high as the house will permit and trim each branch by pinching out the tip, leaving two leaves on each branch. Grow White Spine or the Davis Perfect. I would advise you to grow the Davis Perfect, as it is a much stronger grower and easier to handle. It has plenty of long fruit, too. H. G.

Giant-Flowering Cyclamen

For the last 15 years we have selected three-fourths of our seed bearing Cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no fizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers, that don't have to be petted to be grown into a choice salable plant—a well built, five petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize-winner. Received first and second prizes at the Toledo Florists' Club meeting early in November, when blooming Cyclamens were scarce. Seed of this, my own grown strain, in five separate colors, $1.00 per 100; $6.00 per 1000; $25.00 per 5000.

The Market.

Business since last report has not improved to any great extent. Considerable rain lately has injured the aster crop, so these flowers are about done. There are still plenty of other outdoor flowers and this tends to hold back the sale of greenhouse stock. Roses and carnations are improving and, with cooler weather, they will be much better.

Various Notes.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. reports that trade is good, everything considered. Their shipping trade has been excellent. They are cutting a good quantity of carnations and these are good. The crop of white roses is a little off, but some nice My Maryland are being cut. Their asters are all gone. George Blackman says that they have no kick coming.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are doing their usual good business. Their roses, carnations and mums are all looking fine.

Ben Kramer says that business is picking up somewhat.

Henry Seymour says that business is slow. He is cutting some nice carnations. He has his mums in good shape, with prospects for some nice flowers.

J. C. Elsperman has had something to do in funeral work right along. He has been cutting a considerable quantity of outdoor roses and some other outdoor stock, and so has not found it necessary to buy much.

Louis Fritsch has his carnations in fine shape. He intends to build a forcing house this fall. It will be 14x60 feet, adjoining his other houses.

Nellie Goodge has been confined to bed during the last week.

Royston & Fenton are cutting lots of roses, with little demand for them.

Austin J. Wallace, of 511 Eichel avenue, has moved into his new residence, near his greenhouses. His carnations are in fine condition. He has sold all his asters. E. L. F.

Haverstraw, N. Y.—John J. Coonan finds the extra glass insufficient for his increasing trade and will probably add to his plant in the near future.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Seems that we tooted the horn too soon in regard to the opening of the new season at the last writing, for business again assumed the gait of the good old summer time. The supply was equal to that of a week ago, but the demand was practically at a standstill.

Club Meeting.

It must have been quite pleasing to the president at the last meeting, Thursday, September 7, to see the large attendance, which was something out of the ordinary.

The secretary had a letter drawn up which it was voted to send to the secretaries of all the cemetery associations, asking them to discontinue the practice of selling wire designs. The executive committee of the fall flower show made a favorable report of the progress made to date, and apparently it is going to be a hummer. An invitation of the Chicago Florists' Club to attend its jubilee meeting on October 5, was accepted with thanks. Quite a number voiced their intention of going.

Various Notes.

William Pagenkopf, whose houses are located on the Cedarburg plank road at the northern city limits, has filed a personal injury suit of $10,000 against T. M. E. R. & L. Co. He alleges that on November 17, 1910, while driving across the street at Seventh and Galena streets, he was compelled to drive out to pass another rig, and without warning, a car coming from the rear crashed into his wagon, throwing him to the pavement. He sustained a broken leg.

A. F. Kellner and family returned September 4 from their summer home at Okauchee lake.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather, the Florist Club's picnic, which was to have been held September 10, has been postponed to September 17, to be held at the same place, Stappelfeld's Grove. The committee in charge would like all to come early.

E. O.

Providence, R. I.—John F. Parks, formerly in business at 54½ Olney street, reports that he is severing his connection with the trade.

WASHINGTON, D. C.

Whether a flower show will be held in Washington late in the month of October or not at all this season was considered by the Washington Florists' Club at its meeting September 5. No decision was arrived at. Invitation was accepted to attend the dahlia show to be given by Richard Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., at White Marsh, Md., September 26. Charles Milburn, D. E. Saunders, F. B. Davis and A. F. Faulkner were admitted as new members.

Z. D. Blackistone has let the contract for extensive alterations in his store at the corner of Fourteenth and H streets. The entire fronts on both H street and Fourteenth street will be removed and replaced with show windows of the most modern type. A new ice-box and the entire new fixtures and decorations of the interior will be made to harmonize with the architecture of the building. Great care and study have been given to every detail and Mr. Blackistone thinks that when the plans are completed he will have one of the most beautiful, as well as practical, flower stores in the country.

This firm has just put on another new automobile delivery car of special design.

Decatur, Ind.—The Moses Greenhouse Co., the newly organized firm which succeeds Ernsberger Bros. & Moses, began its official existence September 1. The proprietors are now E. S. Moses, who was also a member of the former company, and his nephew, Dale Moses, who has just been admitted into partnership.

THE EDGEBROOK GREENHOUSES AND NURSERIES OF THE GEO. WITTBOLD CO., EDGEBROOK, CHICAGO, ILL.

BUFFALO.The Market.

Heavy rains and cool temperatures have been followed by delightful fall weather and we all look for a fine Indian summer for a few weeks. Asters, the main product of the market, have improved lately and, with the exception of the stock that came in on the rainy days, the quality has been well up to the standard. The market is flooded, but the good stock moves fairly well. Carnations are making an early appearance, but are rather slow and short stemmed; however, they are useful for funeral work. Roses are none too plentiful, but are becoming better in quality.

Various Notes.

William F. Kasting was again elected to a high office of the Orpheus Society last week.

In the little town of Corfu, where florists have settled thickly, things are progressing nicely. Everybody appears to be making money and improvement seems to be the rule. John Preisach has renovated his place in every respect and now has a model plant. All others have replaced one or more houses and conditions look bright for a successful year. Buffalo depends largely for its supply on the output of these houses.

Henry Weber has the reputation of having the best begonias and cyclamens and his stock is certainly looking tip-top at the present time.

William Webber, of the Wm. Scott Co., is still confined to his bed as a result of a serious sickness which started last spring.

Mr. Kirchoff, of Pembroke, N. Y., has been a frequent visitor this summer, taking care of his trade on sweet peas and gladioli. His stock is always in demand, but late delivery on the part of the express company has been a serious trouble; however, he has named one of his prize gladioli after the general manager of the company and now the trouble is remedied. The variety is called T. A. Ritzen. R. A. S.

Indianapolis, Ind. — Members of the Indiana State Florists' Association are planning to charter a special car to go to Newcastle, Ind., to attend the meeting of the organization October 3. A. F. J. Baur, the secretary, says it is expected that twenty-five florists from Indianapolis and vicinity will compose the party.

WICHITA, KAN.

The Market.

Business through the summer held up quite decently for the dull season and is picking up nicely as the fall advances, showing a good increase over last year, with the demand pretty evenly balanced in the different classes of work. Vacationists are back in their places and everything is beginning to shape up for a good season's business.

Shipments of supplies and accessories are showing up, accompanied by their usual bills, and the bulb cases drop in pretty regularly.

The Hail Storm.

"Well, what did the hail do to you?" Everyone connected with the florists' business is tired of hearing this question. At 5 p. m., September 6, this city was visited by one of the most vicious storms it has entertained for some time. Between 5 and 7, indeed, there were three hail storms. During these storms, and through the night, enough plain water fell to make the rainfall for the twelve hours nearly eight inches.

The loss of glass was not so heavy as that of last year, but some growers lost nearly all their roofs and all houses were damaged at least twenty per cent. The loss of stock is the worst pill to take. Mum plants and other stock in the houses were cut and broken by hail and falling glass. The outdoor crops for the season had been doing splendidly, as a general thing. Some exceptionally good asters, dahlias and gladioli had been cut. The hail has absolutely ruined the asters, while dahlias and gladioli are an exceedingly doubtful proposition for future flowers. The stores, which had been having all the stock they could handle, suddenly found themselves without anything to fall back on. All the greenhouse men are taking immediate steps to replace their roofs, and orders for about five cars of glass have already gone in.

Various Notes.

The night of the hail storm was the night of the formal opening of one of the principal clothing houses. The decorations downstairs were by C. P. Mueller; upstairs, by W. H. Culp & Co. Several nice floral offerings were sent, principally American beauties. The Culp company also decorated for an unusually elaborate home wedding last week.

Elwood Kline, manager of the Kline Co., at Lawrence, spent Saturday and Sunday in this city. His friends smile when he says he is visiting his parents and the greenhouses here. L.

PROSPERITY—PROSPERITY—PROSPERITY

Now knocking at your door. Every florist is preparing. Will you look on? Will you wait?

THE HOME OF THE ARAUCARIA.

Araucarias! Araucarias!! Araucarias!!!

Fresh and Green.

We have them by the thousands—front, sides, back, everywhere.

No one can beat us in this line.

WARNING.

DON'T BE DECEIVED! Now, as well as for the last 25 years, we hold the ground as leaders in the importing, growing and shipping of our specialty, the Araucaria.

IN HONOR OF

Our 25th Anniversary

Since we began the importing, growing and shipping of our specialty, the Araucaria, we—look—give our customers a bargain by cutting the prices just one-half—for a few weeks only.

Our so well-known Christmas Begonia Erfordii, a constant bloomer for the fall holidays, and during the whole winter is never without a flower; in light pink, pink, dark pink and turning gradually into a bright red (big trusses of flowers), 2½-in. pots, $5.00; 3-in., 8c; 4-in., 12c.

Azalea Indica for Christmas—Deutsche Perle, Simon Mardner, Vervaeana; large plants, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50. For Easter—Niobe, Vander Cruysen, Empress of India, Prof. Wolters and other sorts; large plants, full of buds, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00.

All plants 25 at 100 rate

Heacock's Palms and Ferns

Home-grown, strong, clean and well established, describes our Palms—no more words are necessary.

"Our satisfied customers are our best advertisement." One customer who has been dealing with us for years sent in an order for $1500.00 worth of Palms without seeing them. Another, whose order last year amounted to $700.00, gave us an order for $1600.00 this year. Send for our new booklet and give us a trial order.

Lay in your Palms in September, while you can have them shipped by freight. Our facilities for shipping are of the best. We ship by freight to every state in the Union. We have 40% more glass this year. Most of it is devoted to Palms. We are particularly strong in the larger sizes (7, 9 and 12-inch).

We grow all our Kentias above 6-inch size in cedar tubs made especially for us, avoiding breakage of pots in shipment and giving better results to our customers; and, while they cost us several times what pots would cost, we sell them for the same money. They are the neatest, lightest and best tub ever introduced. Painted green, with three electric-welded wire hoops. We order these tubs by the carload.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS.
EARLIEST WHITE.
 Smith's Advance is the earliest large flowered white chrysanthemum. Like Golden Glow, it will produce good blooms at any season of the year following an active period of growth. Buds selected June 10 were cut July 25, 5½ inches in diameter, with excellent stem, foliage and remarkable substance. The later buds, for August and September, gave larger and finer flowers carried on stems 3 to 3½ feet long. We offer stock plants for October delivery at 40c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

The floral exhibit at the state fair this year was as good as any ever given in this part of the country. The largest exhibit was that of Holm & Olson, which was the only St. Paul firm contesting for prizes. Among the other exhibitors were the Minneapolis Floral Co., the Chicago Avenue Greenhouses, the Florists' Shop, Whitted, Swanson and the Hiawatha Gardens, of Minneapolis, and the Windmill Co., of Manitowish.

Grafton, Mass.—Walter L. Stowe has completed an addition to his range and is stocking his houses with carnations. He also contemplates installing a new boiler.

Nature's Best Fertilizer is Sheep Manure

Sheep's Head Brand furnishes the valuable organic matter and humus necessary to grow crops. It improves the mechanical conditions of the soil.

Makes compact clay more open and porous, makes light, sandy soils more retentive of moisture, keeps soluble plant foods within reach of rootlets of growing vegetation.

Farmers, orchardists, florists, truck and market gardeners should send for our book "Fertile Facts" to learn how properly and most effectively to fertilize the soil.

Greenhouse Heating.

IN NORTHWESTERN LOUISIANA.

We have three new greenhouses, which we wish to heat with hot water. The houses run north and south. The boiler is at the northeast corner and the houses have a fall of eighteen inches from south to north. There are forty-two inches of glass in each of the two outside walls. The south ends are glass, but the north ends are enclosed by the boiler room, workroom and office. The east house is 14x100 feet and will be used for ferns, palms, etc. The middle house, 20x100 feet, is for mums and general stock. The west house, also 20x100 feet, is for carnations.

How deep will it be necessary to dig the boiler pit? What is the best location for the tank? Please state, also, the best and cheapest system of piping the different houses for their respective uses. The outside temperature here rarely falls lower than 5 degrees above zero. We have a good lot of 2-inch pipe, which we should like to use for returns, and we should prefer not to use anything larger than 3-inch for flows.

R. L. G.

The best circulation is secured when the boiler pit is deep enough to bring the top of the boiler two or more feet below the returns, but this is not necessary when overhead flow pipes are used.

For the two larger houses use three 2½-inch overhead flow pipes and six 2-inch returns. The arrangement of the returns will depend somewhat upon whether benches or beds are used. In the former case, put about one-half of the pipes on the walls and the others can be distributed under the benches. In the 14-foot house, for which a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees will be required, it will suffice if two 2½-inch flow pipes and six 2-inch returns are used. The same arrangement as suggested for the other houses could be used in this one. Run all of the pipes downhill, thus bringing the highest part of the system near the boiler. By attaching the tank at this point, it will do away with air valves.

A CANVAS-COVERED HOUSE.

I have a canvas-covered greenhouse, seven feet high, which is used for vegetable growing. The canvas can be pulled back to allow the sunshine to enter. In fact, the house is similar to the cloth-covered greenhouses of Florida. Here, in northwestern Louisiana,

The Users Of The... Hughson Regulating Valve

are all satisfied with the results it has given, and many duplicate orders is the proof. This Valve will maintain a steady pressure on the low side, no matter how the initial pressure fluctuates. By carrying 40 or 50 pounds pressure on the boiler and setting the valve to carry 5 or 10 pounds on the line, you always have a reserve to fall back on in case of a sudden drop in temperature. Our new catalogue is just out and if you contemplate making any changes you had better get one—it is yours for the asking.

WHAT THE USERS SAY ABOUT KROESCHELL BOILERS

KROESCHELL BOILER DURABLE

In 1894 we bought one of your No. 12 Boilers to take the place of four smaller boilers of another make. Your boiler has done the entire work to the highest satisfaction, saving labor and about one-third of the fuel we used to burn before. We had that boiler up to 1906, that is 12 years, having no repairs on it whatever, except one set of flues we put in in 1900. Last fall we installed one of your No. 14 Boilers, having enlarged our plant. It takes care of 35,000 sq. ft. of glass very easy. When firing we keep the ash door open only about one inch. We think your No. 14 Boiler could carry 40,000 sq. ft. of glass.

we have two or three cold spells each winter, when the thermometer gets down to 10 or 12 degrees above zero. During these cold spells I want some means of keeping the temperature up, so as to prevent headed lettuce, celery and other vegetables from being killed by frost. I have thought of using a hot water boiler and placing the return pipes about twelve inches underground, to heat the earth. The pipes would be six or eight feet apart, the greenhouse containing about 20,000 square feet. In other words, I want to know the cheapest means of keeping the temperature above the freezing point, and preferably around 45 degrees.

I also want to have a greenhouse nearby. By using a large boiler the greenhouse could also be heated. But would a large boiler be too expensive for heating a small greenhouse, say 20x50 feet, when heat would not be needed for the canvas greenhouse? We have natural gas for fuel, which costs from 8 cents to 15 cents per 1,000 feet.

J. F. M.

The plan proposed for heating the canvas-covered greenhouse is a good one, but would be improved by combining it with overhead flows. The use of five 2½-inch flows overhead and fifteen 2-inch returns, placed about eight feet apart and eight inches underground, is suggested. This will give bottom heat, which will be helpful in forcing the crops, and by warming the soil you will have considerable heat in reserve, which will be helpful in a canvas-covered house. In the greenhouse, 20x50 feet, use one 2½-inch flow and six 2-inch return pipes. The best way will be to have a small heater, with a capacity for 200 square feet of radiation, for the glass-covered house, and a larger one, rated for about 2,000 square feet, for the canvas-covered house.

IN WESTERN CANADA.

As I am about to start in the florists' trade in western Canada, I shall be pleased to receive a little information on the heating of greenhouses in this cold country, where the temperature in the winter months often ranges anywhere from zero to 20 or 30 degrees below. Steam heat seems to be frequently preferred in cold countries. Is this because it is not safe to use hot water so far north, or because steam can be installed more cheaply? Which system would be more economical after being installed? I am thinking of building two connected houses, each 10 x 50 feet and 7 feet high at the sides, with four feet of glass and the rest wood. What size of boiler and what piping will be required to heat these to a temperature of about 50 degrees in the coldest weather, with either a steam or a hot water system? W. G.

Hot water will give good results if used in latitudes like the one referred to, but it will cost one-half more to

The Market.

Little complaint was offered among the retailers last week. Stock of nearly all kinds was plentiful and moved fairly well. The cool breezes of fall have at last made their appearance and shortly those who are spending their time away from home will be arriving in the city, and naturally business will once more go ahead.

Stock inside is in every way encouraging. Roses and carnations are looking exceedingly fine. There is little mildew or stem-rot, but many of our growers will be short on carnation plants on account of the damage done by hail storms and cut worms. Mums are in excellent shape, but not nearly so many are being grown as usual. Asparagus and smilax are up to the usual standard and violets are doing finely and look as though a good return can be expected. Roses are arriving more regularly and the carnations are looking better and selling well, although somewhat slow in arriving. Dahlias are coming in much more heavily and find good sales at fair prices. Asters are still a glut, but are moving fairly well considering the large quantities on the market.

Various Notes.

The Maryland state fair, held at Timonium, Md., was a great success, and many gardeners and florists attended. The farmers and private gardeners made excellent exhibits. I. H. Moss, of Govanstown, made a large exhibit of evergreens, as did J. L. Wagner, of Towson. The latter's exhibit also included cut flowers.

H. J. Quick has his new Gem City boiler installed and has finished his two new houses, 25 x 100 each, and also a concrete stack, twenty-six feet high.

An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

September has opened well, with plenty of work, though some men in the trade are of the opinion that there are not so many weddings during this month as there used to be. However, be that as it may, everyone seems to be fairly busy for the season and no complaints are heard.

Stock is coming in quite plentifully. Roses are better and asters are excellent. Golden Glow mums are having a big run. The new yellow tinted rose, Mrs. Aaron Ward, has made its appearance and has taken well. From present indications it will be a big seller here. The Dale Estate, Brampton, is the shipper.

The Big Show.

The Canadian national exhibition is over for another year. The exhibits in flowering plants were quite good, though not large. Although rather tropical in effect, the grand groups of palms, caladiums, ferns, water plants and other botanical wonders made a good showing. There were six groups in the class for decorative groups, each covering 400 square feet. First honors went to Sir Henry M. Pellatt, whose gardener is T. McVittie. Thos. Manton, Eglinton, took second prize. Reservoir park was third and Exhibition park fourth.

The competitive groups of ferns, each 200 square feet, brought out four entries, all of which were exceptionally well displayed. First prize went to Sir H. M. Pellatt, with Reservoir park second, W. J. Potter third and St. Lawrence Market fourth.

The cut flower display and showing of designs was not large. It never is. Florists claim there is not enough money in it for the trouble and after the first day's showing, owing to the heat, the design is spoiled for looks and advertising value. In the class for best and most original funeral design A. Jennings, Deer Park, took first with a model aeroplane. S. A. Frost was second, and Thos. Manton third.

The class for table decorations was won by S. A. Frost, with A. Jennings second and J. J. Higgins third. J. J. Higgins captured first in presentation baskets and S. A. Frost took second. For bridal bouquets Mr. Higgins was again the winner, with Mr. Frost second.

Various Notes.

It is rumored that a new flower store will be opened on College street, near Spadina avenue.

"HAMILTON-MADE" GREENHOUSE HOSE

What our mark on hose means

"Hamilton-Made" means superior quality in general and one thing in particular. The "one thing in particular" is this:

On every length of "Hamilton-Made" hose you will notice a mark not found on any other hose—"Guaranteed 750 pounds pressure," or 700 or 500, etc., according to the grade. On our "Hamilton" brand every length has been tested under pressure of 750 pounds to the square inch. Any piece showing defect is rejected. 750 pounds is five times the usual pressure in steam boilers. Think of it! Do you wonder that this hose is strong; that it is stiff and will not kink?

"Hamilton" brand, our highest grade hose, selling at 25 cents a foot, will last three to five years under ordinary greenhouse use; it will stand three or four times as much wear as common hose. As often happens, the high grade is the cheapest.

Under the same brands and of the same excellent qualities, we make Hose for Suction, for Steam Service and for Spraying.

All made especially for the service to be done and satisfaction guaranteed.

Here are some of the leading grades of "Hamilton-Made" Greenhouse Hose.

Note that every label bears the words "HAMILTON-MADE"

How to get the best hose that is made

SOME jobbers in Florists' Supplies do not sell the highest-grade Greenhouse hose. They argue that everybody wants low-priced hose. We know better, for we know that our stiff, strong, tough "HAMILTON" brand hose is really the cheapest of all, and that many wise buyers will be glad to get it. We therefore make this offer to all who cannot buy it of a dealer:

If your dealer does not keep it, we will deliver to you anywhere in the United States, PREPAID, 50-foot lengths of 3/4-inch "HAMILTON" brand, our highest grade Greenhouse hose, complete with standard brass couplings, for the regular price, $12.50 EACH LENGTH.

This splendid hose stands a pressure of 750 pounds to the square inch, and while it is our highest-priced Greenhouse hose, it lasts so long that it is really the cheapest hose made.

If hose of such extremely high resistance is not required, we will send 3/4-inch KENMORE (guaranteed 500 pounds) at $10.50, or 3/4-inch CYNET (500 pounds) at $8.00 for 50-foot lengths. Shipped same day order is received.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

Every florist in the city is wishing that, with the end of the dismal, rainy, summer season, the dullness of business will depart likewise. This summer will surely go on record for the heaviest rainfalls experienced in this section of the country in many years.

The standard foliage and flowering plants, growing on for the coming winter season, are everywhere in good condition. The chrysanthemums are beginning to show buds, and though a great number of plants suffered from the excessive rains, a scarcity of flowers for All Saints' day, November 1, does not seem probable at the present time; much depends on the weather conditions from now on and all growers hope for the best.

Nearly every florist's establishment is more or less infested with different kinds of caterpillars and only the greatest determination to destroy this voracious pest saved thousands of Asparagus plumosus and all kinds of nephrolepis from utter destruction. Hardly any plants, kept outside during summer, are housed before October, giving the florists sufficient time to get their houses in proper shape for the coming winter.

Summer travelers are beginning to come home, and the displays in the different flower stores show already a marked improvement as compared with the monotony of the last three months. Any increase in business activity is, so far, hardly noticeable, but the recent funerals of several prominent people, besides some small weddings in the city and nearby towns, helped the storekeepers to dispose to some extent of their stock, which at present consists mostly of northern flowers. All kinds of bulbs have arrived lately in great shipments, but, owing to the early season, only Lilium Harrisii and calla lilies have been planted, which will be followed by giganteums, hyacinths, narcissi, etc., by the end of the month.

Various Notes.

Hermann Doescher, one of the city's young, enterprising florists, and Harry Dressel, the expert rose grower of the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., went on a business and pleasure trip to Galveston, Houston and other points in Texas.

The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. will occupy larger quarters on Carondelet street. R. B.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

TAG! WHO'S IT?

Individuality and Character.

Buyers of flowers, candy, jewelry and, in fact, of all the so-called luxuries, demand and get an attractive container for the goods, neatly wrapped and tagged. Just as a jeweler can not deliver a diamond ring wrapped in a piece of tissue, or a candy man put his 80-cent bon bons in a paper bag, so the florist who is aiming for the top rungs of the ladder can not neglect his put-up on the plea that the customer wants the flowers alone and doesn't care about the looks of the package. The majority of flowers are sent either as presents or in payment of respects, and go to a person other than the one placing the order. A gentleman ordering roses to be sent to a lady naturally desires them to make an impression, and he knows the tag, the box and the dressing up of the package make for a greater appreciation of the flowers within. The average purchaser of flowers demands the dainty accessories which go to improve the package and is willing to have the cost included in the price.

Before even the question of boxes and inside wrappings comes the question of a tag which will be in keeping with the flowers. The tag goes on every plant, package and box. It is always first noticed when the goods are delivered, because one of the initial questions is, "Where did they come from?" If the tag is a cheap manila stock, poorly printed and cut, the impression gained from it must be similar to that left by a personal visiting card of the cheaper class.

Checkmating the Copyist.

Discerning florists who want to spend the money used in dressing up the package where it will do the most good, have long since adopted the high grade tag. Some of them, in the endeavor to get and retain something distinctive, are having tags made from registered designs. They reason that inasmuch as the name is a guarantee of quality, it should be attractively printed and made as hard to imitate as possible. In a New Jersey town not long ago the best florist was using a white tag printed in script and old English in two colors, red and green. A hustling competitor dropped in, opened a store a block away on the same street and copied the older florist's tag exactly as far as inks, arrangement and wording were concerned, only making sure that the name and address were changed. The first man on the ground naturally was nettled and resolved that he would get a distinctive tag that could not be copied. He began by photographing his store front and placing a halftone cut of it on the tag. Around the cut was a trellis design in roses which eventually became a border for the tag. His name and address were also printed from cuts, and when the tag was turned out he sent a copy down to Washington and had the design registered. Customers quickly noticed the change and complimented him both on his new tag and on the effective way in which he had squelched his imitator without any litigation.

Many Variations Possible.

Distinctive florist tags are made in countless varieties. The violet, rose, orchid or gardenia may be effectively made use of in the design, and if an especially attractive tag is desired, both name and flowers may be embossed. Many florists use a crest or halftone of their store front on one corner of the tag. For a florist who desires simplicity, the neatest tag is one printed in gold bronze ink on white stock and embossed.

The stock used in all of the better looks of the package and impresses the customer.

THE AGGRAVATING FLORIST.

"Did you get the flowers for the window boxes?" asks the fond wife. The obliging husband waits until he has hung up his hat and then answers: "No."

"But I thought you were going right to the florist this morning, to order them."

"I was, and I did, but I didn't order them. I went in there. It was a regular florist's shop—pots of flowers all around, and cut flowers in an ice-box, and a young lady cashier with a violent pompadour on the back of her head and not enough powder on her nose, and one of these splattery-looking new-fangled shirt waists. Yes, I went in. And a low-browed man with a hay-colored mustache came to wait on me, and I told him I wanted to pick out some stuff for some window boxes. All right. He took me around, and pretty soon I saw what it was. He said it was ornothorhynchus pasteuritis, as near as I can remember. Next thing I picked out he called taxidermatous polielinic. Then I pointed at some kind of a fern, and he said the bisulphidous mulligatawney was a fine box plant. Also he especially recommended a vine he called popocatepetl ipecacuanha and a shrub that he declared was bifloratamus zollocoffer tag is treated so that water does not stain it. This means that unless actually soiled, all the tags leaving the shop will go out white and clean, even though the flowers have been sprayed after the tag is attached.

With the busy autumn season near, the time when the florist counts on adding to his prestige, the adoption of a tag showing individuality helps the dolcefarniente. From then on he had my goat. I thought I was to give an order to a florist, and I found I was up against a university professor, evidently. Why, I'll have to brush up on the dead languages and tour Europe a few times before I can order plants. What was I to say when he rolled his eyes and asked me if I didn't consider something a fine specimen of multiform-atoski dementia scribendiorium? I simply told him I'd have to talk with you a little more about it and let it rest as it was. What I want is some geraniums and verbenas and asparagus vine, but how am I to get them from a man who wants to show me spirillum trichinosis and omnia gallia divisa and hinc illae lachrymae, and all that?"—Chicago Evening Post.

IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

The Mitchell Greenhouses and Nursery, operated by The Newburys, is one of the rapidly growing establishments that speak for the progress the trade is making in the great northwest, where the people are just beginning to cultivate the finer things of life, where there are miles and miles of room, and where floriculture is developing at a rate second only to the increase shown in the milder climate of the southwest. Mitchell is a county seat from which radiate a number of rural mail routes, but it is not the town one would expect to support a range of 50,000 feet of glass, such as The Newburys have, and, in fact, were it not that they do business at retail all over that section of the country, and at wholesale in the plant line all over the United States, they would not find their facilities constantly running behind the demand, as is now the case.

The accompanying illustration shows one of The Newburys' carnation houses, planted before the Fourth of July, from which cutting was begun July 20. By August 20 there was a good crop on, a nice daily cut being made with stems that ran fourteen to sixteen inches. And everything was selling well.

DRAINAGE IN WINDOW BOXES.

Will you kindly tell me how drainage is provided for and taken care of in small winter window boxes that contain about six primroses? A. E. B.

Some window boxes can be drained out from below by taking out a stopper, standing a pail below until the moisture is all drained out, but as a general rule none is thought of or provided, in which case it is necessary to take out the plants and sponge out the water; otherwise it soon becomes putrid and plants standing in it speedily show yellow foliage. If carefully watered there is no need for stagnant water collecting in the boxes, however. C. W.

FLOWER SHOW AT HELENA.

The second annual flower show in this city, held September 7 and 8, was an event that might well be copied by many larger cities. It was given under

UNDRIED BLOOD AS FERTILIZER.

Will you please inform me whether blood, fresh from the slaughter house, is a good plant food for carnations and mums? In what proportion should it be used with water? Any information will be appreciated. G. N. G.

Fresh blood from the slaughter house would not be a good fertilizer to use on your benches. In that state it would be weak in fertilizer and at the same time likely to sour your soil. If you can arrange to put it through a rapid drying process, the dry substance would make a good plant food. Evaporation would be too slow a process to be profitable, and to rig up a plant for drying it by heat would probably cost you more than your needs would warrant. However, if you wish to install such a plant I would suggest that you consult someone who is experienced in that line of work. You do not need much dried blood to give your plants all they can use, and my advice to you would be to buy it in a dried state, believing that you will find it cheaper in the end and more satisfactory.

A. F. J. B.

DISEASED WINSORS.

I am sending you under separate cover some stems of my Winsor carnation plants, which are affected with some sort of disease. Will you please tell me what the disease is, with the causes and the remedy? The samples which I am sending are among the worst, so you can plainly see what my trouble is. A. C. U.

The disease which is attacking your Winsors is the same that drove all the Lawson varieties from a number of places some years ago. These varieties seem to be especially subject to its ravages. It is of a fungoid nature and should be treated in the same way as all the spot diseases, except that it does not seem to yield to treatment as readily as most of the others. As you will notice, it attacks the stem in most cases, instead of the more tender leaves.

First I would cut off all the stems that are affected, cutting them at least a full joint below the affected part. Then spray the plants heavily with Bordeaux mixture once each week. Keep the water from the foliage as much as possible as long as no red spider threatens. Dusting the plants with Grape Dust will help to keep it down. When you begin firing, paint one of the steam pipes with a paste made of sulphur, lime and water, using the sulphur and lime in equal proportions.

You will need considerable perseverance in combating this disease, as it is one of the most stubborn of its kind. When you see a stem with one of the spots on it, you might just as well cut it off at once, and save others that may not be affected as yet. Burn all you cut off. A. F. J. B.

USE OF SOFT-WOOD ASHES.

I write to ask you whether I can use muriate of potash or sulphate of potash in place of wood ashes. If so, how much ought I to use at a time on a bench 4x100 feet, for carnations and mums? I can not get good ashes here, as there is so much soft wood in them. I can get soft pine and cedar ashes for nothing, only paying for the cartage, but the time spent in putting these ashes on the bench is worth more than the benefit derived by the plants.

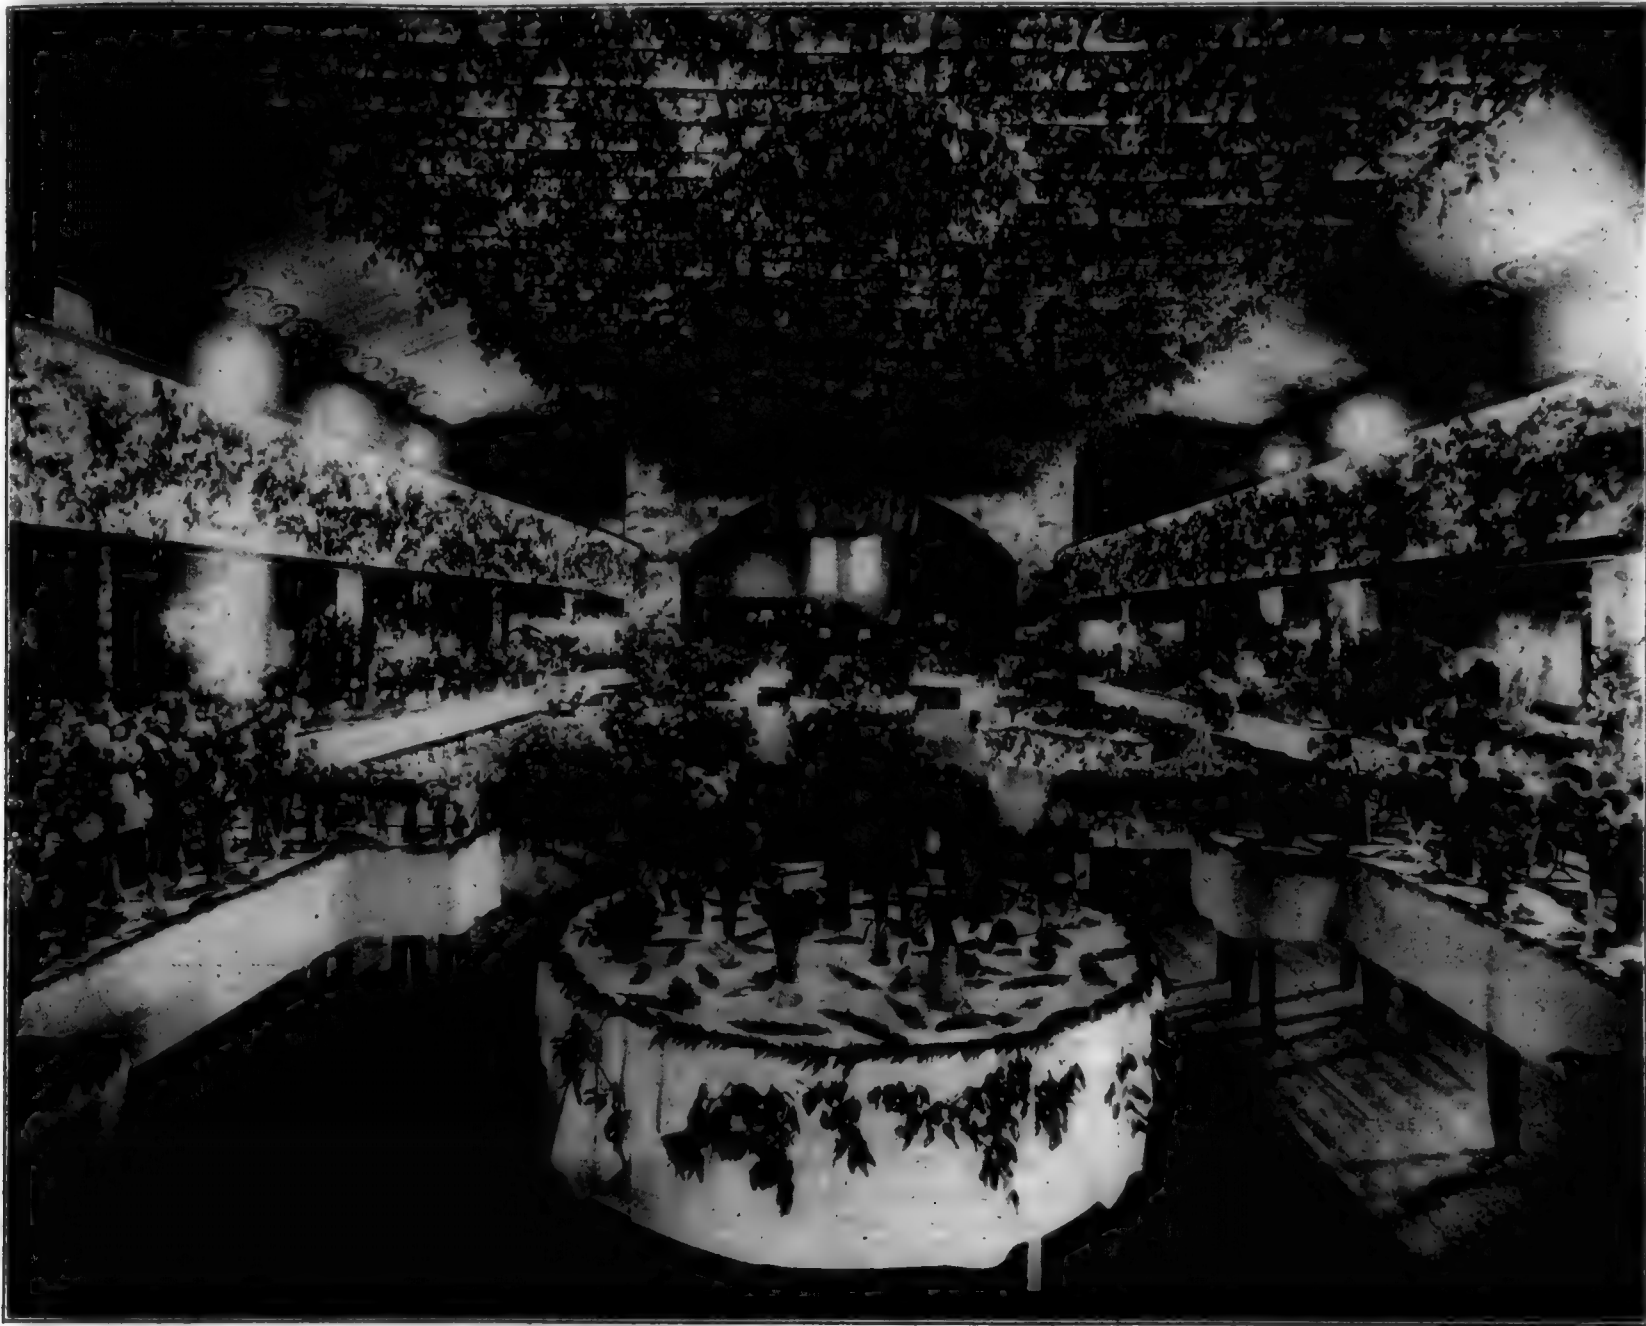

G. A. R.

I have an idea that you underestimate the value of those soft-wood ashes. Of course they do not contain as high a percentage of potash as those from hard wood, but they do contain enough to make them valuable. Simply put on more of them and you will get the same benefit. You will find them much safer to use than the muriate and sulphate of potash, especially at this time of the year.

Do not always expect to see quick effects from the ashes after you apply them. Some varieties will stiffen up in the stem perceptibly in a week or so, but other varieties, which produce a less fleshy growth, will not show the effects so quickly. This sometimes leads growers to give too much ashes before they can see any effects, and the result is a crop of brittle stems—sometimes so brittle that the weight of the blooms will cause them to snap at the joints. This usually happens in midthe auspices of some of the liberal spirited ladies of the city, who devoted their time and money to making it a success. The object of these flower shows is to encourage the growing of flowers in the yards and homes of the citizens, thereby adding to the attractiveness of this already beautiful city. Prizes were given for the best displays of flowers or plants grown and owned by the exhibitors and also for the best kept yards. The result must have been gratifying to the promoters, as the large auditorium was filled with a gorgeous display of plants and autumn-blooming flowers, such as asters, coreopsis, cosmos, dahlias, gladioli, phloxes, hollyhocks, roses, sweet peas, etc., grown in such perfection as only careful attention could secure.

The prizes were given by the merchants and prominent citizens of the city, and a number of cash prizes were given by the State Nursery Co. The show was entirely free, no admission fee being charged. An excellent orchestra furnished music during the evenings, while an admiring crowd of visitors filled the large hall.

The State Nursery Co. made a large display of palms, ferns, ornamental foliaged plants, blooming plants and cut flowers.

The Columbia Gardens, of Butte, sent a most attractive collection of cut flowers, mostly hardy perennials.

Exhibitions of this character should be encouraged by florists, as they tend to develop a taste for, and a knowledge of, flowers among the general public, which will lead to an increased demand for flowers, plants and seeds, and eventually benefit the florists.

J. P. R.

THE DORSET VIOLET.

We are going to try the new single violet, Dorset, this year, and should like to know whether it requires the same treatment as other single varieties or stands a higher temperature. Would it be profitable to grow it together with sweet peas, snapdragons, stevias, etc., after the mums are gone? We have the violets in a coldframe at present.

A. F. C.

Violets, especially the single ones, are sometimes grown in the same house with sweet peas. When the pea rows are five to six feet apart, this is possible. Violets prefer a lower temperature than sweet peas, and in order to have good violets the night temperature should be held at 40 to 42 degrees. Sweet peas in the early stages of growth will do well in this temperature, but they will need 8 to 10 degrees more heat when the flowering period is reached, and this will soon run out the violets, which, however, should have given quite a crop of flowers before this time. Stevias can be run as cool as violets; anything just clear of frost will answer. Snapdragons want 45 to 50 degrees if they are to grow and flower satisfactorily.

The Dorset violet I have grown with Princess of Wales, which is, so far, much the finest single in commerce. Dorset, with a temperature of 40 degrees, came short-stemmed, had no odor and was poor. What it would do if grown warmer, I cannot say. Some growers are said to do well with Governor Herrick grown at 50 degrees. Perhaps Dorset may like more heat than Princess. Perhaps some readers who have had success with Dorset will give their views.

C. W.

CARNATIONS

UNDRIED BLOOD AS FERTILIZER.

Will you please inform me whether blood, fresh from the slaughter house, is a good plant food for carnations and mums? In what proportion should it be used with water? Any information will be appreciated. G. N. G.

Fresh blood from the slaughter house would not be a good fertilizer to use on your benches. In that state it would be weak in fertilizer and at the same time likely to sour your soil. If you can arrange to put it through a rapid drying process, the dry substance would make a good plant food. Evaporation would be too slow a process to be profitable, and to rig up a plant for drying it by heat would probably cost you more than your needs would warrant. However, if you wish to install such a plant I would suggest that you consult someone who is experienced in that line of work. You do not need much dried blood to give your plants all they can use, and my advice to you would be to buy it in a dried state, believing that you will find it cheaper in the end and more satisfactory.

DISEASED WINSORS.

I am sending you under separate cover some stems of my Winsor carnation plants, which are affected with some sort of disease. Will you please tell me what the disease is, with the causes and the remedy? The samples which I am sending are among the worst, so you can plainly see what my trouble is. A. C. U.

The disease which is attacking your Winsors is the same that drove all the Lawson varieties from a number of places some years ago. These varieties seem to be especially subject to its ravages. It is of a fungoid nature and should be treated in the same way as all the spot diseases, except that it does not seem to yield to treatment as readily as most of the others. As you will notice, it attacks the stem in most cases, instead of the more tender leaves.

First I would cut off all the stems that are affected, cutting them at least a full joint below the affected part. Then spray the plants heavily with Bordeaux mixture once each week. Keep the water from the foliage as much as possible as long as no red spider threatens. Dusting the plants with Grape Dust will help to keep it down. When you begin firing, paint one of the steam pipes with a paste made of sulphur, lime and water, using the sulphur and lime in equal proportions.

You will need considerable perseverance in combating this disease, as it is one of the most stubborn of its kind. When you see a stem with one of the spots on it, you might just as well cut it off at once, and save others that may not be affected as yet. Burn all you cut off. A. F. J. B.

USE OF SOFT-WOOD ASHES.

I write to ask you whether I can use muriate of potash or sulphate of potash in place of wood ashes. If so, how much ought I to use at a time on a bench 4x100 feet, for carnations and mums? I can not get good ashes here, as there is so much soft wood in them. I can get soft pine and cedar ashes for nothing, only paying for the cartage, but the time spent in putting these ashes on the bench is worth more than the benefit derived by the plants.

G. A. R.

I have an idea that you underestimate the value of those soft-wood ashes. Of course they do not contain as high a percentage of potash as those from hard wood, but they do contain enough to make them valuable. Simply put on more of them and you will get the same benefit. You will find them much safer to use than the muriate and sulphate of potash, especially at this time of the year.

Do not always expect to see quick effects from the ashes after you apply them. Some varieties will stiffen up in the stem perceptibly in a week or so, but other varieties, which produce a less fleshy growth, will not show the effects so quickly. This sometimes leads growers to give too much ashes before they can see any effects, and the result is a crop of brittle stems—sometimes so brittle that the weight of the blooms will cause them to snap at the joints. This usually happens in midwinter, when the sun is weak and the growth is likely to be soft.

IN SOUTH DAKOTA.

The Mitchell Greenhouses and Nursery, operated by The Newburys, is one of the rapidly growing establishments that speak for the progress the trade is making in the great northwest, where the people are just beginning to cultivate the finer things of life, where there are miles and miles of room, and where floriculture is developing at a rate second only to the increase shown in the milder climate of the southwest. Mitchell is a county seat from which radiate a number of rural mail routes, but it is not the town one would expect to support a range of 50,000 feet of glass, such as The Newburys have, and, in fact, were it not that they do business at retail all over that section of the country, and at wholesale in the plant line all over the United States, they would not find their facilities constantly running behind the demand, as is now the case.

The accompanying illustration shows one of The Newburys' carnation houses, planted before the Fourth of July, from which cutting was begun July 20. By August 20 there was a good crop on, a nice daily cut being made with stems that ran fourteen to sixteen inches. And everything was selling well.

DRAINAGE IN WINDOW BOXES.

Will you kindly tell me how drainage is provided for and taken care of in small winter window boxes that contain about six primroses? A. E. B.

Some window boxes can be drained out from below by taking out a stopper, standing a pail below until the moisture is all drained out, but as a general rule none is thought of or provided, in which case it is necessary to take out the plants and sponge out the water; otherwise it soon becomes putrid and plants standing in it speedily show yellow foliage. If carefully watered there is no need for stagnant water collecting in the boxes, however. C. W.

FLOWER SHOW AT HELENA.

The second annual flower show in this city, held September 7 and 8, was an event that might well be copied by many larger cities. It was given under the auspices of some of the liberal spirited ladies of the city, who devoted their time and money to making it a success. The object of these flower shows is to encourage the growing of flowers in the yards and homes of the citizens, thereby adding to the attractiveness of this already beautiful city. Prizes were given for the best displays of flowers or plants grown and owned by the exhibitors and also for the best kept yards. The result must have been gratifying to the promoters, as the large auditorium was filled with a gorgeous display of plants and autumn-blooming flowers, such as asters, coreopsis, cosmos, dahlias, gladioli, phloxes, hollyhocks, roses, sweet peas, etc., grown in such perfection as only careful attention could secure.

The prizes were given by the merchants and prominent citizens of the city, and a number of cash prizes were given by the State Nursery Co. The show was entirely free, no admission fee being charged. An excellent orchestra furnished music during the evenings, while an admiring crowd of visitors filled the large hall.

The State Nursery Co. made a large display of palms, ferns, ornamental foliaged plants, blooming plants and cut flowers.

The Columbia Gardens, of Butte, sent a most attractive collection of cut flowers, mostly hardy perennials.

Exhibitions of this character should be encouraged by florists, as they tend to develop a taste for, and a knowledge of, flowers among the general public, which will lead to an increased demand for flowers, plants and seeds, and eventually benefit the florists.

THE DORSET VIOLET.

We are going to try the new single violet, Dorset, this year, and should like to know whether it requires the same treatment as other single varieties or stands a higher temperature. Would it be profitable to grow it together with sweet peas, snapdragons, stevias, etc., after the mums are gone? We have the violets in a coldframe at present.

A. F. C.

Violets, especially the single ones, are sometimes grown in the same house with sweet peas. When the pea rows are five to six feet apart, this is possible. Violets prefer a lower temperature than sweet peas, and in order to have good violets the night temperature should be held at 40 to 42 degrees. Sweet peas in the early stages of growth will do well in this temperature, but they will need 8 to 10 degrees more heat when the flowering period is reached, and this will soon run out the violets, which, however, should have given quite a crop of flowers before this time. Stevias can be run as cool as violets; anything just clear of frost will answer. Snapdragons want 45 to 50 degrees if they are to grow and flower satisfactorily.

The Dorset violet I have grown with Princess of Wales, which is, so far, much the finest single in commerce. Dorset, with a temperature of 40 degrees, came short stemmed, had no odor and was poor. What it would do if grown warmer, I cannot say. Some growers are said to do well with Governor Herriek grown at 50 degrees. Perhaps Dorset may like more heat than Princess. Perhaps some readers who have had success with Dorset will give their views.

CYCLONE HITS BIG GROWERS.

Biggest Blow in Chicago's History.

For the first time since greenhouse area came to be measured by the acre, an answer has been given to the many times repeated question as to what would happen if a really vicious storm were to strike one of the modern ranges; and the answer, like the record in the traveler's order-book, has been written in triplicate, for three of the many big plants that have made famous in the trade the district north of Chicago lay, Monday morning, September 18, in the path of a cyclonic gust that did in one brief moment damage that will take months to repair.

It was at 1:35 a. m. that the storm broke. The wind was high all through the district, where there are dozens of big greenhouse establishments, but its fury was centered on a strip possibly 200 feet wide and scarcely three blocks long. Practically every foot of its journey was across the roofs of greenhouses built on the ridge-and-furrow plan that is the typical style of construction in the Chicago section.

The Peter Reinberg place lies between North Robey street and North Seeley avenue, stretching out for nearly a half mile north and south. West of it, parallel, between Seeley and Hoyne avenues, lies the establishment of George Reinberg. North of Balmoral avenue the latter's Beauty houses cover a width of two blocks, and on the southwest corner, so that they are surrounded on two sides by George Reinberg's ranges, stood the six houses owned by Amelia M. Schafer and leased to Charles Handel. The storm traveled from northwest to southeast, across these three places. It clipped a house and a half off the George Reinberg Beauty range at its west end, then crossed Balmoral avenue, striking down practically the whole Schafer-Handel place, and plunged into the big row of houses of George Reinberg beyond. Here a path nearly 200 feet wide was cut through a range of twelve houses, all devoted to Richmond roses. Though the rear ends of some of the houses stood, and the front ends of the others, the storm, in its diagonal course, practically destroyed the north eight houses. The ninth and tenth houses in the range were not greatly injured, and south of these little damage was done.

After crossing George Reinberg's range the cyclone leaped Seeley avenue and plunged into the establishment of his brother, Peter Reinberg. Here the storm center appeared to widen out, though it did not diminish in force. There are twenty-three houses in the two city squares between Balmoral avenue on the north and Berwin avenue on the south, and not one escaped some damage. Across the center of the range, where Summerdale avenue is covered by a greenhouse work shed, the destruction was greatest. Almost all the glass was taken out of the two houses south of the shed, but the sash-bars stood. At the east end of the next two houses a good many bars were torn loose, and at the west end the same thing happened to six houses. North of the shed a good deal of glass was broken, but in only one place did any considerable number of sashbars give way. At the north end of the block, at Balmoral avenue, the end house got a slap that broke things up pretty badly, but none of Peter Reinberg's houses went down under the force of the blow. Growers and greenhouse builders who visited the scene in the morning were quick to note that Peter Reinberg's houses were all on iron gutters, and that these houses stood up, while the houses that collapsed were all on wood gutters. Peter Reinberg himself agreed to the suggestion that there seemed good evidence that in this storm the presence of the iron gutters had made a saving that was a good deal more than their cost. "You know I always thought well of the iron gutter," he said; "never used anything else since Garland first brought it out."

What the money loss will be neither of the Reinbergs would venture a guess. Work of repair was begun at daylight after the storm and Peter Reinberg expects to have the sashbars all back in his place and the glazing done before frost arrives. George Reinberg's loss will be much heavier, for he has ten houses that will have to be practically rebuilt. The Schafer place probably never will be restored. The owner is quoted as saying that she prefers to turn the real estate to some other use if the lessee abandons it, and Mr. Handel is not financially able to rebuild.

He has run the place for two years and loses the work he has put in as well as the money he invested at the start. He had six houses all in Killarneys and Richmonds and the ridge was left standing on only one house and parts of two others. The plants in all the houses that stood were more or less cut up and broken. What the loss will be from this cause time alone will tell. The stock in the houses that went down will, of course, be a total loss if rebuilding is not hastened. George Reinberg next morning ordered materials for rebuilding six of the demolished houses and for repairs on those that had been only damaged. He hopes to get that far with rebuilding before cold weather catches him. The remaining houses he does not expect to be able to replace before spring.

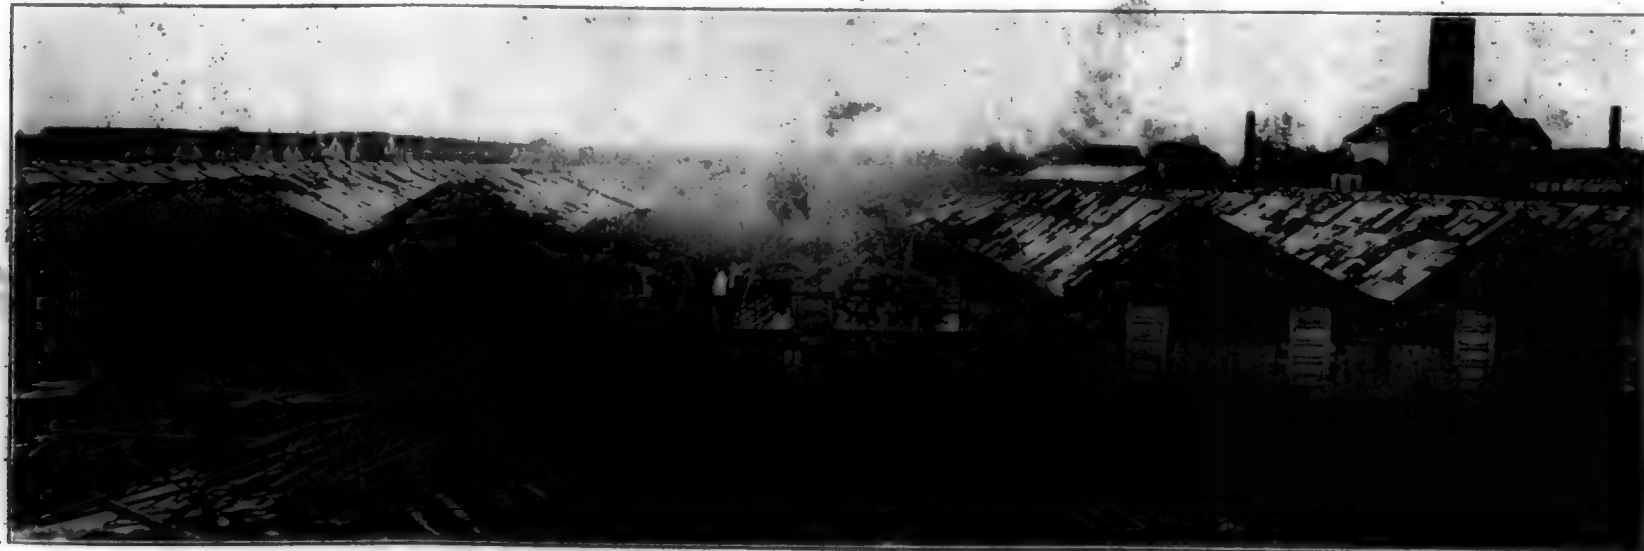

All of these houses were of uniform size, 26x265 feet. As an evidence of how hard the wind blew, practically all the glass was blown out of the windows of George Reinberg's residence, which stood in the path of the storm, and over beyond Peter Reinberg's range, on the east side of Robey street, most of the windows in some of the flat buildings there were blown in. A peculiarity was that there was a great deal of splintered glass on top of the greenhouse lights that did not break, especially in Peter Reinberg's place, as though the glass had popped out instead of being blown in.

ANGLEWORMS IN PANSY BED.

How can we get rid of angleworms in our pansy bed, which is outside, shaded by a pergola? A. J. K.

There are a number of worm eradicators on the market in liquid form, which, watered on the beds, will make the worms come to the surface hurriedly. You can work air-slaked lime among the plants; this will help to keep them away. Or, if preferred, slake some fresh stone lime in a barrel, fill with water and apply the clear liquid. This will not hurt the plants and it will surely kill all the worms that it reaches. C. W.

ORCHIDS

SEASONABLE NOTES.

Cattleya Labiata.

Cattleya labiata has buds in the larger sheaths well advanced and many will be in flower toward the end of September. I often wonder what we would do for cattleya flowers in fall and early winter were labiata taken away. Yet it is not so many years ago that it was one of the so-called lost orchids. It is a mistake to materially reduce the water supply for labiatas until the flowers have been cut. Give a liberal quantity until that time; then gradually reduce it. As the plants come into flower, move them to the coolest part of the house, where they will not be exposed to the sun's rays. As there will soon be many orchids in flower, where a collection is grown, it pays to keep a small division especially for plants in flower. With a close and somewhat cooler temperature, they keep much better than in the atmosphere which suits the growing plants.

Speaking of C. labiata, this is the cattleya par excellence for any one just starting in orchid culture in a small way. It is as easy to grow as the geranium, and a special house is not needed for it. The demand for cattleya flowers steadily grows, and any one with a few pans or baskets in flower will find them excellent for store decoration, for use in designs, or in groups at any of the exhibitions. So far as the initial cost goes, the grower can generally get back his money after the first crop of flowers.

Cattleya Dowiana Aurea.

The beautiful yellow cattleya, Dowiana aurea, starts to flower about the end of September, flowering for several months where a few dozen plants are grown. Continue to water them freely until the blooms are cut, after which time careful treatment through the winter is necessary. Any overdose of water in dark weather is liable to kill the plants. Keep them well up to the glass at the warmer end of the house, letting them get a good deal of sun. Never mind if the leaves get pale in color, as well as the bulbs. The dark grown ones are not those which bloom freely, and, furthermore, they go to pieces quickly in the winter unless handled with great care.

Various Cattleyas.

Some of the late summer cattleyas, such as Harrisonia, Luddemanniana, Loddigesii, Leopoldii, granulosa, Eldorado, Gaskelliana and bicolor, are now out of flower or soon will be. Give each of them a good rest before overhauling and repotting them. It is better to see the new growths pushing and the roots peeping before repotting. Use clear osmunda fiber for all cattleyas, and the coarser brands are the best; they wear better than the soft, spongy samples, which also hold the water rather too long. After flowering and before repotting, give the plants any necessary cleaning. Thrips are liable to deform some flowers where fumigation is neglected; especially is this the case with plants grown near the roof of the house. A couple of fumigations before the labiatas open will clean out any of these pests, which annually destroy large quantities of orchid flowers.

Laelia Anceps.

Laelia anceps is now growing strongly and the roots want a good supply of water. The flower spikes will be quite well advanced, especially in the colored varieties. As a rule, the white forms flower the latest. While white cattleyas are generally weak in comparison with the colored ones, the white forms of Laelia anceps are in nearly every case much more vigorous than the colored ones and produce much stronger flower stalks, which also have better keeping qualities in a cut state. These laelias, as well as majalis, autumnalis, acuminata and others, like a light, airy house and resent anything like a close atmosphere. They want only a light shade; when grown in heavy shade they grow beautifully but flower poorly. They should have the colder end of the cattleya house in winter, but any wanted for Christmas can be given a little more heat.

Calanthes.

Calanthes will still be in active growth. They still need an abundant water supply, with manure water twice a week. Cow or sheep manure, with some soot added, strained through a bag, is a safe manure for these and many other orchids. An oversupply of water is usually the cause of black spot on the leaves, while a damp, clammy atmosphere, without fire heat, will further aggravate it. Try to give them a little fire heat every night and on all dull, damp, cold days. The night temperature for them should be 70 degrees.

Saccolabium Bluntii, Flowered by Julius Roehrs Co.

Cattleya Harrisoniana with Fifty-Five Blooms, Flowered by Julius Roehrs Co.

This can be reduced 5 degrees as the foliage commences to turn yellow.

Cymbidiums.

Some of the cymbidiums can now be repotted. Such varieties as eburneum, Lowianum, Lowianum eburneum, eburneo-Lowianum and several others are best overhauled at this season. The cymbidiums, like the phaius, calanthes, sobralias, thunias and some other orchids, succeed better in good fibrous loam, from which all the finer particles have been shaken out, than in fine fern fiber. A compost of half fiber and loam answers well. Give them liberal drainage and water them with great care after repotting, so as not to rot the living roots. Some coarse sand and lumpy charcoal may be added to the compost with advantage. Cymbidiums are beautiful orchids and the lasting qualities of the flowers are equaled by but few other varieties. They need a moderately cool house; 52 to 55 degrees in winter is sufficiently high.

Odontoglossums.

It is better to wait until the end of the really hot weather before repotting any of the odontoglossums requiring it. There will be few now in flower unless it may be an occasional grande or two, which make a nice show in fall. The crispum types now are practically flowerless. The softest texture of fern fiber, to which is added some chopped sphagnum moss, makes a good potting mixture. It is better not to top-dress with live sphagnum. It looks nice and plants with growing moss are attractive, but the moss harbors too many of the small shell snails, which will work havoc with the flower spikes as they appear. Keep the plants shaded from direct sunlight after repotting, and be sure to pot firmly.

Dendrobiums.

Some varieties of dendrobiums, such as formosum giganteum and Phalaenopsis Schroederianum, will already be flowering or will have spikes well advanced. These two useful commercial sorts succeed well in small, shallow pans, and want a warm, moist house to grow in. As the spikes advance, move them into slightly cooler and drier quarters. The earliest nobiles and some of the hybrids now have the pseudo-bulbs well made up, and by the end of September they can be given a cooler and more airy house in which to ripen up. Plants on which bulbs are only partially developed should still be grown hot and moist, and a syringing overhead about 3 o'clock, closing the houses to bottle up the sun heat will give them just the atmosphere they like.

East Indian Orchids.

East Indian orchids are less popular than they were twenty-five or thirty years ago. They embrace many beautiful varieties which used to be features at the exhibitions. There seems to be a reaction in their favor, which I am pleased to note. Of course, they will never rival the cattleyas, oncidiums, cypripediums, etc., commercially, but for people finding pleasure in a collection they are quite fascinating. Phalaenopsis are the most popular, and they are becoming more of a market flower each year, especially in California and around the big eastern cities. These, and other East Indian orchids, while they enjoy considerable shade and a lot of heat and humidity in the growing season, should now have more light and less moisture in the air, as well as at the roots. Included in this interesting family are the vandas, aerides, saccolabiums and angraecums. In admitting air, always avoid drafts; they can not stand air like cattleyas without suffering a loss of foliage.

HIS OWN FAULT.

Two young employees of a florist in Philadelphia, who are supposed to be variously employed in the rear of the establishment while the boss looks after things in the front, were recently startled by the appearance of the "old man" while they were engrossed in a game of checkers.

The proprietor was justly indignant. "How is it," he demanded, "that I hardly ever find you fellows at work when I come out here?"

"I know," volunteered one of the youths; "it's on account of those rubber heels you insist on wearing."—Harper's Magazine.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

The Question of Feeding.

September is a busy month for the mum grower. All the plants are rushing into bud, and side shoots spring into being, as it would seem, over night. This means that the plants must be gone over carefully, in order to keep them in the straight and narrow path where they belong.

What feeding is needed must be done during the next few weeks, as it is impossible to continue feeding much after the buds show color. The question of feeding chrysanthemums is an especially important one and many otherwise good growers seem to be all at sea as to what and when and how much to feed their plants. This matter has been discussed at considerable length in these columns in years past and it seems hardly worth while at this time to go into details again, but certain points may always be considered in order.

When to Begin Feeding.

As regards the time to feed, we begin to feed after the plants have been benched about ten weeks. At the end of this time they have made plenty of roots in the bench and are in excellent condition to take up nourishment. Feed, at first, about once a week or so, alternating between natural fertilizers and chemicals. The chemicals most largely employed for this purpose are nitrate of soda, sulphate of ammonia and nitrate of potash. I prefer the two last named to the nitrate of soda. A safe proportion of any of these fertilizers is at the rate of a 4-inch pot to a 50-gallon barrel of water, making sure that the crystals are all dissolved before applying to the plants.

During the month of September our plants have no clear water at all, except at times when the bench may get dry in spots without necessitating a complete watering.

As I have many times stated, the condition of the plants themselves is the best guide as to how much feeding can safely be carried on without injuring the plants or without being wasteful in the matter.

Effects of an Overdose.

A heavy dose of any liquid will kill the root hairs which are the feeding roots of the plants, and will do much more harm than good. Such feeding is an absolute loss and the plants would be much better had the grower not given anything at all.

The proportion of natural fertilizer is at a rate of about a bushel to a barrel. This information is more for the small grower or the beginner, as the big grower, with his large tanks and pumping supply, is able to figure out his own formula. This fertilizer can be allowed to stand in the barrel for a couple of days and, after the water has been drawn off, the barrel can be filled again and in a week it will be ready for use once more.

Some growers use chicken manure, which runs high in nitrogen, but it has such caustic properties that it must be used with a great deal of care. The best way to apply this fertilizer, I think, is to mix a little of it with cow manure.

When to Stop Feeding.

Many flowers have been ruined by overfeeding—so many, in fact, as to cause some growers to omit the feeding altogether. This is not progress, since it is only by our mistakes that we learn for the future. The leaves are the best indication as to whether the plants are getting too much or too little feeding. If they are quite large, black-green in color and so brittle that they can be snapped apart at a touch, you may be assured that the plant has gotten about all the nitrogen it can possibly use and feeding may be discontinued. So long as this condition does not prevail, it is reasonably safe to continue feeding.

It is a good point to discontinue feeding on each variety as the color shows well in the bud. By that time most of the petals are formed. While some growers, who are looking for the last fraction of an inch in size, will continue feeding until the flower is half developed, this is not safe and the average grower does not need to take such chances.

Housing the Field Plants.

We are running now into colder nights and may get frost at any time; therefore, any plants that have been growing outdoors during the summer should be housed immediately. Even though frost does not occur in September, we generally get some heavy rains in the latter part of the month, which spoil the foliage and harm the plants considerably.

The houses in which plants are growing should not be allowed to run below 40 to 45 degrees; 45 to 50 degrees would be even better. If, however, the outside temperature is running low, do not close up the house with the idea of saving the heat. Chrysanthemums like, above everything else, a dry, buoyant atmosphere when the flowers are developing. Leave several inches of air on in the ridge and run a line of steam around if necessary, to keep up the temperature.

Mums at All Seasons.

We have been cutting Golden Glow and Smith's Advance for the last two weeks, though the prices so far have not been such as to cause anyone to become wildly hilarious. For profitable sales we need the October days, clear and cold, with a touch of frost at night. When the forest trees take on their glorious tints of gold and yellow, people's thoughts seem naturally to turn to the chrysanthemum as a part of their color schemes.

Every year we see it recorded how mums are coming in earlier and later than ever before, till today, if one wishes, it is by no means impossible to have mums at any season of the year.

I notice that in the schedule of prizes for the International Horticultural Show in London, May 22, 1912, provision is made for twelve bunches of chrysanthemums, in at least six varieties, and I have not the least doubt that whoever sees this show will see quite a large exhibit in this class, proving that the mum, to paraphrase Kipling, "knows no east and knows no west"—knows no particular season for flowering. Chas. H. Totty.

WHITE ANTS IN MUM SOIL.

I have an entirely new bed of chrysanthemums, outdoors, and I am bothered with white ants. Will you kindly give me some advice as to how to get rid of them? The only reason for the trouble that I can give is that I spaded in fresh cow manure that was unclean. My location is southern Louisiana.

L. M.

Possibly some southern grower who has had experience with white ants can give better information on this subject than I can. I would state, however, that if L. M. will use Paris green or arsenic, mixing it with corn meal or some other cereal of a like character, and scattering it on the soil, this will in many cases clean out the ants, and it will also destroy sowbugs. It is not at all probable that the ants originally came from the cow manure. In most cases, like Topsy, they "just grow," but their presence, when they do get here, is exceedingly real and unwelcome. Chas. H. Totty.

NEW ENGLAND DAHLIA SHOW.

The annual exhibition of the New England Dahlia Society was held at Horticultural hall, Boston, September 15 to 17. Neither in extent nor quality was the exhibition up to the average. The hot, dry summer, attacks of the chinch-bug, and then a sharp frost the morning before the show opened, all tended to reduce the number of exhibits. Still there were sufficient to fill the main exhibition hall. The society should strive to break away from the stereotyped rows of flowers in small bottles and give more prominence to tables decorated with dahlias, baskets, wreaths, etc., which are now ignored. At present, the dahlia here has little value as a cut flower and there is a grand chance for the society to better its status.

The H. F. Michell Co., of Philadelphia, had large trumpet vases well arranged of their new single Century dahlias, Golden Century, Fringed Century, Gladys, Mrs. J. C. Hance, Eckford Century, and the double Dorothy Peacock; also the fine gladiolus, Kunderdi Glory. J. K. Alexander, of East Bridgewater, was the largest exhibitor, nearly half filling the hall. His collection embraced hundreds of varieties and every known type. Some of his best cactus sorts were: Ella Kramer, Whirlwind, Mrs. Grinstead, Dainty, Ivanhoe, Floradora, Gazelle, White Swan, H. F. Robinson, Jeannette, Lady Colin Campbell, The King, Volker, C. G. Wilkins and Effective. The same exhibitor had a large collection of phloxes and gladioli. He was first for the finest display of dahlias.

The Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. had two large tables with a choice collection, including many novelties. In decoratives, Souv. de Gustave Doazon, Gentry, Gigantea, Jeanne Charmet, Mme. Van den Daele, John R. Baldwin, Mrs. C. Turner and Mephisto were noteworthy. The peony-flowered type was well represented, King Edward VII being noteworthy. In cactus sorts the following had many admirers: Ethel Yeatman, Lady Muriel, Auburn Beauty, Harvest Home, Beryl, Mrs. Egginton, Vidette, Sir A. M. Rivoire, Leda, Janet Coral, F. W. Barnes, Hongree, Mrs. Grosvenor, Joan of Arc. In the big collection of pompons, these were noteworthy: Iris, Jessica, Sensation, Prince Charming, Ruy Blas, Snow Clad, Little Mary, Crimson Queen, Catherine and Henrietta.

Geo. H. Walker had a fine display, not for competition. He had a fine seedling double salmon show variety, Grand Duchess Marie, which last week received a certificate of merit at the Connecticut state fair exhibition. The twelve prize winning cactus from Geo. L. Stillman were: J. H. Jackson, Advance, King of Siam, C. H. Curtis, Mrs. J. Mace, Wm. Marshall, Faunus, Victorian, Juliet, Emperor, The Prince and Mrs. Mortimer. The twelve winning decoratives from W. D. Hathaway, of New Bedford, were: Jeanne Charmet, Le Grand Manitou, Mrs. Edna L. Hathaway, Yellow Colossus, Mme. Van den Daele, Beaute Lyonnaise, Claribel, F. Grinstead, Margaret Desblanc, J. R. Baldwin, Mme. Louis Perrier and Kaiserin Augusta Victoria.

E. F. Dwyer, of Lynn, had some fine blooms. He received awards of recognition for two new fancy decorative varieties. H. R. Wirth had a fine collection of seedling cactus dahlias. Geo. B. Gill took several prizes, including one for the best combination vase of eighteen flowers. He received a first-class certificate for Mrs. E. M. Gill, a fine maroon show variety. The only other certificate went to Mrs. L. A. Tawle, for E. E. Tawle, who was also second for the finest general display.

Arthur Griffin showed a group of his new Salvia Salmon Queen. Among the leading prize winners in addition to these already noted were: C. Lindwall & Co., H. A. Winter, Parker A. Mansfield and John E. Stokes. There was a big attendance all three days of the show and from the way names were being jotted down and orders booked, there would appear to be no diminution of interest in this showy if somewhat uncertain fall flower.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE SHOW.

The dahlia show in progress this week at the American Institute, New York, is the eightieth annual exhibition of that organization and, considering the unfavorable character of the weather the growers have had to contend with, it may be classed as the most successful show that ever has been given in New York to feature this late summer flower. Among commercial growers of dahlias, some also showing gladioli, the principal exhibitors are George L. Stillman, Westerlo, R. I.; W. P. Lothrop, East Bridgewater, Mass.; J. T. Lovett, Little Silver, N. J.; D. Herbert & Son, Atco, N. J.; W. D. Hathaway, New Bedford, Mass.; John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, N. Y., and E. S. Miller, Wading River, N. Y. These growers made large and fine exhibits, constituting the principal part of the show and capturing all the awards in the classes open to them.

E. S. Miller.

Among the amateurs the leading exhibitors were P. W. Popp, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; James Kennedy, Deal Beach, N. J.; Wm. Duckham, Madison, N. J.; Anthony Bauer, Deal Beach; W. Dowlin, Seabright, N. J., and J. T. Burns, New Canaan, Conn. These had fine displays and were all among the prize winners. In the classes for its specialties the Julius Roehrs Co. made excellent and premium winning entries. Not for competition Roehrs staged many new orchids and other plants. Other trade exhibits not for competition included a large display of water lilies from Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia; Roses Radiance and Sunburst, Carnation Wodenethe, also Smith's Advance, Monrovia and ten vases of early flowering chrysanthemums from C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; Gladiolus Kunderdi Glory from Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, awarded a certificate.

Fruits and vegetables constituted a large and interesting part of the show. The principal exhibitors of fruits were W. S. Teator, Upper Red Hook; W. P. Masten, Pleasant Valley; Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester; C. C. Corby, Montclair; Townley Produce Farm, Elizabeth, N. J., and J. G. Kennedy, Tenafly, N. J. Vegetables were shown almost to perfection by Messrs. Kennedy, Bauer, Stevens, Inglis, Dowlin, Headly, Townley Farm, the Long Island Experimental Station and others.

The manager of the show was Will Rickards. The judges were Messrs. McNicol Reagan, Turner, McKenzie and Duff. J. Austin Shaw.

A VISIT TO E. S. MILLER.

A visit to Wading River last week, sixty-five miles out from New York, on Long Island, found E. S. Miller, of that ancient and attractive village, in the rush of digging his gladioli and gathering his fruit, for there is about everything that heart could wish on the old farm of his ancestors. Mr. Miller is recovering from the accident that laid him up for some time and looks good for another half century. I. S. Hendrickson, president of the American Gladiolus Society, was a visitor here September 8. Fifty acres of Mr. Miller's 150-acre farm is devoted to gladioli, lilies, irises, vines and similar stock. There are 250 gladiolus seedlings, the best of which are No. 88, white; No. 117, scarlet; No. 343, yellow; No. 59, cherry and lavender; No. 91, salmon; No. 144, brilliant scarlet; No. 148, cream; Fascination, pink, and Dazzler, an immense scarlet. Mr. Miller has nearly a million salable gladiolus bulbs. None of the flowers are cut to send to the wholesale cut flower market. There are acres of Madeira and cinnamon vines, and hardy lilies in great variety. There are five varieties of the yellow calla. Mr. Miller says stock never looked better, notwithstanding the long drought. Wading River is one and one-half miles from the L. I. R. R. experimental farm, where they are demonstrating the grand results possible in the cultivation of scrub oak soil.

DETROIT.The Market.

The market has been flooded with all kinds of stock and there has been plenty of everything to supply the light demand. Roses are being received in large quantities, but most of the stock is of the short grade. The long stock is all cleaned up daily, with not enough to go around. Easter lilies are coming in quantity and are cleaning up well for this season of the year. Asters are in heavy supply and some fine stock is to be had, but, nice as they are, the dealers report the demand slow. Funeral work is light. There have been few large funerals this summer and every florist knows that it takes the big jobs to keep the stock moving at this time of the year.

Carnations are again in the market, but a good part of the stock is short-stemmed and, while there are so many asters, this grade of stock does not move out rapidly. Chrysanthemums are with us again and a fine lot of the early varieties are to be had. Gladioli have been with us all summer in large quantities, but last week they have been received in less abundance and they have been moving out nicely. The usual quantity of outdoor stock is still coming in and moving slowly.

That we are going to have everything our own way soon is the opinion of the trade, for this week started out nicely. President Taft was with us September 18 and his coming seemed to put new life into the trade.

Club Meeting.

A lively meeting of the Florists' Club was held September 18. Committees for 1911-12 were appointed as follows:

Auditing—Albert Sylvester, chairman; Michael Bloy, Albert Pochelon.

Essay—Hugo Schroeter, chairman; J. F. Sullivan, Albert Pochelon.

Exhibits—F. Danzer, chairman; Thomas Browne, Albert Pochelon, M. Bloy, Charles Plumb.

Entertainment—Robert Rahaley, chairman; Walter Taepke, Louis Charvat, A. Sylvester, Wm. Hielscher.

Various Notes.

J. Breitmeyer's Sons expect to open their beautiful new store about September 30.

W. B. Brown supplied the palms and decorations for the Taft banquet at Wayne pavilion September 18.

The palms and flowers for the fall opening of the Crowley-Milner Co. were supplied by B. Schroeter.

G. Pedrick, of Walkerville, is one of the most regular attendants at the club meetings.

Norman Sullivan spent several days traveling through Michigan in an auto last week, making Grand Rapids the principal stopping point.

The McHugh Floral Co. has built a small show house in the rear of the store, giving much additional display room.

Murray T. Patterson and his bride of a few weeks have returned from England, where the wedding took place.

Richard Mach, who until recently was in the employ of Breitmeyer's, has purchased from P. Hildebrand the greenhouse and store at 66 Clippert avenue.

It is a pretty discouraging proposition to keep up the decoration in a florist's window all through the dull summer months; nevertheless, this is just what Walter Taepke has done. The large show window has been prettily trimmed all summer.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange quarters have been given a new coat of white paint and the whole establishment looks spick and span, ready for business. H. S.

PROVIDENCE.The Market.

Business showed a slight improvement last week over the preceding one, but hardly enough to make any material difference in the general situation. However, with the hurrying back of the fashionable set from the seashore, country and the mountains, and the approach of cooler weather with its accompaniment of dances, receptions, dinners and other social functions, there will be a steady increase in the demand for flowers. Asters have passed their height and the first of the state-ly chrysanthemums are beginning to grace the show windows. A few early carnations are also in evidence, while roses are showing better form. Prices still maintain the summer schedule, but will begin to stiffen in a few days.

Various Notes.

A violent tornado, which left behind it a path fifty feet wide, tore across Barrington just after 1 o'clock Monday afternoon, September 11, and did much damage to trees and shrubbery. The duration of the infant cyclone was brief, but the funnel-shaped cloud lifted the roofs of several greenhouses owned by Walter S. Nichol at Hampden Meadows. After the blast passed the roofs settled back, but more than 500 panes of glass were shattered and the coverings were all askew.

Two heavy frosts visited various parts of the state on the nights of September 13 and 14 and did considerable damage to market gardeners and many of the florists who had not taken in all their field stock. Asters were especially caught.

Louis J. Reuter, of Westerly, was a visitor at New York last week.

Bert Wesson, employed by William Hay at his Clemence street store, had a narrow escape from losing a part of his hand a few days ago. He got a rose briar in one of his fingers, blood poisoning developed and only by prompt and heroic measures was the hand saved.

The Providence Seed Co. received a large shipment of Dutch bulbs last week.

William Appleton received a large consignment of palms and decorative plants last week.

William Jurgens, of Newport, was a visitor in this city last Monday. He announces that he will sail for Hamburg September 28 and will be absent for two months.

Albert Holscher is contemplating a trip to the Argentine Republic to arrange for a shipment of orchids for his new orchid house, which he is adding to his range on Hartford avenue.

The work of fitting up the new wholesale flower market was commenced Thursday of last week and the market will be ready to open October 1.

Robert Greenlaw, representing the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., of Philadelphia, was a recent visitor in this city.

A large mirror fell in the store of Johnston Bros. a few days ago and was completely destroyed. A large marble counter slab was also broken by the fall.

L. A. Jillson has been making a large display of choice dahlias at 86 Richmond street.

Edward Brooks, of T. J. Johnston & Co., is enjoying a vacation trip in the country.

W. B. King, of Apponaug, is bringing in the first carnations of the season. They are looking good.

Two large consignments of Dutch bulbs were received last week by W. S. Pino.

Otto Carlson, employed by the Everett Forestry Co., fell from a tree which he was trimming in the Swan Point cemetery and fractured both wrists and was severely shaken.

John Burke, of the Burke Rose Co., was a visitor in Worcester, Springfield and Sturbridge, Mass., last week.

John W. Kelley, of Fall River, was recently in Providence purchasing supplies, having recently started in the retail business in that city.

William Appleton had the decorations for the opening of the millinery department of the Boston Store, and the table and hall decorations at the Narragansett hotel for the banquet to the Society of the Army of the Potomac, in annual convention.

Patrick C. Henry, Jr., of this city, has brought suit against George Johnson & Son for $1,500, for injuries received by falling from a tree which he was trimming while in their employ.

At the monthly meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society an offer was received from Mrs. Burke-Roche of a $30 prize to the gardener who would propagate and exhibit at the June show of the society a yellow rose similar in color to the Marechal Niel, but which will have a straight and upright stem. Mrs. Roche also offered a $15 prize for a yellow carnation.

WINTERING CANNAS.

What is the best way to keep canna bulbs? We had poor luck keeping them last winter. Where is the best place to keep them? Do they need to be dug before the frost kills the foliage?

S. & L.

Allow the plants to be cut down by frost before digging them. You need not be in a great hurry, as the first killing frost is generally followed by some hot weather. Select a warm, sunny day on which to dig them. Let the soil dry out fairly well before taking them under cover. Cannas are often wintered under the greenhouse benches. This is not, however, a good plan. There is bound to be more or less drip and, the atmosphere being moist, the plants are liable to start prematurely. Any dry shed or cellar will winter them, so long as the temperature keeps a little above freezing. Shelves are best to store the roots on. Do not shake the soil away from the roots. In fact, it is a good plan, if they are bare, to store them in boxes with some moderately dry soil. Any dry potato or root crop cellar will winter cannas. If possible, keep them as far away from the heater as possible. In the event of their being kept near a boiler, it will be necessary to give them a little water at intervals; just sufficient to prevent the roots shriveling. C. W.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

There is nothing new in the market, but the rivers of asters, gladioli and dahlias will soon be dry, and the demand for flowers is surely increasing. We will manage from now on to digest everything fit, somehow, though prices may not exhilarate the growers.

Dahlias are coming now in quantity, and quality, too, is up to the mark. Orchids have fallen and are abundant; 50 cents was top September 16. Shipments are increasing and will continue to do so from now on.

American Beauties are improving rapidly in quality. Prices do not advance, notwithstanding the openings of many theaters and the gradual return of society dames to their New York homes. Other roses than Beauties are fast improving in stem and heads and for selected stock the top quotations are obtainable. The new varieties go quickly and are used for attractive window displays. Lady Hillingdon is a favorite. Killarney, Maryland and Maids are fast improving and the long-stemmed arrivals find a good market. The great bulk of the short-stemmed roses go at any offer. The street men fight shy of asters and gladioli and so the surplus of these goes into the discard. This week will likely see the end of both, though dahlias and the early mums are already crowding them out of the limelight. Slowly but surely the stems of the carnations grow longer and their heads larger, and some worth $2 per hundred are now arriving. Lilies and valley hold their values well. Tritomas, hydrangeas and cosmos are utilized largely for window filling and unless perfect find no market.

Various Notes.

The meeting of the Horticultural Society of New York, September 16, at Bronx park was well attended. The exhibits were few, but the lecture by George V. Nash drew a fine audience. Mr. Nash has just returned, with Mrs. Nash, from a visit to Spokane and other cities of that wonderful apple raising country, and illustrated his lecture with many stereopticon views. He will give this lecture later before the New York Florists' Club. Mr. Nash has bought an orchard tract near Spokane and intends ultimately to locate there with his family.

The fall exhibitions of the American Institute and the Horticultural Society of New York do not clash this year, the former having chosen November 1 to 3 and the latter November 3 to 7. The Madison show will be a hummer, in size and prizes; the date is October 26 and 27. Stamford has chosen dates the same as the New York shows, for its first venture, November 3 and 4. Paterson's show comes September 23, Tarrytown November 1 and 2, and Mt. Kisco, September 29. Elberon has chosen the same dates as Tarrytown, while the Nassau county society has postponed its show to October 11.

John Shore, of Harrison, N. Y., was in the city last week, his first visit in two years.

Anton C. Zvolanek, of Bound Brook, N. J., has sold part of his land to a real estate syndicate and has been adding to his possessions in California, from which state he lately returned.

The great Mineola fair takes place next week and florists' exhibits will be many. Harry Weston will be one of the judges.

Two young florists arrived at Hicksville last week, by the stork route, and Ernest Granz claimed both of them.

Siebrecht & Siebrecht and Kessler Bros. have followed the example of Walter Sheridan and Traendly & Schenck and removed their offices to the back of their stores, adding greatly to room and convenience.

A number of the wholesalers have been visiting the violet growers up the Hudson. Meyer, of Badgley, Riedel & Meyer, says he received the first shipment that reached the New York market this year. Mr. Badgley was rejoicing last week in the arrival of another member for the firm and both mother and son are doing well.

Percy B. Rigby, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., and Mrs. Rigby are back from their vacation in the mountains.

Alex. McConnell is expected back this week from his visit to Europe, where he has mingled business and pleasure for six weeks.

Myer, at Madison avenue and Fifty-eighth street, has completed his decoration of the big store and, with special mirror and lighting effects, he has added greatly to its size and beauty. He was a large buyer of decorative palms at the auction houses September 19.

Arthur T. Boddington has added largely to his seed case conveniences and his building is now complete in every particular.

McKinney had the Ogden-De Forest wedding last week, decorating Trinity church and the home.

George Cotsonas & Co. have moved their office to their upstairs supply department. The business is growing rapidly.

Chas. Weiss, Jr., of Chas. Weiss & Sons, was married September 14 at Terrace Gardens, 200 of his friends attending the reception. Abraham Tishman, formerly with the Growers' Cut Flower Co., is now with Weiss & Sons.

Gunther Bros. are receiving some grand gladioli of a new and unnamed pink variety.

Mrs. C. C. Trepel is now at the helm in the cut flower department of the Bloomingdale store. Mr. Mallon, Jr., is in charge of the Gimbel branch and E. S. Gorney is manager at Loeser's. C. C. Trepel is kept busy buying for his enterprises.

A visit to Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, found everything in apple-pie order, as usual. Not much new building is being done, but the whole range has been put in shipshape and stock of every kind never looked better.

Fred L. Atkins, just home from his European trip, is enthusiastic over the rapid development of the nursery business of Bobbink & Atkins during the present year. Another range of glass is nearing completion and the large new office is needed for the big force now necessary in the transaction of the business.

J. K. Allen reports already receiving large shipments of chrysanthemums. Mr. Allen says the season will be a hummer when it gets started.

Harry Turner, of Greystone, and his bride, who was Miss Alice Donnelly, of Port Washington, have returned from their honeymoon. The wedding occurred August 27.

Rutherford has organized a bowling club for the winter season and is ready for a match with New York. There will be matches later with Astoria and Madison. Regular bowling by the New York club will commence the first Friday in October at Thum's alleys, on which date permanent arrangements will be made for the winter.

J. Austin Shaw.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Trade conditions, though nothing to brag about, showed an improvement over those of the week before. Asters continue to be a great drawback. Business on Monday, September 18, opened well and continued good during the day.

Club Picnic.

From a social standpoint the Florists' Club's picnic, Sunday, September 17, was a great success. The weather was ideal, but even that was no inducement for many to come early. With F. W. Mueller as master of ceremonies, ably assisted by H. V. Hunkel and C. Dallwig, the numerous games came off in good order, to the thorough enjoyment of all present. It is a pity that it turned dark so early, for everyone would have liked to continue to make merry until much later.

The following prizes were awarded:

Clothes pin contest, Miss P. Hunkel.
Nail driving contest, Henry Dobberphul.
Peanut race, Lydia Pohl.
Potato race, first, Gertrude Sommers; second, Miss Mollenhauer.
Apple-eating contest, first, Ruth Holton; second, H. Stappelfeld.
Fat men's race, first, C. C. Pollworth; second, Mr. Retzlaff.
Young men's race, first, Ray Currie; second, Clarence Retzlaff.
Boys' race, first, Bert Retzlaff; second, George Rurde.
Girls' race, first, Ruth Holton; second, Elizabeth Kroseberg.
Ladies' race, Ella Voelzke.
Blindfold game, first, Miss Pohl; second, Miss P. Hunkel.
Sack race, first, Clarence Retzlaff; second, Ray Currie.
Tug-of-war, Fred Holton and John Arnold, captains; Fred Holton's side winning after a hard struggle.

Various Notes.

In the presence of a few intimate friends, Walter Holton, nephew of Fred W. Holton and son of Geo. Holton, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., was married to Miss C. Klabutske, September 13. Walter is holding a responsible position at the salesrooms of the firm mentioned.

Gust Rusch, for the last seven years with the Holton & Hunkel Co., returned September 15 from a four days' trip to Chicago and vicinity, preparatory to opening a wholesale cut flower and supply store at 448 Milwaukee street. The opening date has not been set.

Mr. and Mrs. Nic Zweifel, of North Milwaukee, returned September 17 from their seven weeks' trip, which took them away up into Alaska. When seen at the florists' picnic the same afternoon, they had a lot of interesting news in store for the boys and their companions.

The Florists' Bowling League will, according to present plans, roll the first game October 3.

Among the numerous visitors during fair week, the following made their presence known: James Matthewson, Sheboygan, Wis.; Louis Otto, Neenah, Wis.; C. Haentze, Fond du Lac, Wis.; Gust Meyer, of the Burlington Floral Co., Burlington, Wis., and William Nero, Cedarburg, Wis.

The C. C. Pollworth Co. is looking eagerly forward to the time when the new quarters will be completed, which is only a matter of a few days now.

Holton & Hunkel Co. is cutting a large crop of American Beauties and Killarneys at its Brown Deer place.

The fall openings of the various large dry goods and department stores within the next fortnight are again creating a demand for decorative plants, and some orders have already been booked.

E. O.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

There was a slight improvement in the market last week. The weather in the daytime has been hot during the whole week, but the nights are cooler and the cut of the young stock is considerably better in quality, especially carnations. A great many more carnations are coming in. The supply of asters has decreased and they are now seen only in limited quantities. Dahlias are plentiful, but the demand only calls for the best. The week was noted for the large supply of single tuberose stalks, with the price down to $1.50 per hundred stalks.

Roses are looking fine; the greatest supply is in white and pink Cochetts. There were also good consignments of Killarneys, Richmonds and Marylands. Lilies are cleaning up well; so, also, is lily of the valley. A few yellow mums are coming in, but not many as yet. There are quite a few fall opening decorations this week, which will keep those who handle this branch busy. The retailers are looking forward to cooler weather to steady up the trade.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held an interesting monthly meeting September 14, in the meeting rooms, with twenty-five members present. This meeting was known as the installation meeting. President Cannon started the proceedings at 2 p. m. The auditing committee reported that the books of the secretary and treasurer were correct.

Communications were read from the Chicago Florists' Club, inviting the members to Chicago to attend the Chicago club's twenty-fifth anniversary. The invitation was accepted and Messrs. Smith, Geddes, Halstead and Beneke were appointed a committee on arrangements for the trip.

The matter of appointing a committee to assist the Retail Florists' Association in passing its bill, now before the House of Delegates, was laid over until the October meeting.

The committees on the applications of Robert Winkler and Mathew Schoenberger reported favorably and they were elected to membership. Applications for membership were presented by Charles Young, of St. Louis; J. E. Muldoon, of Kirkwood, Mo., and George Madsen, of Alton, Ill.

In the order of new business the installation of officers took place. President-elect Robert J. Windler had not yet returned from his bridal trip. Vice-President-elect F. Vennemann was duly installed and relieved President Cannon of the chair. Then followed the installation of Secretary Beneke, Treasurer Smith and Trustee Frank Weber, and the new officers proceeded with the meeting.

The question box brought out a good discussion of several important questions.

The next meeting of the club takes place on Thursday afternoon, October 12, and the new officers hope for a large attendance.

Various Notes.

Messrs. Smith, Geddes, Halstead and Beneke will have charge of the Florists' Club's trip to Chicago October 5. Any members of the club wishing to make the trip should send in their names to any member of the committee.

C. C. Sanders is spending a week at West Baden Springs. A few days' rest at the springs should do him much good.

The Ayers Floral Co., George Waldhart and the Metropolitan Floral Co. put in a busy week. The bulk of the work was large funeral designs.

The C. Young & Sons Co. has prepared plans for one of the finest flower establishments in the west end. They will at once put up a building facing Waterman avenue, using 100 feet of frontage, with the store, thirty feet wide, in the center, and plant show houses on each side, each thirty-five feet wide. When completed, Mr. Young says, it will be one of the most attractive establishments in the country. The downtown store, at Fourteenth and Olive streets, will be retained.

The heavy rain and wind storms of Friday, September 15, did considerable damage to fine trees in the parks. J. Shields, on North Florissant avenue, suffered a loss of nearly $2,000 in his greenhouse plant. The show house of the Eggeling Floral Co., in the rear of the store, was also damaged.

William Hartshorne, gardener at the state prison, Joliet, Ill., spent Saturday and Sunday, September 16 and 17, visiting friends in the trade here. Mr. Hartshorne's last visit here was during the world's fair year.

Belleville, Ill., celebrated Belleville day September 15, in which all the florists of that city took part.

Otto Sander, who has an up-to-date flower shop in the Century building, has made many improvements in his store this summer, which make the place quite attractive.

All the Kirkwood growers have nearly completed the housing of their carnations and violets. They expect to have large crops of carnations, but violets will not be such a glut this season, as the plants suffered greatly from the dry, hot summer. There will also be a large cut of sweet peas. A lot of new glass was added at Kirkwood this summer and this should make the consignments large this season.

Among the visitors last week were Paul Berkowitz, of Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia; Arnold Ringier, of W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, and Julius Dilloff, of Schloss Bros., New York.

Charles Young, of the C. Young & Sons Co., spent last week at Harrisburg, Pa., arranging with the McFarland Publicity Service for an elaborate spring catalogue.

J. J. B.

Detroit, Mich.—The contract for the new store and conservatory of L. Bembe Floral Co., Albert Pochelon, proprietor, has been let to Bartholomaei & Son at $18,000.

North Easton, Mass.—The new greenhouse of F. Lothrop Ames, on his Washington street estate, is being stocked under the direction of Henry Eaton, who has charge of the house.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The last week has given us the coldest weather so far experienced this season. Killing frosts occurred September 13 to 15 over quite a wide area, which is an exceptionally early date for New England. While asters and other outdoor flowers were considerably damaged and in some cases ruined, there is still an adequate supply arriving. Prices show some improvement from a week ago, 50 cents per hundred being now about bottom price. The quality at present is excellent. Gladioli are much reduced in number and sweet peas are practically out of the market for the present. Some growers will have flowers from under glass in October, there now being few days in the year when sweet peas are not procurable.

Roses are improving in quality. The colder weather suited them, and the prices are a shade higher. Beauties are good and sell well. So do Mrs. Ward, Lady Hillingdon, the two Killarneys and Prince de Bulgarie. Carnations are still limited in number, but each week sees more growers starting to send them in. Lilies are temporarily in short supply. Valley is in good supply. Golden Glow still has the field practically to itself among mums, but a few whites are seen. Cattleyas are scarce, but a few labiata have appeared. Tuberoses from outdoors are plentiful, but the call for them is light, as it also is for cosmos, gypsophila and other outdoor flowers. Dahlias are not sold much in the markets here; this year they are largely a failure. A few violets are due to arrive this week. There is no great change in the demand for green supplies.

Club Meeting.

The first fall meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, September 19, attracted an attendance of 150 members. Resolutions were presented and adopted for two deceased members, F. R. Mathieson and John F. Flood. The annual picnic report was read and approved. Prof. E. A. White, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, was present and spoke on the desirability of a closer alliance between the club and the floricultural department of the college, in order to advance its interests and improve its value, and a committee, consisting of J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Thomas Roland, Robert Cameron, Peter Fisher, J. A. Pettigrew, Eber Holmes and Wm. Sim, was appointed to act for the club in the matter. Thanks were voted to the Baltimore boys for convention courtesies.

Eight new members were admitted. Vacation experiences included European travel notes by T. J. Gray, Thomas Pegler and J. W. Collins, but these were cut short to allow members to join the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, which was then in session at Horticultural hall. Nearly all the members accepted the invitation of the V. G. A. and heard interesting lectures from David Lumsden, Durham, N. C., on "French and English Systems of Vegetable Forcing," and from Paul Work, Ithaca, N. Y., a stereopticon lecture on marketing.

Exhibits at the club meeting included Lorraine begonias and cyclamens, from W. W. Edgar Co., and Viola cornuta purpurea, from R. & J. Farquhar & Co., the latter receiving a report of merit.

Various Notes.

Not for many years have we had so early and severe a frost as this season. September 14, 1911, will be well remembered by dahlia specialists, of whom we have many near Boston. In some cases whole fields were destroyed, which is a serious loss, not alone in the flowers spoiled, but in the inability to exhibit at the many fairs being held at this season throughout New England, which means reduced selling and advertising opportunities.

The salesmen for the new Boston Flower Sales Co., M. Hambro and A. McAlpine, are handling some excellent carnations from F. P. Putnam and A. A. Pembroke, fine roses from Messrs. Reuter and McAlpine and valley from Wm. Jurgens.

Arnold & Petros, on Boylson street, have had a nice business this summer. They had a splendid vase of long-stemmed Beauties in the center of their window September 16.

S. J. Goddard is first in the market with bunches of the semi-double marguerite, Mrs. F. Sander, which promises to be popular. He also has fine carnations.

H. Hansen, of Malden, through A. H. Carr, is disposing of some well grown pandanus, araucarias and nephrolepis at the Boston Flower Exchange.

Carbone, on Bolyston street, is displaying dahlias attractively arranged in large jardinières.

Matthew F. Ruane, who had the misfortune to break one of his legs September 9, is convalescing nicely at his home in Waltham.

The convention of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America opened at Horticultural hall September 14, with a large attendance. The visitors are being well cared for by the local Market Gardeners' Association.

N. F. Comley is one of the heaviest shippers of asters now to the Boston Co-operative Market. He has sold over 50,000 field-grown carnation plants in the last few weeks.

John Barr's carnations are unusually fine for so early in the season, realizing $2.50 per hundred when many growers have to be content with $1 to $1.50.

W. W. Tailby, of Wellesley, has a fine lot of Gladiolus America at present, though most of the growers are about through cutting.

A. S. Parker, of Stoneham, lost many thousands of fine asters by the frost September 14. Mann Bros. and other large growers were also badly hit.

Albert Roper and Patten & Co., of Tewksbury, and W. D. Howard, of Milford, are among those who are picking excellent carnations at present.

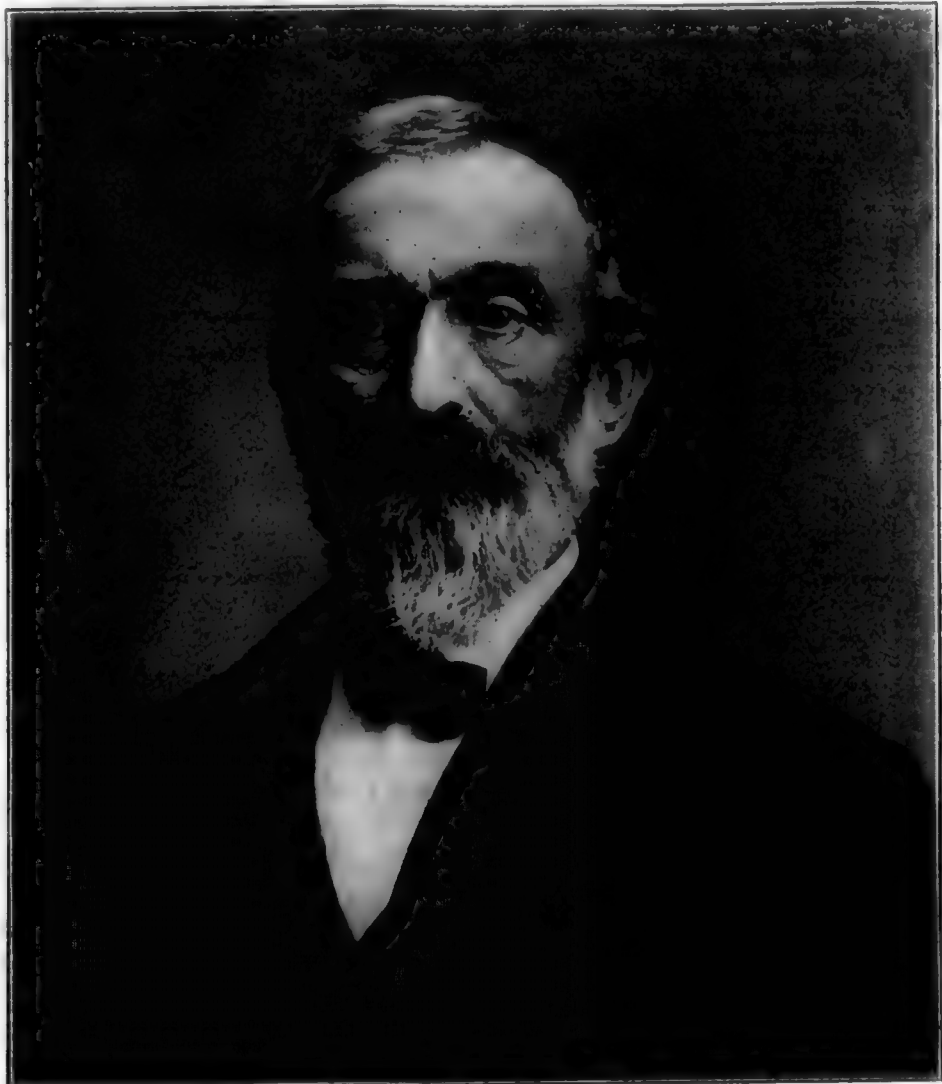

The schedule for the February and spring shows of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be ready in a few days. The number of exhibitions being planned for 1912 is thirteen, an increase of three over 1911.

The New England Dahlia Society held its annual show at Horticultural hall September 15 to 17. An account of it appears in another column.

PAXTON, ILL.

September 11 hail broke 1,500 feet of glass in the establishment of Addems, Morgan & Co. The plant contains 21,000 feet. They were just putting up a new range of four houses, each 238 feet long, and had just completed two. On the north side of these two houses there were not over twenty lights left. At the older houses there was not so much wind and the hail came straighter down, so there was considerable breakage on the south side as well as the north.

The Market.

The cut flower market is fair. There are plenty of cut flowers of all kinds and an especially fine lot of lilies.

Various Notes.

Clare Murphy, daughter of Wm. Murphy, is confined to her room, the result of an accident while on her vacation.

John Bruckner has started into the florists' business at Kennedy Heights.

The new commission firm of Heckman & Ostendorf is flourishing.

The flower show committee is hustling to get the florists into shape to have the finest show on record.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Trade was fairly good last week, for funeral work has been plentiful. Stock continues abundant, but the aster is the main flower depended on. Some nice gladioli still come in and good carnations begin to be seen. Last week came near being the finish of all outdoor stock, for we had about the hardest frost ever known here at this early date.

The New Bedford Horticultural Society closed a most successful flower show September 16. The school garden contest created a great deal of interest. Quite a few local florists exhibited, outdoor stock principally.

E. H. Chamberlain spent several days in Boston last week.

OBITUARY.

John E. Haines.

John E. Haines, one of the oldest florists in the state of Pennsylvania and one of the well known figures in carnation circles, died September 11 at his home at Bethlehem. He was 66 years of age. He had been ill for a long time with consumption.

In 1895 Mr. Haines put up a small greenhouse to grow lettuce and other vegetables, more as a pastime than for a profit. As with so many others who have started in the business in this way, he soon found himself growing cut flowers and specializing on the carnation. He always had been of studious disposition and found that the work of raising seedlings and testing them held particular attractions for him. Shortly he was adding to his glass and devoting all his space, time and attention to the varieties originated on the place. At the meetings of the American Carnation Society he was for several years a quiet, kindly, well-liked figure. One of his peculiarities was that he always brought his seedlings for exhibition packed in a trunk that had been fitted with several trays to carry the blooms. In 1906 he disseminated a red variety bearing his own name. The next year he disseminated jointly with A. J. Guttman the varieties Imperial and Pink Imperial. Star of Bethlehem was a yellow of his raising, and there were several others. Of late years failing health had prevented his usual activity, but he had not ceased to give his attention to the pursuit that gave him so much pleasure.

Great Barrington, Mass.—Dolby Bros., who recently bought the Dellert greenhouses, have since purchased from Michael Pendergast two of the large greenhouses formerly owned by the late Frank G. Tent. These will be moved to the Humphrey street location, where they are making a number of improvements to the property.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.

Officers for 1911: President, George Asmus, Chicago; vice-president, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Officers for 1912: President, R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; vice-president, August Poehlmann, Morton Grove, Ill.; secretary, John Young, Bedford Hills, N. Y.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Annual convention, Chicago, Ill., August 20 to 23, 1912.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.

We both have them.

THE New York Florists' Club invites the S. A. F. to hold the third National Flower Show at New York in the spring of 1913.

THE Railroad Commission in Iowa has ordered a reduction of express rates in that state of approximately fifteen per cent, to go into effect October 30.

ALL properly signed inquiries received by The Review are acknowledged promptly, and answered if the information wanted is procurable, but where the writer's full name and address are not given, no attention can be paid. This reiteration is intended especially for the eyes of L. B. C., New York City; A. C. E., Buffalo, and B. W. A., Media, Pa., whose initials do not correspond to those of any name on the subscription list.

T. GEOFFREY W. HENSLOW, M. A., 7 Victoria street, London, sends The Review a "Schedule of Prizes for the Royal International Horticultural Exhibition, 1912, London." The dates are May 22 to 30 and it is understood a number of American members of the trade are planning to attend. The exhibition is to be held in the grounds of the Royal hospital, Chelsea. There are 428 scheduled classes. Few money premiums are offered, practically all the awards to be cups or medals.

DETROIT JOINT MEETING.

At the convention of the S. A. F. held at Baltimore, a joint conference meeting was held by the American Rose Society, the American Carnation Society and the National Sweet Pea Society. The subject under discussion was an early spring show of all these societies. It was determined to try to unite the Carnation Society and Rose Society in one exhibition, to be held January 10, 1912. At its regular meeting the American Rose Society ratified this action. The Carnation Society, having set a date later in the month, awaited final action by its board of directors, which is given. So that the dates of January 10 to 12, 1912, are fixed for the annual exhibition of the two societies, to be held in Detroit. Philip Breitmeyer has given assurance that everything possible will be done locally to make the exhibition successful. The prize schedule of the Rose Society will be prepared and published without delay.

The two medals of the American Rose Society, awarded to the Minneapolis Rose Society, and at the Annandale Rose Show, have been properly inscribed, cased and delivered. The gold medal voted to M. H. Walsh, Woods Hole, Mass., in recognition of the work done by him in the development of the climbing rose, is under way. This is the second gold medal awarded in the history of the American Rose Society.

Benj. Hammond, Sec'y.

DAHLIA AND GLADIOLUS.

At the meeting organizing the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association it was resolved that an adjourned one should be held in Indianapolis, September 26, for the purpose of perfecting plans for the future of the association and of making a first exhibition of flowers. To accomplish this purpose, every arrangement is being made to make a success of that meeting.

The exhibition of flowers will be made at the store of A. Wiegand & Sons, 1610 North Illinois street. Exhibits sent to that address will be properly taken care of and placed in position by them.

Arrangements have been made with the Denison hotel as headquarters for the meeting, with accommodations ranging from $1 to $4 per day.

No premiums will be offered this year. This meeting, however, will be preliminary to one to be held in Chicago next year, at which the society will offer a full premium list. The association hopes to have a large display of flowers at this meeting and will much appreciate an exhibit from any reader. Those interested in growing dahlias and gladioli are solicited to become members of the association.

The Great Central Market.

There has been a rather considerable change in the market situation since last report, due almost entirely to an interruption of the cut of asters. The heavy storm, September 18, resulted in reducing the local aster supply to a mere fraction of what it has been in recent weeks and the following days saw the market only lightly supplied with asters that were good enough to meet the requirements of the trade. The same factor also curtailed the rapidly diminishing receipts of gladioli. As one wholesaler expressed it, "the asters and gladioli were buried in the same grave." Since bright, warm weather followed the storm, asters were again arriving in steadily increasing quantity by the middle of the week, so that unless the predicted change in weather conditions materializes soon there will be plenty of asters again within a few days.

Business shows a steady, though not rapid improvement. The number of buyers heard from has increased notably within the last week. Pretty nearly everyone is now calling for stock, but not in large quantities as yet.

The supplies of American Beauties have decreased and this, coupled with some increase in the demand, has resulted in some hardening of prices. Most of the orders call for the better grades of roses. There is only light demand for short roses and these continue to sell at prices that are extremely low. The bulk of the buyers want the medium length. Although warm weather has resulted in considerable open stock, the quality of most of the roses is unusually good for this date. Maryland, in particular, has come to the front strongly in the last few days. Bulgaria also shows much improvement. Killarney and White Killarney leave nothing to be desired. Moderate quantities are seen of Double Pink Killarney and Deep Pink Killarney, the latter being among the most popular roses at

HERE'S WHERE YOU CAN GET KILLARNEYS

Fine Heads on Every Length of Stem

It is well for buyers to remember that usually the longer the stem, the larger and finer the flower, but our Killarneys and White Killarneys carry fine heads on all lengths—good flowers on the short stems and the very finest of flowers on the "special" lengths. We always have a large supply. None better anywhere, and few so good. Would you like to have us "show" you? Send an order and we will do it.

BEAUTIES

Our cut of Beauties is large and extra fine. Most of the cut runs to medium and long stems. Large heads, splendid color, strong stems, perfect foliage. Those who are looking for a thoroughly satisfactory supply of Beauties should get acquainted here.

CARNATIONS

The new crop of Carnations is earlier and finer than the first crop ever has been before. These are as good flowers as one could ask at this date and the stems are good, long enough for any purpose you are likely to want them for. Order some today and see for yourself.

Orchids

Splendid Cattleyas always on hand, awaiting your order to ship. A big cut from now on.

Mums

Yellow and white, excellent stock and offered at prices that are low for earliest good mums.

Fancy Valley

We ALWAYS can supply, but why not place a standing order, for shipment (with the other stock you need) every day, every other day, or twice a week?

Lilies

We can supply all the Easter Lilies you can use. Try us any day in the year.

Asters

You still can get good Asters here, though the Aster season is on the wane.

HEADQUARTERS FOR ALL GREENS

Here you get the best Fancy Ferns, all the Smilax and Asparagus strings you want, Sprengeri and Plumosus bunches, Mexican Ivy, Galax.

the moment. Mrs. Jardine is fine. Richmond, though plentiful and good, is not in strong request. A few Melody are arriving, but have not interfered with the sale for Perle.

For the last few days of last week the carnation presented the worst problem the wholesalers had to face. The receipts were much heavier than is usual at this date, and buyers were using principally asters, which were so cheap and so good that there was little call for carnations. By far the greater part of the receipts had short stems and the average prices returned to some of the growers made shipping hardly worth while. While asters were in light supply at the beginning of this week, the better carnations were doing fairly well, but the shorts continued to suffer.

Chrysanthemums came in much more abundantly towards the close of last week and there was a decline in prices which has been only partly recovered this week. There are several times as many Golden Glow as October Frost, and consequently whites make better prices than yellows. The mums are not bringing as good prices as stock of equal quality has in the first weeks of previous seasons. There continue to be large supplies of Easter lilies, selling cheaply. The shortage of cattleyas has been relieved and prices have retrograded. Valley is abundant. Some first-class dahlias are seen, mainly of the show and decorative types, but there is little sale for them. Violets have arrived. The storm which interrupted the cutting of asters also destroyed most of the other outdoor stock, so that the market is not nearly so heavily burdened with

OPENING SEPT. 30

On the above date we will open our Wholesale Cut Flower and Florists' Supply House. We expect to carry all through their seasons a good supply of all Cut Flowers, which will include a very select grade of Violets, Beauties, Valley, White Lilac, Sweet Peas, Orchids, etc.; in fact, our aim is to supply any flower that is on the market. Our long experience in this business gives us a knowledge of where to obtain the kind and quality of flowers you want, and with your co-operation, Mr. Retailer, we will be able to give you the kind of service you desire; and to the out-of-town florists, you will always find us ready to give you the same service and prompt shipments as though you were in Cleveland yourself. If we should happen to be out of anything we will always try and buy it for you, either in flowers, supplies or something outside of the flower business.

Remember, when you are dealing with us you have two markets to draw on, for if a certain flower is scarce here we will always call on Pittsburgh to help us out; this will certainly be of some benefit to you. Also, bear in mind we are importers, manufacturers and jobbers in Florists' Supplies. We can always supply your wants at lowest figures.

WANTED—Experienced young man. Highest wages and good opportunity guaranteed.

The Market.

Business is rather quiet all along the line. There is plenty of stock coming in. A few mums are making their appearance. Funeral work and a stray wedding here and there keep one or two stores busy.

Friedly Seriously Ill.

Frank A. Friedly, secretary of the Florists' Club and superintendent of the Gasser plant at Rocky River, has been seriously ill since Tuesday, September 12. While working in the greenhouse he stepped on a rusty nail and it has caused him no end of trouble. Two physicians attended him for three days and finally avoided lockjaw. At this writing he is still unable to see anyone. September 18 he was in his right mind for the first time since the accident.

Various Notes.

Everything at the J. M. Gasser plant, also with the F. R. Williams Co., is in good shape for fall business.

Charles Russell has just returned from a ten days' visit through the East.

H. P. Knoble has moved into his city home, from Rockhurst, for the winter.

Kirchuens were busy with a large order for the funeral of the wife of the president of the Troy Laundry Co.

Geo. W. Smith, of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange, has moved into his new home on Lake avenue, facing Edgewater park.

Timothy Smith, of the Smith & Feters Co., was confined to his home a few days last week by illness.

an ideal location for an up-to-date flower store, as it is in a progressive, growing section of the city, and I think it will not be long before a combination will be effected that will cause this sign to be hung to the breeze: "Steinbrenner Bros.," and then will be added still more of the vim and vigor that are bound to make the neighbors sit up and take notice.

Harry Dow, seedsman and florist, on Lorain avenue, although a new firm in an old location, is making rapid progress and the future looks bright. This firm will shortly add an entirely new, modern front to the store and will make other needed improvements which will give them the desired prestige on the street. "Watch us grow" would be a good sign for this energetic house.

At the Ehrbar Floral Emporium, which is ably managed by Frank Brendel, a former Pittsburgh boy, we found them just finishing an exceedingly busy day of funeral work. Here they use up the products of the Ehrbar farm, which has gone heavily into the growing of hardy flowers and annuals of all kinds. This farm is a pet institution, lately started by Fred Ehrbar, the proprietor of the company, who is laying the foundations now for a future revenue which can never be disturbed by bank failures.

Wilhelmy Bros., on Lorain avenue, were busy with funeral work, of which they get a large share. Their store has lately been improved by the addition of a commodious ice-box and several counters, tables and an office desk, all finished in white enamel, which gives the whole place a decidedly pleasing and neat appearance. This firm also operates an attractive store in Lake-wood, a wealthy section of the city that is growing rapidly.

At the establishment of Knoble Bros., on West Twenty-fifth street, was found a thoroughly up-to-date "parlor store," which would be a credit to any city. Advertising is brought down to a science here and the results are manifest. Miss Knoble, who was in charge at the time, was kept busy answering telephone calls and orders for Boston ferns, which were a "special" that day. This is the home of the "dollar box," and the legend, "Knoble's $3 Spray," looks at you in bold type from every prominent newspaper.

Since the Ohio Floral Co. moved across the street to its present location, on West Twenty-fifth street, the firm's business has made rapid strides. Although the new store is four times the size of the old one, there is none too much room. One of the best features here is a large, light workroom, where all the designs and decorations are assembled, keeping all the mess and litter out of the front show room.

Albert Hart, who is snugly located on Lake avenue, has one of the most compact and up-to-date greenhouse ranges on the west side. Everything in the greenhouses is spick and span, showing everywhere painstaking care and personal interest in small details. As a consequence there are many interested visitors of the better class, who become regular customers. One of the improvements being made here now is the construction of cement walks throughout all the houses, for the benefit of customers and employees alike.

Mrs. Lincoln Brown, who has a most attractive store at the junction of Lake avenue and Detroit street, is sanguine as to the prospects for a good season and has already booked several good-sized decorations for the "buds" that will blossom out this fall. Mrs. Brown is well pleased with her location. The addition of several large business blocks, to be built in the near future, will make the location quite a business center.

"Hart Bros." is the new sign that looks invitingly at prospective customers out on Detroit street. Herman Hart, who has conducted a successful business in this city for the last twenty-five years, has sold his interest in the business to two of his sons, who will carry on the business in the future. They are hustling, wide-awake young men and have already started to put in several improvements, with an eye to expanding the already large business.

Away out on Clark avenue, near "Ducktown," is a surprisingly neat store and a range of houses, presided over by Mr. and Mrs. L. Walters. They have built up an excellent home trade, which is ever on the increase. By dint of hard, concentrated effort, this couple have built up a paying business where others would fail through lack of confidence and pluck.

LA CROSSE, WIS.

This city and surrounding districts were swept by a destructive hail storm on the afternoon of September 11, and the florists, as usual, suffered the heaviest loss.

The greenhouses of Theodore Kie-nahs, 1300 Madison street, were the worst battered by the storm. A total of 15,000 square feet, or half of the total number of square feet in the greenhouses, were completely shattered. He estimates his loss at about $1,000, with insurance at about half the sum.

The La Crosse Floral Co. was the next heaviest loser, 5,700 square feet of glass being broken, with a loss estimated at over $600.

The Oak Grove cemetery greenhouses were also badly damaged by the heavy hail stones, about 2,500 feet of glass being smashed. Officers of the association were unable to state the exact amount of the loss, but it is estimated at over $300.

The greenhouses of the Salzer Seed Co., at Adams and Eighth streets, escaped with little damage, while the greenhouses of Mrs. A. Guillaume, on South Sixth street between Main and King streets, were damaged only a trifle.

The hail storm was general throughout this section of the country.

It was accompanied in this neighborhood by a drenching rain, one of the

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The fall season has opened. There is decidedly more activity in the flower market than at any time during the last three months. The dahlia is the principal flower today and the local stores have used it largely in decoration, generally of one color. The shipping orders have been for dahlias, or include dahlias with other flowers. The quality of the stock offered is extremely fine. Dahlias of superb size and color, with stems from fifteen to twenty-four inches long, are the order rather than the exception. I do not mean by this that most of the dahlias grade as fancy, but I do mean that fancy dahlias can be obtained by anyone who requires them, at a price that is certainly reasonable, everything considered. The buyers have discovered that the way to obtain good dahlias is to order them in advance, so that the order may be packed by the grower. This avoids handling and adds enormously to the keeping quality of the flowers.

There has been a little run on Beauties, indicative, people say, of Fashion's return from the resorts. Be that as it may, Beauties have sold well at listed prices and are probably better value than any other rose. The other roses are improving, Kaiserin, Maryland and the Killarneys leading, with the weather rather a trifle too warm yet for Richmond. Melody is coming in and Princeton is expected. Alma Ward has been joined in the fancy class of carnations by O. P. Bassett and Mrs C. W. Ward, but there are few fancies and not many more select, while the gulf between the select and ordinary grade is so broad that few of the retailers with critical custom care to cross it.

Orchids are increasing rapidly; they have steadily sold down from $9 two weeks ago, to $7.20 and now to $6 a dozen. The demand at the lower price is equal to the supply. Valley is in fair supply, with but little selling above $3. Easter lilies are rather scarce, many of the growers being cut out. Single violets have come. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are a trifle more plentiful; they are not in demand. Autumn foliage has arrived.

Summing up, the supply of choice flowers, excepting possibly the smaller roses, is about equal to demand; the supply of poor flowers is greatly in excess of the demand. The summer flowers, like gladioli, are about over. Asters only retain their hold on popular favor, a hold that always seems to outlive their season. There are plenty of poor asters that nobody wants, but there are not enough good ones.

Godfrey Aschmann.

There are unmistakable signs of progress at ten-twelve Ontario street. Godfrey Aschmann has acquired another property and is going to build. In this case it happened that a representative of the most progressive paper arrived on the scene a few minutes and seconds ahead of D. T. Connor. You know, when a florist is thinking of building he sends for Mr. Connor. So this news is fresh, indeed, that God-house that promises well for specimens in December. Nice ferns, primroses, arecas and rubbers filled the houses. A new feature is the fernballs started for immediate effect; these are hanging from the rafters, forming an interesting side line.

A feature of the outside is the Jerusalem cherry, well grown and loaded with fruit. Mr. Aschmann keeps his houses full of good stock, whether times are dull or brisk. His push and enterprise are an object lesson worth careful study by those who would command success.

Various Notes.

Myers & Samtman have graded their ground preparatory to erecting another house, about 55x300, probably on similar lines to the one built last spring, considered an improvement on its predecessors.

W. W. Crawford had a dozen antique baskets of asters, dahlias and Beauties for the incoming of the new director of public works last week. The tragic part lay in the fact that the baskets arrived before the retiring director left; due, the superstitious will say, to their numbering thirteen. Afterward they gave much pleasure to the Rush hospital patients.

C. F. Knorr and his two sons motored from Fox Chase to Southampton recently, to compare notes with Stephen Mortensen on the disbudding of Killarney.

Mrs. Albert Woltemate has her place in excellent condition. The stock of orchids, of which the late Albert Woltemate was so proud, has been kept up.

Henry C. Geiger, of the Florex Gardens, was much pleased with his visit to the Budlong place at Providence, R. I., where he was particularly interested in the fine growth of Killarney and in the new White Killarney.

Charles H. Campbell is putting in two new Kroeschell boilers to run his place. Ferns are a specialty here and rubbers are grown in smaller quantity. Chrysanthemums and poinsettias are have just been finished at Norwood; better stock, he says, has never been offered.

Walter P. Stokes puts up a little joke on his friends by asking them to lift a nice watermelon that ornaments a table in his office. You can lift it, but it takes a little muscle, weighing some fifty pounds or more. Yes, it was grown from Stokes' Standard Seed.

W. Atlee Burpee has returned from Europe.

The Philadelphia Cut Flower Co. is receiving autumn foliage that looks well; gum, so far, with maple and oak to follow.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons have a handsome yellow decoration of dahlias at the Bellevue-Stratford this week. They have used Yellow Duke, Golden Century and McCullough, a bronze.

The Henry F. Michell Co. will hold a dahlia show at 518 Market street, September 26 to 29. A number of prizes have been offered. The judges are W. C. Herbert, A. L. Turnley, L. K. Peacock and Maurice Fuld.

The recent phenomenally heavy rains ruined the sunken gardens in Fairmount park. The water rose to the festoons on the sides. The plants in the beds were completely destroyed, looking as though they had been frostbitten. Two beds of crotons and five beds of cannas only escaped.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

The first frost of the season came September 14, but it did little damage and there is still an abundance of outdoor flowers. Business continues to be good and social functions are increasing in numbers. September seems as popular a month as June for weddings and there are numerous wedding decorations, both large and small.

Carnations continue to come into the market in first-class condition, although the stems are still short. White carnations are quite scarce.

Roses are much improved in quality and in the length of stem. Killarneys, in pink and white, are especially good, while Maryland and Tafts are in great demand. Kaisers are scarce just now, as also are Richmonds. American Beauties are not particularly good; the flower heads are small and crippled, yet the price is up on them. Wards are somewhat scarce, but the demand for this favorite rose is greater than ever. They are coming with longer stems now.

Gladioli are still in demand for funerals and the supply is good.

Harrisii lilies are scarce and there are no callas to speak of. Tuberoses are also on the short side this year and, fortunately, there is little call for them. Gardenias and bouvardias have begun to come in, but there is little demand for them. The first dahlias of the season arrived this week and they are fairly good. Orchids of all kinds are rare, and there is quite a little call for them.

Quite a number of the fall garden flowers are selling well just now, such as salvias, tritomas, helianthus, gaillardias, blue sage, Clematis paniculata, marigolds, wild asters and phlox.

Boston ferns are in great demand, as well as the many offshoots of this popular variety. Asters are on the downward trend. Valley is still good stock.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

The first frost of the season came September 14, but it did little damage and there is still an abundance of outdoor flowers. Business continues to be good and social functions are increasing in numbers. September seems as popular a month as June for weddings and there are numerous wedding decorations, both large and small.

Carnations continue to come into the market in first-class condition, although the stems are still short. White carnations are quite scarce.

Roses are much improved in quality and in the length of stem. Killarneys, in pink and white, are especially good, while Maryland and Tafts are in great demand. Kaisers are scarce just now, as also are Richmonds. American Beauties are not particularly good; the flower heads are small and crippled, yet the price is up on them. Wards are somewhat scarce, but the demand for this favorite rose is greater than ever. They are coming with longer stems now.

Various Notes.

Sir Francis Moore, director of the Dublin, Ireland, Botanical Gardens, is soon to visit Rochester.

The Rochester public seems aroused and eager to have another flower show this fall, several articles having appeared in the newspapers last week urging the Rochester Florists' Association to repeat the show given last year. At the meeting of the association held September 11, the advisability of holding another flower show was discussed and the matter was finally left in the hands of the exhibition committee, consisting of C. H. Vick, F. J. Keller, A. H. Salter, E. P. Wilson, E. R. Frey, F. R. Schlegel, J. M. Keller, R. Ballantyne, C. B. Ogston and Chas. Suhr. This committee is to report its decision at a special meeting to be held within two weeks. At the last meeting President Geo. B. Hart spoke in favor of an exhibition, while W. L. Keller, treasurer, and A. H. Salter were heard in opposition.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Suhr, who have been touring in Europe this summer, are with us once more.

The Industrial Exposition promises to give the local florists several jobs in decorating. J. B. Keller Sons have booked a number of orders in advance.

E. J. Fancourt, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., was in town last week.

M. Adler, of New York city, called on the Rochester trade last week.

Frank MacLewis has returned from his eastern trip.

J. M. Keller has returned from Canada, where he spent his vacation fishing.

PACIFIC COAST.

Seattle, Wash.—The Seattle Cut Flower Exchange has been opened at 909-11 Post street, to do a general wholesale and commission business in cut flowers, plants and greens. L. P. Walz is president and J. A. Schnapp manager.

Monrovia, Cal.—C. A. Brunger, who has greenhouses and large grounds on East Greystone avenue, in this city, has opened a branch store at 337 South Spring street, Los Angeles. For some years Mr. Brunger was chief gardener for the Agricultural Department at Washington, D. C. His business here has developed rapidly.

A FLORISTS' CLIMB.

J. G. Bacher, the well known grower of Portland, Ore., climbed Mount Hood, elevation 11,250 feet, as a part of his summer vacation, making a number of photographs on the way. Speaking of the trip, he says:

"It had long been my desire to visit the glaciers of Mount Hood, and as the hot weather offered little inducement to stay in the greenhouses, we decided to go there. Taking the auto stage for a scenic ride of about fifty-eight miles over some real western roads, of which many miles consisted of planking eight feet wide, winding through heavily timbered valleys, we landed at Rhododendron, a hotel of rather rustic construction, being built wholly of split cedar, in bungalow style, and located in a narrow valley surrounded by high mountains. This little resort is an ideal spot in which to rest. As its name indicates, rhododendrons are at home here. The undergrowth consists almost wholly of this attractive evergreen, with here and there a few specimens of the rare and characteristic chinkapin or Castanopsis chrysophylla. From here a tramp of nine miles is necessary to get to the government camp, the last resort before climbing the mountain.

"After one night's rest, early morning finds us afoot crossing the last four miles of timber, where trees are dwarfed by the high altitude and rigorous climate, but are most charming in shape and color, especially the tsugas and alpine firs. The herbaceous vegetation is becoming more attractive, Aster Bigelovii being in full bloom in many different shades. As the timber line is reached, the beautiful Tyalls lupine becomes conspicuous, with its silvery white foliage and blue flower clusters, as well as another dwarf aster of the alpinus type, but unknown to the writer. However, vegetation is rather scarce above the timber line, and one mile farther up snow and ice are reached. Here the atmosphere becomes much cooler and climbing is more inviting, inasmuch as no difficulties are to be overcome, the altitudes rising gradually. The view becomes more extensive at every step, but, look as far as you will, the mountains and valleys are covered by timber, with seldom a clearing where settlers are subduing the wilderness. Such is Oregon around Mount Hood.

"Returning over the glacier, we observed with great interest the many cracks in the ice, many of them twenty to thirty feet deep, without revealing the bottom of these giant ice masses, which are the source of our streams in the hot summer days. As we came down we stopped in the huckleberry belt, where a full crop was on and the original Indians from the Warm Spring reservation were harvesting loads of the savory berries. As we stopped later at a trading post, old Jim, of local reputation, came in with four squaws and ten ponies, to sell thirty-eight and one-half gallons of huckleberries, gathered in two and one-half days by his 'faithfuls.' The price received was 65 cents per gallon, which is not bad earnings for a family of this kind.

"A speeding auto soon brought us back to our city of roses and we are hard at it again, with pleasant memories of vacation days."

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The continuous, drenching rains have about ruined the outside stock. The asters that are being shipped in from the nearby towns are about the only salvation. The gladiolus and helianthus are popular decorative flowers. Carnations are still among the almost impossible flowers; they are scarce and of poor quality. Auratums and rubrums have held out remarkably and have proved a paying crop throughout. Mums are scarce; the early benches are entirely cut out. Shipments from California come through in fairly good shape.

Various Notes.

The Routledge Seed & Floral Co. had an exhibit of dahlias at the Salem, Ore., fair last week. N. B. Healy had charge of the exhibit.

Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., called on the trade last week.

E. Meyer is in town, securing materials for greenhouse construction. He is building a range at Grants Pass, Ore., and will conduct a retail flower and nursery business. He was formerly in charge of L. W. McCoy's greenhouses, in Seattle.

A. S. Barnes is also opening a retail store at Grants Pass, Ore.

Martin & Forbes report the completion, except in a few minor details, of the first section of their new range. The addition will consist of four houses, each 32x200, which will be devoted principally to roses and carnations.

E. R. C.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

With several holidays sandwiched in last week, business was not anything to brag of. These days of public rejoicing may be for the good of mankind in general, but they are not to the pecuniary benefit of the florists in particular. Whether this is the only reason or not, it is a fact that trade thus far in September has been quiet. The only differences noticeable in the flower line is that carnations are a shade more plentiful and longer-stemmed and that inside chrysanthemums are in greater evidence. Asters are holding on nicely and are still quite abundant. Sweet peas are commencing to show the effects of the long nights and are neither up to form nor color. Other sorts of outside stock do not seem to show much alteration. Amaryllis, however, of the early variety is over and the later kinds are not yet at their best. Valley is easier and Japanese lilies are on the wane. L. auratum is holding on longer this season than any of the other lilies, but the public does not buy them so readily. Quite a few Princess of Wales violets are seen, but they do not keep well and will not become much of a factor until the cold weather starts.

Various Notes.

M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, and Miss Marie L. Dougherty, of this city, were united in marriage September 7, by Rev. A. Jatho, of the Lutheran church of Oakland.

C. C. Morse & Co. expect to be in their new Market street store by September 25.

The Sievers-Cornwell Co. has retired from the retail trade and the store occupied by this firm on the corner of Powell and O'Farrell streets will be devoted to other lines of trade.

George B. Jones, one of San Francisco's pioneer retailers, is now a resident of Sausalito. He has been in delicate health for several years.

E. Wagner, a well known bulb grower of San Leandro, was robbed of $30 by a couple of crooks over in Oakland several days ago. The local police captured and jailed the robbers.

A TORNADO'S Iron Gutter Houses versu

No. 1.—Note that the houses shown above, built on Garland IRON gutters, remained standing; reglazing and replacing a few sashbars will make them as good as new.

The two photographs reproduced above show the path of a tornado that struck the range of Peter Reinberg, that of George Reinberg and the one operated by Chas. Handel (known as the Schafer place) early Monday morning, September 18, 1911. Photo No. 1 shows Peter Reinberg's houses. These were all built on Garland Iron Gutters and they remained standing. Photo No. 2 shows the range operated by Chas. Handel and back of it the establishment of George Reinberg, just across the street from the others. These houses were built with wooden gutters and they went flat to the ground.

At the extreme right rear of the first illustration appear the same demolished wooden gutter houses that are shown in the middle background at the right of the second illustration.

These three ranges received the equal force of the storm and show conclusively that Houses Built on Garland Iron Gutters Will Stand when wooden gutter houses let go.

Garland Gutters are now made semi-malleable. They are stronger and more durable than any other gutters known.

The Geo. M.

Lock Box R, D

S EFFECT ON s Wooden Gutter Houses

No. 2.—Note the destruction wrought here, where wooden gutters were in use; many of the houses were completely demolished and must be entirely rebuilt.

While the two photographs teach a big lesson to prospective buyers of greenhouse material, an even greater lesson than is shown at first glance is provided. It brings out this pertinent question:

If the iron gutter houses stand under the same strains that demolish the wooden gutter houses, how much stronger would the former houses be if iron frame construction had been used throughout?

It is practically certain that with Garland iron frame construction all the sashbars would have held also and the only damage would then have been the broken glass. Peter Reinberg estimates his loss at $20,000 and all his houses were left standing. George Reinberg's loss is much heavier. Now—Can You afford to use anything except Garland Cast Iron, Semi-malleable Gutters and Iron Frame or Truss Construction when You build? Write us today for full particulars regarding Garland Construction.

THE farther one gets along with the pea cleaning, the worse the season's results appear to be.

PAPER WHITE narcissi are reported as having sold well, though there is now a lull in the demand.

HARRISII bulbs have sold quite well. The crop is about all in and no great quantity remains unplaced.

ARNOLD RINGIER, of W. W. Barnard Co., has returned to Chicago after a trip through Canada and the east.

A FEW French bulbs still are coming in via Genoa, the S. S. Princess Irene having brought eight cases September 13, consigned to Knauth, Nachod & Kuhne.

THE catalogue makers are getting busy and some of them find it necessary to revise plans for the features of 1912 books. The question of prices will come up later.

THE S. S. Roma, from Marseilles, which reached New York September 11, brought 308 cases of French bulbs and twenty cases of immortelles, consigned to C. J. Speelman & Son.

IN spite of the short crop of sweet pea seeds, it appears that California has better average crops this year than has any other important seed growing center anywhere in the world.

THE customs officials are still reliquidating last year's entries of hyacinth bulbs in accordance with the Breck decision. The last seedsman to get his allowance of $2 per thousand put through was H. Waterer, Philadelphia.

H. N. BRUNS, Chicago, whose importations of valley pips run annually above the million mark, has a brother in the Hamburg district who advises him that the heat wave, that visited Germany after it left this country, has done no little injury to the valley pip crop, injuring the quality as well as reducing the quantity.

THE weather of late has favored the vine seed and sweet corn crops.

At a recent exhibition of the General Bulb Growers' Society at Haarlem, Holland, the American gladiolus, Niagara, received an award of merit. It was raised by Frank Banning, Kinsman, O.

THE Maine Agricultural Experiment Station has just issued a bulletin, on "The Proper Growing and Handling of Potato Seed Stock," by Charles D. Woods and W. J. Morse. It is a reprint of the paper read by Prof. Woods at the last seed trade convention.

A. LE COQ & Co., Darmstadt, Germany, in a report dated September 7, write: "We are glad to say there is no reason to be dissatisfied with the yield of this year's crop of our home-grown grass seeds; quality as well as quantity is satisfactory and there are only Agrostis and Aira caespitosa which have suffered by the drought." Prices of most grass seeds are, however, considerably above those ruling at this date last year.

DISCLAIMER UPHELD IN IOWA.

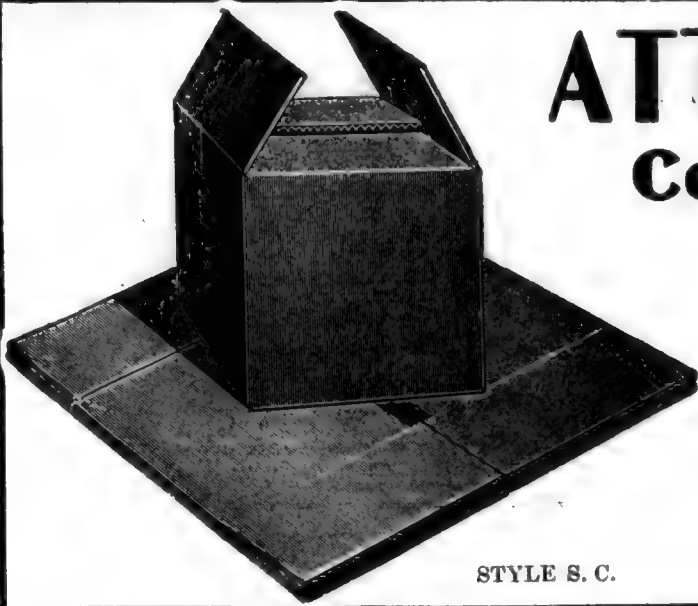

A case has recently been decided in the Supreme Court of Iowa which confirms the seed dealers' use of the non-warranty clause. The judge says in his decision that the evidence is conclusive that a general custom of selling seeds without guaranteeing prevails in the seed trade, and, therefore, the sale is presumed to have been negotiated with reference to the general custom of the trade, and a judgment was rendered in favor of the seed company. There were other matters brought into the suit, and in order to understand it the complete decision is necessary:

"1. Sales-Warranty. Where a dealer in seeds sold seeds in a package, with the printed statement that the seeds were sold without any warranty, express or implied, and it was the general custom of dealers in seeds to sell with disclaimer of warranty as to quality, or true name, a warranty that the seed sold was true to name could not be inferred.

"2. Sales-Liability. A canning company contracting to purchase pumpkins raised on a tract of land, and to furnish the seed therefor at its own cost, must furnish seed to produce the kind of pumpkins suitable for canning purposes, and it is liable for the damages sustained in consequence of furnishing other seed, whether it exercised due care in procuring proper seed or not.

"Appeal from District Court, Potawatamie County.

"Action for damages resulted in the dismissal of plaintiff's petition, from which it appeals. Affirmed in part. Reversed in part.

"Blizzard Bros., a copartnership, entered into a written contract with the Growers' Canning Co. to plant and properly cultivate three acres of pumpkins, all of which he agreed to deliver to the factory of said company in good condition for canning purposes, during the cropping season of 1908; the seed to be furnished to said growers by said company at cost. All pumpkins were to be ripe and sound, and fair size, for which said company agreed to pay $4 per ton. They called on the company for seed, but this was out, and its general manager inquired by telephone of the Younkerman Seed Co. if it had the large Cheese pumpkin seed, and being informed that it had, said he would send a man up to get a pound of such seed. At his instance Blizzard Bros. then went to the seed company's place of business, and inquired if a package of large Cheese pumpkin seed was there for them. A clerk of the seed company responded in the affirmative, and handed them a pound package on which was written 'Large Cheese Pumpkin Seed.' Some question was raised whether the purchase was by the manager individually, or by him for the company. It is enough to say, without reviewing the evidence, that he was merely acting for the company and, regardless of book entries, the sale was to the latter. Blizzard

Boddington's Quality Christmas and Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas

ALL true stocks of Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas will be scarce this season; some varieties are a total failure, owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. We can make immediate delivery of all the undermentioned varieties. Our advice to intending planters is to order early.

Our stocks of Christmas-Flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasingly popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period, and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" and include Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed from selected stocks by the leading California Growers and Specialists of Sweet Peas. Our output last year was nearly 6000 lbs. No kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

WINTER FLOWERING SWEET PEAS AT NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW, BOSTON, MARCH 25th TO APRIL 1st, 1911.

Partly showing Mr. Wm. Sim's Exhibit, which won the majority of the leading prizes—seed almost exclusively supplied by "Boddington." Sim's Sweet Peas were one of the sensational Exhibits at this Grand Flower Show—average length of stem being twenty inches.

Boddington's Quality Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas

At the Exhibition and Convention of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, July 12th and 13th, 1910, we again won the C. C. Morse & Co.'s Silver Cup for the finest and best collection of Sweet Peas open to the trade only.

BODDINGTON'S EXTRA EARLY CHRISTMAS WHITE SNOWBIRD. An exceptionally early Sweet Pea for indoor flowering—will bloom six weeks after sowing. Color clear white, upon long stems; habit fairly dwarf and of exceptionally free-flowering qualities. Without doubt, the finest early white for indoor planting. We sell one grower in Pennsylvania 35 lbs. of this variety every year, name on application. Oz. 30 cts., ¼ lb. 85 cts., ½ lb. $1.50, lb. $2.50.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS PINK. This is the earliest and most profitable and useful Sweet Pea in cultivation, as by sowing the seed under glass in latter part of August, flowers can be cut from Thanksgiving on during the Winter months. Oz. 25 cts., ¼ lb. 75 cts., ½ lb. $1.25, lb. $2.00.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS WHITE. A companion to our Christmas Pink. Just as free and profuse a bloomer. Oz. 15 cts., ¼ lb. 50 cts., ½ lb. 85 cts., lb. $1.50.

BODDINGTON'S CANARY. Similar to the above, but flowers of an exceptionally good yellow. Oz. 35 cts., ¼ lb. $1.00, ½ lb. $1.75, lb. $3.00.

BODDINGTON'S FLAMINGO. Color scarlet; free-flowering and early. Oz. 50 cts., ¼ lb. $1.50, ½ lb. $2.75, lb. $5.00.

Christmas Meteor. Scarlet; fine open red flower. Oz. 25 cts., ¼ lb. 75 cts., ½ lb. $1.25, lb. $2.00.

Bros. planted the seed on the three acres of ground, properly cultivated it, but the crop proved to be Connecticut Pie pumpkins with a few squash. These being unfit for canning purposes, the canning company refused to receive them and plaintiff realized therefrom but $29.75. Had the seed been true to name the several witnesses estimated that from sixteen to twenty-five tons of pumpkins per acre would have been produced and plaintiff demanded judgment against the canning company for what they would have realized from the crop, had the seed been true to name, less the proceeds of the crop actually raised. The seed company was made a party defendant on motion of the canning company. The canning company also answered denying liability and in a cross petition alleged the fault, if any, to be that of the seed company, and prayed for such judgment against it as might be entered against the cross petitioner. The seed company in its answer, among other things pleaded that it was the general custom of dealers in seeds to sell with disclaimer of warranty as to quality, or whether true to name, and that on all packages were customarily printed the following: 'Warranty. While we exercise great care to have all seeds pure and reliable and true to name, our seeds are sold without any warranty, express or implied, and without any responsibility in respect to the crop. If our seeds are not accepted on these terms, they must be returned at once.' Jury was waived and on trial the petition and cross-petition dismissed.

"(1) The alleged liability of the Younkerman Seed Co. may be considered first. The evidence that a general custom, such as pleaded, prevails in the seed trade was conclusive. The particular package had the printed matter thereon, and though this may not have been noticed, the sale is presumed to have been negotiated with reference to the general custom of the trade. This being so, a warranty that the seed was true-to name could not be inferred and the court rightly found in favor of the Younkerman Seed Co.

"(2) A different question arises on the claim against the Growers' Canning Co. It undertook in its contract with plaintiff to furnish the seed. What kind of seed? The kind is not expressly stated in the contract, but, as the pumpkins to be raised therefrom were to be suitable for canning purposes, the clear implication is that the

E. E. Stewart Grower for the Wholesale Trade
Rives Junction, Mich.

Early in the season of 1911 the French bulb crop was not expected to be nearly as large as consequences have proved. In order to protect his customers, Mr. Martial Bremond made arrangements for a larger number of bulbs than he required, owing to the anticipated crop shortage. Late in the season the weather conditions enabled the growers to harvest a larger crop than was expected, thereby throwing a surplus on Mr. Bremond's hands late in the season. Such occurrences are not very unusual, but it has been customary for jobbers and very large growers to absorb such surpluses, thus giving the few the advantage of such a favorable market and excluding the smaller grower from an equal right. After some careful consideration we have decided to extend to the trade in general the opportunity of taking advantage of just such a situation, without at the same time overloading any one market knowingly, or putting to disadvantage our customers. The prices are for everyone alike; absolutely rock-bottom—counter offers will not be answered and the offer will not be repeated. This is a very unusual opportunity for growers to buy strictly high grade bulbs at low prices and is a chance that does not occur every year. The following prices pertain to case lots only—10% additional for less than case quantities. Terms, three months net, or cash with order from unknown buyers.

seed furnished should be such as would produce that kind of pumpkin. No other inference is possible. Had the company furnished such seed and plaintiffs failed to perform their part of the contract, the company's right to maintain an action for the breach could not well be questioned. Is the plaintiff's right any less clear upon the company's breach in not furnishing the kind of seed it was bound to? The proposition seems too clear for argument. Possibly, as argued, the canning company exercised due care in procuring the seed, but this in no manner excused it from performing its contract. It was of no concern of plaintiff where or how the company procured the seed, and its obligation in this respect must not be confused with that of the seed company. The suggestion that the plaintiff, rather than the canning company, procured the seed is without support in the record, as appears from the facts stated. To render the company liable, it is enough that it agreed to furnish seed from which plaintiff would raise pumpkins suitable for canning purposes, and that it failed to do so, in that the seed was not of the kind from which such pumpkins would grow. Elaboration could hardly make this plainer. As to measure of damages in such a case, see Wolcott v. Mount, 36 N. J. Law, 262; 13 Am. Rep. 438; Passinger v. Thorburn 34 N. Y. 634; 90 Am. Dec. 753; Swift v. Redhead, 122 N. W. 140 and cases cited.

LET US SUPPLY YOUR WANTS IN LILIES THIS SEASON

We think we can make it to your advantage to do so, as regards both quality and price.

The stock that we offer is not gathered indiscriminately from all kinds of sources, but is grown for us by a few selected growers whose stocks have been worked up from the true, original stock. In order to insure the health of the product, the bulbs are not grown on the same field oftener than one season, other crops being grown on the field the preceding year. The ground is thoroughly manured when the previous crop is grown, leaving it in a high state of cultivation, and when the lily bulbs are planted no fresh manure is used; this prevents disease and insures a crop of strong, healthy bulbs.

In addition to this, we do not dig our bulbs as early as they are usually dug, but leave them in the ground until they are thoroughly ripened and matured. When Harrisii is good it leaves little to be desired. There is very little, if any, stock obtainable as good as the stock that we are offering. We are supplying only this one grade of selected stock and when this is disposed of we shall have no more to offer.

While the quality of the stock that we offer is of the highest, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices of those who offer the ordinary stock gathered from indiscriminate sources. We are sure buyers will find our stock very satisfactory, and much more so than the Japan-grown Longiflorum, which has badly deteriorated in recent years.

Bear in mind that we were the original introducers of Harrisii in Bermuda, and that we have exceptional facilities for obtaining our present supplies. Also take note that the smallest bulbs that we offer are 6-7 inch bulbs, not 5-7 inch, as usually offered.

6-7 inch bulbs, 335 to the case, $15.00 per case; full thousand lots, $ 40.00 per 1000
7-9 inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 16.00 per case; full thousand lots, 75.00 per 1000
9-11 inch bulbs, 100 to the case, 18.00 per case; full thousand lots, 175.00 per 1000

FERNS

We have an exceptionally nice lot of ferns in the following varieties—good, bushy, well-grown plants that will please the most critical buyers. Plants have been grown in pots and are thoroughly well established and nicely finished.

Van Glahn and on reports to commercial agencies. They allege that Van Glahn allowed dividends to be paid when none had been earned, and say that Van Glahn gave out fraudulent statements to commercial agencies, saying that the company was in flourishing condition when it really was insolvent. He is said to have represented that the company had earned and paid seven per cent dividends every year, and said that the company had assets of thousands of dollars in excess of liabilities.

The plaintiffs say that Mr. White is a man of large wealth and wide reputation as a successful business man, and that his name as director lent weight to the company and stimulated its credit, whereas he left the business entirely in the hands of Van Glahn, the president and general manager.

FLOWERFIELD, N. Y.

A little over a year ago a thousand acres, nearly, of scrub oak and uncultivated farm land! Now a paradise of flowers! The transition is wonderful! This growing industry is in charge of Isaac S. Hendrickson, the president of the American Gladiolus Society.

Flowerfield is fifty miles from New York, on the L. I. R. R., and one mile from the sound. It has its own station and postoffice, and John Lewis Childs, of Floral Park, provided the "wherewithal" for every modern convenience, including an immense bulb house 90 x 200 and a cellar 50 x 90, with a storage house now building, for 100,000 cannas. There are native forests, dogwood groves, apple and pear orchards, farm houses and 100-year-old oaks and chestnuts to add variety to the immense tract that has been se-

Giant-Flowering Cyclamen

For the last 15 years we have selected three-fourths of our seed bearing Cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no fizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers, that don't have to be petted to be grown into a choice salable plant—a well built, five petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize-winner. Received first and second prizes at the Toledo Florists' Club meeting early in November, when blooming Cyclamens were scarce. Seed of this, my own grown strain, in five separate colors, $1.00 per 100; $6.00 per 1000; $25.00 per 5000.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., O. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston June 1912.

J. W. PULLIAM has purchased a third interest in the Northern Colorado Nursery Co., at Loveland, Colo.

THE fall season promises well for the wholesale nurserymen. Autumn planting is increasing faster than spring planting.

THE late rains have done nursery stock a lot of good, coming after one of the driest and hottest summers in recent years.

IMMENSE quantities of California privet will have to find a market between now and spring. Production has taken a big jump this season.

THE Greening Nursery Co., Monroe, Mich., was established in a small way in 1883. The growth has been steady. The officers now are: President, Charles E. Greening; vice-president, Benjamin J. Greening; secretary and treasurer, Roy M. Sperry.

TEXAS OFFICERS.

At its meeting at Waco, September 12 and 13, reported in last week's issue of The Review, the Texas Nurserymen's Association, concluded by re-electing the following officers:

President—J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie.

Vice-President — J. R. Downing, Wichita Falls.

Secretary and Treasurer—J. S. Kerr, Sherman.

WHO SHOULD GET TRADE LISTS?

[A paper by E. W. Kirkpatrick, of McKinney, Tex., read at the convention of the American Association of Nurserymen in St. Louis, June 14 to 16, 1911.]

The trade list of the responsible nurseryman should go to responsible dealers only. Planters can afford to pay more profitable prices to the nurseryman than can the dealers. Nurserymen, under a ruinous system of competition, sell their stock at bankrupt prices. The result is cheap methods, cheap trees, and cheap men.

The scientific originator, the skillful propagator and grower, the careful handler and honest distributor, should receive due reward for their service. The careless, unreliable grower or dealer in nursery stock should not be recognized by the legitimate grower.

BED OR BENCH FOR LETTUCE?

Will you kindly tell us which is better for lettuce—raised benches with heat underneath or solid beds with heat on the side? We grow the Grand Rapids variety. M. B.

There are few vegetable crops that will not do better on raised benches with heat underneath than on solid beds. They come into crop more quickly, and time is money, especially in winter, with the greenhouse man. The question is whether or not the raised benches pay. They are expensive to build and keep in repair. Most of the larger growers now grow their lettuce on the solid ground beds.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade was slightly better last week. Rain continues to fall about every other day. Funeral work holds up well. Stock is none too plentiful. Asters are short and of inferior quality. There are some dahlias to be had, but the heavy rains play havoc with them. Carnations are improving in quality, but the stems are short. There are not enough lilies to go around. Some Cattleya labiata are to be seen, but not in any quantity. Brides and Maids are still small. Killarneys and Beauties are of much better quality.

A number of store openings this week and next will enliven things a little for the florists who handle palms. The I. O. O. F. encampment here this week called for thousands of roses and carnations.

Various Notes.

The Bertermann Bros Co. furnished the roses for the opening of Marott's shoe store.

Baur & Steinkamp took out a building permit for a new barn this week. This firm has been cutting some of the best carnations seen in this market.

William Hartje, with H. W. Rieman, injured himself while jumping out of a wagon recently, but is able to be about again.

Will Roepke is the proud father of a new 12-pound boy.

The Western Gladiolus and Dahlia Society is to have a meeting in this city September 26, to perfect plans for the future of the society and to hold an exhibition of flowers. The headquarters for the meeting will be at the Denison hotel and the exhibition is to be held in A. Wiegand & Sons' conservatories. Exhibits sent in care of A. Wiegand & Sons will be properly staged.

Carl Sonnenschmidt says he has a prize-winning bull dog with a pedigree about two yards long, and that the animal ought to take some premiums at the different dog shows this fall.

Sam Seligman, with Wertheimer Bros., and B. H. Klus, of Anderson, were visitors last week.

The State Florists' Association is to hold its October meeting at New Castle, October 3. It is expected that this will be a banner meeting, as the New Castle florists are noted for their hospitality.

Henry Rieman was busy with store decorations last week, having furnished the palms for the New York store opening.

Lester Benson won the pony advertised by the Marott department store.

The Market.

Jack Frost has not yet shown himself, much to the annoyance of the florists. The first days of last week were, without exception, the hottest this summer, and all outdoor flowers continue to flourish. Asters are sold for whatever can be obtained. Judging from the quantity and the price they bring, it would seem that everybody who has a few growing in his yard is bringing them to town and selling them for little or nothing. One good frost would put an end to this. One florist was heard to say last week that the more he talked about the frost that is bound to come soon, the hotter it got, so he was going to stop thinking about it.

Carnations are hard to move, but we can blame the asters again. When they are out of the way, carnations will take a front seat. Chrysanthemums are on the market, both the cut blooms and the plants, but there is little demand for them.

But little stock is being shipped. All the out-of-town florists seem to have all the asters and roses needed; and their orders are mostly for Beauties and lily of the valley. There are plenty of good Beauties, but it is almost impossible to get valley at any price. Only a small quantity is being forced, and it is generally sold before it is ready to cut.

Various Notes.

The interior of the Elitch-Long store has been newly decorated and painted.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Kennedy spent a few days last week at Buffalo Park.

H. J. Berry is building a large refrigerator in his store at 613 Fifteenth street.

The Barteldes Seed Co. had a real fire sale for several days after the building was turned over to them by the insurance company. They sold all florists' supplies at greatly reduced prices, and in this way cleaned out some lines quickly.

There have been many changes among the employees in the different stores lately. Thomas McDonald is with William Speth; H. F. Schulze has left the Elitch-Long flower store and is with H. J. Berry, and Mrs. A. G. Robinson is in charge of Geo. H. Cooper's Broadway store.

The building at Fifteenth and Cheyenne street, a portion of which has been occupied by W. C. Walter for several months, has been sold. It will be torn down shortly, and a fine hotel will be erected.

D. Marsh, of La Junta, called on the trade here recently. M. R. J.

PLANT POINSETTIAS IN PANS NOW FOR XMAS SALES

One of the most profitable crops you can put on your benches. We have the kind of plants you should use in planting your pans—short and stocky and just ready for a shift. We make a specialty of Poinsettias. We know the kind of plants you want, and—what is more—we will give you plants that are right. From 2½-in. pots, $5.00 per 100; $45.00 per 1000.

CARNATION PLANTS

These plants have been grown right for winter blooming. We don't pick blooms from the field and then sell you the plants. Dorothy Gordon, Scarlet Glow, Winona, Beacon, R.-P. Enchantress, May. $6.00 per 100; $55.00 per 1000.

We aim to supply only the highest quality in our lines. Our specialties are Carnations, Geraniums, Poinsettias, Chrysanthemums.

The Market.

Roses are improving—a great deal, both in stem and flower. Carnations are not plentiful. Asters have been good, but are now almost gone. Dahlias are rather scarce and sell readily.

Various Notes.

The Humfeld-Orear Floral Co. reports that business is fast growing in volume. Ferns sell especially well.
Their stock is in excellent shape and their Lorraine begonias are particularly fine. Mr. Orear has been quite busy with wedding decorations.

A new cut flower store has been opened at Thirty-first street and Brooklyn avenue, under the name of the Lynnwood Floral & Nursery Co. The location is a favorable one and there is a prospect of good business there.

A visit to Clay Center, Kan., found
C. Humfeld quite busy putting up funeral work, of which he has had a good run all summer, mostly for shipment to other towns. His roses are doing splendidly this season. His carnations are in excellent shape. His asters are fine. His outdoor verbena stock is the best the writer has ever seen. His mums are mostly in solid beds and they look promising. A new violet house, 10x106, has just been completed and planted to California violets, which have made a good start.

A heavy rain and hail storm swept over Clay Center on Sunday, September 10, but no glass was broken.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.

The Market.

While this has been a bad season on the Board Walk, in a business way, because of the rush of prosperous Americans to the coronation in England, the trade in flowers has been good. There are really but two poor months in the year in Atlantic City. Trade gets good in February and attains its most prosperous state at and around Easter time, when the big hotels decorate lavishly, their bills at that time running to $1,000 and $1,100 in individual cases for plants and cut flowers.

There is practically no wholesaling in Atlantic City, the trade being supplied chiefly from Philadelphia and New York.

Various Notes.

One of the leading firms here is the Edwards Floral Hall Co., established in 1883. It is located at 1700 Pacific avenue, and has its own nurseries at Mediterranean and South Carolina avenues. D. B. Edwards, president of the company, was in New York when the representative of The Review called, but his gentlemanly manager reported that trade was better than ever before and that the spring trade had been particularly good. This firm recently purchased an auto delivery wagon, to enable it to keep up with its increasing business. One of the biggest contracts of the year, that of supplying plants and flowers and decorating the steel pier for the street railway convention in October, has been captured by the Edwards Floral Hall Co., and it was to secure stock for this contract that Mr. Edwards had to go to New York. Privet hedging, various kinds of palms, ferns, bay trees and wild smilax will be the chief items in the decorative scheme. Of the smilax forty cases will be used, and 600 boxes of cedar wood and birch bark will be employed. American Beauties, orchids and other cut flowers will be used, particularly at the balls.

A. Littman, who likes to be known as "the floral artist," has an attractive show place on the Board Walk, where he displays air plants and prepared ferns, leaves and mosses, as well as natural plants and cut flowers. The original features in his displays attract much attention. F. J. D.

Mendota, Ill.—Henry Schweitzer is offering his greenhouse and business for sale.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Market.

Business for the last two weeks has been fairly good. Several big funeral orders helped out nicely and kept stock cleaned up fairly well. There will be a good many fall openings in the different department stores within the next week or ten days, and trade will improve right along, as a good many of the openings will require decorations of some kind and the florist usually gets his share of the work. Asters, carnations and roses are the main standbys. Asters are not as good as a week ago; they are on the wane and a few more days will find them a thing of the past. Carnations are still short-stemmed, but are improving daily. Roses are in good condition and continue to improve. A few dahlias are coming in; they will be quite plentiful in a few days.

The State Fair.

Last week was state fair week and most of the store men entered in some or all of the classes. The biggest and best display shown here in a good many years was to be seen, and was enjoyed by the throng that made its way through the aisles, banked on the one side with palms, ferns and various bedding and foliage plants, and on the other with cut flowers of all varieties.

C. L. Brunson, superintendent, and his assistant, Jesse W. Wright, were in charge of the plants and flowers; they are hustlers and deserve much credit for their work. There is no telling what they would do with better facilities, which at present are poor. The display has grown steadily since they have been in charge. Paul M. Halbrooks, of the Columbus Floral Co., Columbus, O., and Mrs. Harry I. Bishop, a local society woman, were the judges.

The following is the list of prize winners in all the entries:

Collection of decorative and stove plants, first, Jacob Schulz; second, Nanz & Neuner.
Collection of flowering plants for bedding, first, Nanz & Neuner; second, Mrs. M. D. Reimers.
Collection of begonias, first, Mrs. M. D. Reimers; second, Nanz & Neuner.

Heacock's Palms and Ferns

Home-grown, strong, clean and well established, describes our Palms—no more words are necessary.

"Our satisfied customers are our best advertisement." One customer who has been dealing with us for years sent in an order for $1500.00 worth of Palms without seeing them. Another, whose order last year amounted to $700.00, gave us an order for $1600.00 this year. Send for our new booklet and give us a trial order.

Lay in your Palms in September, while you can have them shipped by freight. Our facilities for shipping are of the best. We ship by freight to every state in the Union. We have 40% more glass this year. Most of it is devoted to Palms. We are particularly strong in the larger sizes (7, 9 and 12-inch).

We grow all our Kentias above 6-inch size in cedar tubs made especially for us, avoiding breakage of pots in shipment and giving better results to our customers; and, while they cost us several times what pots would cost, we sell them for the same money. They are the neatest, lightest and best tub ever introduced. Painted green, with three electric-welded wire hoops. We order these tubs by the carload.

Various Notes.

A. Rasmussen, the New Albany grower, displayed some good roses and carnations at the fair.

The Kentucky Nursery Co. sent several loads of shubbery to the fair grounds, to be used to beautify the space around the modern school building. It was a good ad for the firm, as two large signs told where the stock came from. Jacob Schulz displayed some jardinieres, baskets and other accessories, which made a hit.

Mrs. M. D. Reimers' collection of evergreens was a "classy" lot.

Mrs. C. B. Thompson displayed a new line of jardinieres and baskets, which were admired by the crowds.

Mrs. M. D. Reimers and Jacob Schulz got the cream of the prizes, the former getting twenty-three ribbons out of twenty-seven entries and the latter winning thirteen times in fifteen entries.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

AS A MEDIUM FOR The Allied Trades

AN ADVERTISER IN THE ALLIED TRADES—a firm which makes an article used by nearly all Florists—recently wrote, at the expiration of his first order:

"Replying to yours of the 9th, you may continue the Adv. in your publication until forbid.

"We are rather surprised at the large number of inquiries secured from the small Adv. in the comparatively short time you have had the order. Up to this time, we feel that the inquiries received are proof that it is money well spent."

THERE ARE TWO REASONS for advertising. One of these is to add to your business, but an equally important one is to hold that which you already have—to keep your competitor, who advertises, from winning it away from you.

You achieve both these objects when you tell your story to the whole trade through The Review.

CHRYSANTEMUMS.

EARLIEST WHITE.

Smith's Advance is the earliest large flowered white chrysanthemum. Like Golden Glow, it will produce good blooms at any season of the year following an active period of growth. Buds selected June 10 were cut July 25, 5 1/2 inches in diameter, with excellent stem, foliage and remarkable substance. The later buds, for August and September, gave larger and finer flowers carried on stems 3 to 3 1/2 feet long. We offer stock plants for October delivery at 40c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

Greenhouse Heating.

A SMALL OHIO HOUSE.

I am building a small greenhouse, 22x60 feet, four and one-half feet to the eaves and eleven feet to the ridge. It runs east and west. The north wall, ten feet of the west end and five feet of the east end will be built of 8-inch tile blocks, laid in cement; the south wall and the rest of the ends and gables will be of ship-lap construction. I may, however, use glass in the east end. We sometimes have a few days of zero weather here. The maximum temperature required will probably be about 60 to 65 degrees. Would a hot water boiler that is rated at 650 square feet of radiation be sufficient to heat the house? What size and what number of flows and returns should be used and how should they be placed?

J. C. M.

For a temperature of 65 degrees in zero weather, a greenhouse 22x60 feet will need about 540 square feet of radiating surface, so that there should be no difficulty in heating it with a boiler having a rating for 650 square feet. Two 2½-inch flow pipes could be used, but it would be better to have three if heat is needed under the middle benches, as is usually advisable. With three flows use twelve 2-inch returns, locating four on each wall and four under the benches. One flow could be upon each plate and the other under the ridge.

OVERHAULING THE SYSTEM.

Having recently purchased a greenhouse, I now find I must overhaul or reinstall the heating plant. I have a hot water system, but there are several complete traps in the piping, so that there are but three 1½-inch pipes that could carry any water; the rest would either be dead or extremely sluggish on account of faulty piping. I understand that last winter the plants as well as the city water froze in the greenhouse. We have an upright boiler of about five horse-power, and 1½-inch pipes, both flows and returns. The greenhouse is 25x40, with 7-foot walls and stands east and west. The south wall and both ends are about half boards and half glass, while the north wall is all boards. The winds come from the west, as a rule, but sometimes there are cold east winds. The boiler room is connected at the northeast corner, between the greenhouse and my dwelling. There is one bench around the north side, east end and south side; also two benches running lengthwise, through the center, and three aisles.

I am thinking some of installing a having about six 1-inch pipes lengthwise over the benches, with probably one or two short coils on the west end. I am located in central Colorado.

M. A. W.

The twenty horse-power boiler will, of course, be much larger than is required. In fact, there should be no difficulty in heating the house with hot water, using the present boiler and piping, if properly arranged.

For heating with steam, run a 2-inch main to the middle of the east end of the house and then directly to the west end of the house, carrying it at a slight fall and about two feet under the ridge. Then run three 1½-inch pipes each way around the walls to the boiler room, and also place a coil of three pipes under each of the middle benches, feeding all of them from the 2-inch overhead main. The 1½-inch pipe would also answer for steam, though 1¼-inch pipe is preferred. In case it may be thought best to make use of a hot water system, use two 2½-inch overhead flows, with five 1½-inch returns on each wall and five under each bench.

HEAT FOR GENERAL STOCK.

We have a greenhouse 20x45, which runs east and west. The house is tight and well glazed. It has a 3-foot brick wall all around, and on the top of this are three feet of glass in the sides. The height from the floor to the ridge is thirteen feet. The gables are glass from the 3-foot brick wall to the ridge pole. The wall on the north is banked up with soil to within twelve inches of the top. We intend to heat the house with a hot water boiler and we wish to know how many flows and returns will be required to heat it to a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. It rarely happens that we have zero weather in this part of Mississippi, but we want sufficient heat even in zero weather.

We have three benches, with a 20-inch walk all around, close to the walls, and a 24-inch walk on each side of the middle bench. There is a door in each end of the house. We wish to place the flows and returns so that they will not interfere with the two center walks. Would it be necessary to have any heating pipes under the center bench? We are growing a general assortment of plants, carnations, geraniums, begonias, etc. We shall appreciate any suggestions.

greens in zero weather, two 2½-inch flows and twelve 2-inch returns should be used. Run one of the flow pipes along about two feet under the ridge, and at the farther end of the house connect it to two coils of three pipes each, running from either side of the end door around on the walk to the other end of the house. The other flow pipe should only run to the farther end of the benches, where it should branch into three 2-inch pipes, each of which should connect with a coil of two 2-inch pipes under each of the benches. If preferred, instead of having three coils of two pipes each under the benches, the pipes could be arranged in two coils under the outer benches.

Why "Superior"?

"You certainly have placed the right name to your boiler—no effort at all to keep the temperature at desired points in zero weather." So says a South Bend, Ind., florist after a thorough trial of

The Market.

There is an air of expectation everywhere in the trade. The feeling is better than it was last week and, while there is not much more real money being handled, everyone feels that the period of dullness is practically over. Funeral work was heavy September 19.

Stock is coming in better. The aster market was practically cleaned up September 16. In fact, the week closed with some demand for asters unfilled, and this week there was a small supply, with most of those offered poor in quality. Carnations are in better supply and fair as to quality. Valley is going fairly well. Roses are about the same as for the last two or three weeks. There are many of the short and medium grades; in fact, an oversupply, but the better grades are scarce and what are offered meet with a ready sale.

Greens are moving fairly well in small lots.

Various Notes.

S. C. Briggs is supplying the Pennock-Meehan Co. with some fine orchids. His Cattleya labiata is coming in strong. He also is cutting Oncidium Rogersii and Dendrobium formosum.

Fred Gust, a salesman and decorator with the Washington Florists Co., has resigned and gone to Seattle.

The Pennock-Meehan Co. has started demolishing the building that occupies the site of its projected new store on New York avenue.

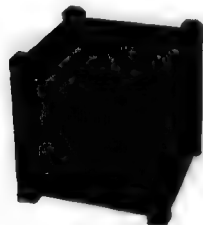

Z. D. Blackistone is busy with the alterations on his building. He expects to have one of the show places of the trade when the alterations are completed.

William Marche was unfortunate last week in dislocating his knee cap when his motorcycle skidded, and he is now in bed nursing his injuries.

Stanley F. Holland, the Fourteenth street florist, on returning from his vacation, found that his store had been rented over his head by his landlord, and he is now looking for a new location.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Phillips have returned from their vacation and are preparing to reopen their store.

The building in which the Washington Florists Co. is located is to be sold to settle an estate, but the florist has a lease and will not be obliged to look for a new location for a year or, perhaps, two. Manager Bauer, of the Washington Florists Co., reports business to be looking up. F. J. D.

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

There seems to be some slight improvement in trade. Stock of all kinds is moving better and the general feeling is that it indicates the beginning of better times. There has been quite a good deal of funeral work during the week, which also helped to clean up considerable of the surplus stock. Some fine asters are still coming in, but with them are immense quantities which are not worth shipping.

Various Notes.

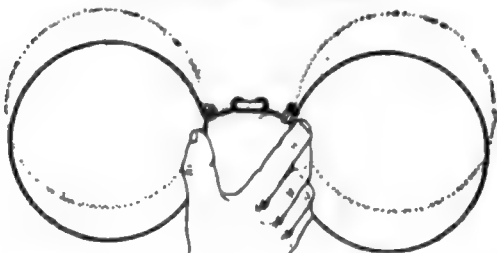

There was a severe storm on the night of September 14, in fact a cloud burst, which caused considerable inconvenience to the growers, as the tracks of the B. & O. railroad and the Butler trolley lines were both washed out and no trains were run until Sunday, causing the growers to drive over a round-about road to get to the city with their stock.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. was compelled to haul its flowers to the store in wagons last week, on account of the wash-out on the railroad, giving them a 22-mile drive. Some of the other wholesale houses had to disappoint customers, as they could not ship over the railroad Friday or Saturday on account of the flood.

The Schenley Park Conservatories are beginning to rearrange their house for the fall chrysanthemum show. They expect to surpass anything they have ever done, but if they do they will have to go some, as their standard is high.

Joseph Byerly, one of the office force with Randolph & McClements, was married Thursday, September 14, the bride being Mrs. Lillian Amelia Niedhammer, of this city. They left immediately for an eastern wedding trip and after October 15 will be at home at 161 Mayflower street. Hoo-Hoo.

Get This Loose Leaf Book Now We Send It Free

FROM these open pages shown you would think it a book on boilers; but it's more than that—a lot more. It's a Florists' Supply Book of greenhouse materials.

The first half is devoted to greenhouse heating. Not just boilers, pipes and fittings, but pages of useful information such as you have wanted time and time again.

There are 66 pages in the book now, but it's made up loose leaf fashion, and we are going to add at least another 66 before it's completed—maybe more.

It works like this: We send you the book of 66 pages now; and then every once in a while (perhaps oftener) we will mail you additional pages all ready for putting right in the book. All you have to do, is simply turn back a couple of fasteners and in the pages go.

Every time we get out a new thing of importance we will promptly print up some pages about it, and mail them to you.

You can see that such a book will be invaluable to you, because it can always be kept right up to date.

Send for a copy right now, while it's on your mind. Don't put it off till tomorrow, for day after tomorrow you may need it badly.

FISHER CARNATION CLIPS

The method of support for Carnation Plants is either a great expense (if ring or patent supports are used), or if the string with twine method is adopted, it becomes a long, thankless job, to be done over and over each season. Here is a simple device that will remedy both expense and labor.

Directions for the use of Fisher Clips

Stretch No. 18 galvanized wire the length of the bench between each row of carnations, but let the two outside wires over the sides of the bench be of No. 10 galvanized wire. Cut No. 18 galvanized wire into lengths the width of your bench and on each end fasten a Fisher Clip. Two men then can walk along each side of the bench and clip the cross wires on the No. 10 side wire with the Fisher Clip just as fast, almost, as they can walk. It is understood, of course, that each cross wire is put between each row of carnations, thus forming in connection with the length wires a square frame or square support for each plant. As the plants grow and need more support a second and even a third set of wire stringers are run in the same manner. When your plants are ready to throw out, just unclip your cross wires and bundle away for use the next season.

The Fisher Clip is easily fastened to the side wires, literally with a "grip of steel;" they will not slide, but are warranted to hold just where they are clipped in place. They are made of heavy sheet steel and are copper plated to prevent rusting, and are time savers, for two men working with these clips can string or support as many carnation plants in an hour as it takes two men in five hours using the old white cotton stringing method. Also consider these clips in the light of an investment; once purchased they will last as long as you grow carnations.

COST OF THIS METHOD

Calculation based on a bench 100 feet long, 5 feet wide, planted to carnations, consisting of 6 rows with 120 plants to a row. This means 500 ft. of No. 18 gal. wire, for length wires, 3 1/2 lbs. at 5 1/2 c per lb..... $0.20
200 ft. of No. 10 gal. wire, for side length wire, 10 lbs. at 3 1/2 c per lb..... .35
600 ft. of No. 18 gal. wire, for cross wire, 4 lbs. at 5 1/2 c per lb..... .22
240 Fisher Clips, 2 for each row, one on each side of bench, $5 per 1000.. 1.20

Total..... $1.97

As three sets of wires and cross supports are used, the total cost of the supports will not be over $6.00, furnishing ample support for 720 carnation plants, on a bench 100 feet long by 5 feet wide, and there will be no additional cost to you next year.

COMPARISON

A three ring wire support costs about $32.00 per 1000, and will support 2000 plants, or $1.60 per 100 plants; one bench has 720 plants, costing $11.50 for this style of support against a cost of only $6.00 by the use of the Fisher Clip. Your saving will be 50% in cost and by using the Fisher Clip your plants will be better supported.

Try a Few and be Convinced.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

The first meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club for the fall season was held September 18 at the office of the Good & Reese Co., the special order of business being the annual election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Christian Binning, of the Geo. H. Mellen Co.; vice-president, C. A. Schaefer, of the Reeser Plant Co.; secretary, Arthur C. Leedle, of the Leedle Rosary; treasurer, Charles W. Unglaub, carnation grower.

The October meeting will be in the form of a banquet at which the annual installation of officers will be held.

Through the courtesy of the Good & Reese Co. a regular place of meeting has been provided thus far in their offices, but it has been thought that a more central location might prove more convenient for some members. The use of the Commercial club rooms for one night in the month has been tendered and Geo. H. Mellen and Geo. D. Leedle were appointed a committee to consider the advisability of giving the more central location a trial.

Mr. Binning offered a suggestion which was favorably discussed, advocating that the scope of the club be enlarged so as to admit amateur florists and flower lovers not regularly in the trade as members of the organization. Since the number of persons having a proprietary interest in the trade is comparatively limited, it is thought that interest in the affairs of the club might be stimulated and its power increased by adopting this suggestion.

Following the business session, since several members had recently returned from their summer vacations, "fish stories" were in order. John M. Good and Roger H. Murphey were spokesmen for a party of considerable size which enjoyed a sojourn in camp at Grand Lake, in upper Michigan. In addition to the gentlemen named, the campers included, with their respective families, Opha Jackson, Frank E. Good, Pearl Young, Dr. Thad McLaughlin, all of Springfield; Wm. H. Reeser, of Urbana; Henry Sibert, of Peoria; and Mr. Leisinning, of Chicago. Their stories were full of interest. Ge Dale.

Sedalia, Mo.—L. H. Archias, accompanied by Mrs. Archias and daughters, Elise and Edith, made an overland trip last week in their touring car to Carthage, where they attended the Carthage fair and visited with relatives.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Rain and warm weather have brought the late fall stock in with a rush, and the market is flooded with dahlias, asters and gladioli. The cool weather preceding this was a big help to stock, but came near finishing outdoor stock. We had heavy white frosts, but not severe enough to do much harm. Carnations have improved somewhat, especially in the length of stem, but are still scarce and sell well for work. Roses are doing nicely, but are not much in demand as yet. Mums bring a good price and are scarce.

Various Notes.

Charles Hewson has returned from the state fair, where he had been acting as judge.

L. H. Neubeck has added an auto to his business, to take him back and forth to his greenhouses at Williamsville.

John Cramer will open a store shortly on Chippewa street, near Franklin. This corner has lately sprung into prominence, owing to the change in route of the principal car lines. It is considered a desirable spot and the move seems to be a good one.

As reported in this column last week, Henry Weber has had excellent success with his cyclamen and I find on examination that these plants are among the finest I have ever seen in Buffalo or elsewhere. The largest plants now measure twenty-four inches from tip to tip and are evenly covered with large leaves. The plants which he calls smaller are now in 7-inch pots and are specimens, every one of them. By Christmas he will have some of the finest plants ever grown, without a doubt. R. A. S.

CROSS SECTION OF A SUNLIGHT DOUBLE GLASS SASH ON A SUNLIGHT FRAME

Here is the sash you don't have to cover

Two layers of glass instead of one. A $\frac{3}{8}$ inch layer of dry, still air between—a perfect non-conductor—a transparent blanket—takes the place of mats and boards.

The saving in time and labor

Sunlight Double Glass Sash will pay for themselves in a single season. They never need covering—and therefore save half the time you have to give to single glass sash in covering and uncovering—in watching them on frosty nights.

Earlier, Stockier Plants

Under Sunlight Double Glass Sash the plants get all the light all the time. Every grower will see at once the value of the earlier, stockier plants resulting. Your crops will mature weeks ahead of the grower's who uses single glass sash—and you will get the benefit of the high prices in the early market.

Here is what one grower says

Harry S. Walker of Terre Haute, Ind., grew cabbage, tomatoes, eggplants and mangoes under Sunlight

Sunlight Double Glass Sash Co.

Double Glass Sash last season. The minimum thermometer was 15 below zero. No plants were injured. He says in part: "Plants grown under single layer sash were not to be compared with mine".

A gentle rain in your greenhouses under your absolute control

How much could you have saved this summer if you had had rain whenever you wanted it?

Would it have been worth the cost of an Irrigating System?

This is the kind of cabbage you can raise with the Skinner System of Irrigation.

The Skinner System of Irrigation has solved the watering problem. It eliminates all risk through drought, cuts down all loss from burnt-up crops.

L. Herziger Jr. of Neenah, Wis., saved enough strawberries in three weeks after he installed a Skinner System to pay for the entire system.

The Skinner System waters uniformly in a mist form—cannot cake the ground or bruise the tenderest foliage. Your plants are watered by a natural rainfall under your absolute control. Drought is unknown to users of the Skinner System.

Anyone who can use a pipe wrench can install this system.

Write today for these six books on irrigation. They contain the latest news on indoor and outdoor irrigation and the concrete experiences of Florists and Gardeners who use the Skinner System. A postal will bring them, Free. Write today to

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Chas. E. Lou-werse, who is an expert in landscape gardening and has hitherto devoted his attention principally to that line, is now branching out into the florists' business. He is erecting three greenhouses, each 22 x 175, and expects to plant these with a general line of stock this fall.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

CROWNED KING OF FLOATS.

The decorating of automobiles has become one of the regular and important parts of the retail flower business, but it is one of the classes of work in which the development is not so rapid as it was expected to be, for the reason that it takes a great deal of stock to do a creditable job and many people who get estimates on decorating a big touring car with natural flowers find the cost is more than they wish to spend. The florist cannot do much for the man who wants to pay for covering a car what would be the cost of a really good bouquet for a bride, and there are many such. The accompanying illustration, however, shows what can be done when sufficient expense is incurred. It is a machine decorated by Brown Bros, Vancouver, B. C., for a parade that was a feature of a recent "made in Canada" fair in that city. It took first prize in a line of floats that was three miles long, all autos more or less embellished. The principal interest attaches to the list of stock used. The first item was 6,000 Enchantress carnations, but there were 1,800 artificial roses. Two bales of moss were required for the frame of the crown, with quantities of cotton batting, ribbon, chiffon, etc. Another point that must not be overlooked in estimating on such a job is the work required. The frame was eight feet long, six feet wide and eight feet high. When in position it stood twelve feet above the ground. Every flower had to be wired on, so that none would shake off in the journey of twelve miles. That the labor represented a goodly number of dollars no florist who is accustomed to the making of funeral designs will fail to appreciate, but just how much work it is only those who have tried it can tell.

TRIMMING AND WRAPPING.

To Add to the Value of Plants.

Taking for granted that the plants have reached the store in clean pots, that overripe foliage has been removed and they are trim and neat generally, we will consider what may be done or left undone to increase their value to the prospective buyer. At the same time we are happy to live in an age when common sense taboos sensational ornament as vulgar taste. Mayhap a touch will serve to develop the beauty of form and color with which the Master Artist has already endowed the plants.

To provide a low-priced, neat and tasteful pot cover has cost us all more than one gray hair. Yes, the waterproof paper is a good makeshift, but only the first step to an economical and artistic cover. While nothing more tasteful and practical has yet been suggested than basket covers and bark, these are too expensive for small plants. For larger plants they can be afforded, as well as mats and palm fibers.

In order to give perfect satisfaction to the customer, a pot cover ought to last at least as long as an ordinary blooming plant. But it is often loose and disordered by the time the plant is delivered, and this without justly attaching any blame to the delivery man. Better send a plant in a clean, bare pot than in a rumpled cover. Therefore, up to the present writing, it behooves the salesman to urge the purchase of a better cover, which will outlast several plants.

Judicious Use of Ribbon.

Really, now, is it an insult to tie a ribbon on a self-respecting plant, or is it possible to add to its beauty? It all depends upon the how, the why and the where. For instance, if there is an azalea partly out of bloom or imperfectly flowered, a reasonable decoration, which harmonizes in style and color with the flower, is allowable and even commendable.

A handle basket may be an addition to a tall, frail plant, or one which is inclined to vine. The basket covers while in reality they are held in place by fine wires attached below.

An araucaria, belonging to the conifers, may be properly decorated with small cones attached to the tips of the leaves, and the gaiety of the Christmas season seems to permit narrow red ribbon to tie the cones with; or a scarlet whorl of chiffon, after the shape of the foliage, may find a place between the green whorls. A fancy evergreen, too, seems to lend itself gracefully to a bunch of scarlet berries, to hang over the pot or half hide itself among the foliage. But do not be tempted to load plants with toggery or fluffy-ruffles petticoats.

Various Artistic Touches.

Certain plants leave much of the soil exposed, mostly by reason of special training, as in the case of azaleas and standard roses and chrysanthemums. These should be treated with a little lycopodium or moss over the soil, not covering it so thickly, however, as to interfere with proper watering.

Some plants, such as cyclamens, azaleas, lilies, mums, etc., may be enhanced in value by laying a simple bunch of violets, pansies, forget-me-nots, or something else sufficiently dainty, over the envelope which contains the card.

The stationery that accompanies a gift plant should represent the self-respect of both donor and dealer. Whether it is the sender's personal card or one obtained from the dealer, let it be of good quality and always enclosed in an addressed envelope to match, punched and neatly but securely tied to the plant inside of the wrapping.

Decorating an Automobile Costs Much in Stock and Labor.

the pot and the handle serves as a support or a trellis, and the point where the plant is bound to this trellis may be a place for a modest cord or ribbon tie. Again, a rigidly formal plant may be made more attractive by the addition of a chiffon butterfly or two, apparently hovering over the flowers, Wrapping Neatly and Safely.

While we always expect to line a box of flowers with oil paper, we forget that a plant requires just as dainty a wrapping. After the branches have been tied together with raffia, the plants should have a separate wrapping of oil paper, pot and all. Lay down a sheet of wrapping paper of the size required. Lay the plant down on its side and roll it, folding the paper carefully under the pot and trying, hot tamale style, at the top. Add one or two extra ties around the top of the pot and around the lower part, but forget the pins. Attach the address tag with the tie at the top. If the weather is frosty or threatening, add an extra wrapping of several layers of newspaper or cotton batting between the oil paper and the outside wrapping. The outside wrapping paper should be firm enough to protect the plant from occasional raps, from gusts of wind, or even easy falls.

Some Extra Precautions.

Some plants, such as lilies, require extra packing and tying for each

THE NEW IN SUPPLIES.

It is interesting to note that the steady advance in many lines of florists' supplies has been in the direction of a more skillful use of natural products, this being especially apparent in the present season. "You see the preparation used in preserving our new cycas leaf is so perfect that not only is the color retained with perfect fidelity, but there is not the slightest appearance of varnish or stickiness of any kind. Then, too, these leaves are flexible, an unknown quality in the preserved cycas of the past." This is the way Mr. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., described the latest in sago palm leaves. Continuing, Mr. Eschner displayed two wreaths of great beauty. Epoch-making wreaths they may be called, for heretofore wreaths have pleased florist humorously termed it, "the at last wreath," is made of ruscus and magnolia, with small cycas and some thistles, poppies and cones used by way of ornament. The Atlas wreath is made in green and in brown.

The cones used in the Atlas wreath suggest the prominence that these tree products are given this season. It is due primarily, Mr. Eschner says, to the scarcity and consequent high price of immortelles. In their place cape flowers of all colors are being offered, scarlet capes especially. To improve these scarlet capes and give them a touch of nature, Robert Shoch made up a wreath with cones that was admired at Baltimore. These cones come in a dozen different sizes.

Close attention has been paid, Mr. Eschner says, to the development of the basket. Mr. Rice brought over from Europe no end of novel baskets, some of which have already made a hit. Of course there are baskets that have been used for twenty-five years and that are so good they may be used for another quarter century. There are perhaps twenty-five styles of these so-called staple baskets, with twice as many novelties. The novelties may be divided into three classes: the cut flower baskets, the plant baskets, and those that may be used either for cut flowers or for plants. The plant baskets outnumber the cut flower baskets by perhaps two to one. Their increase has been at the expense of the jardiniere. The features of the basket novelties, generally speaking, are pans or vases as inside receptacles and handles that strengthen rather than come from the top of the basket. To define it more clearly, the handle appears to start halfway down the sides of the basket, giving a pleasing and rather different effect.

The hamper, first cousin to the basket, exhibits a striking novelty in the burnt leather trunk for violets. This odd effect is created by reversing birchbark and singeing it. Another novelty for the violet is the violet handkerchief made of delicate chiffon of violet color, intended as a dress shield, adding a touch of daintiness.

The revival of the old-fashioned bouquet holders made by M. Rice & Co. several years ago was followed by their general use throughout the country. The exquisite creations of lace and satin were found to be too expensive for everyday usage, which led to flower; that is, a little cotton or soft tissue paper pad in each open flower and a loose tie of raffia to hold the flowers together in an upright position, so that they will stand wrapping. Yes, it takes time, but time is money. What customer does not resent receiving a bruised and fringed lily or a broken-necked chrysanthemum?

Of course it is understood that before packing for delivery, the plant, if at all dry, should be watered and allowed to drain thoroughly.

TWO PRIZE BOATS.

It was just about a year ago that The Review called attention to the new art of boat decorating. As further illustrative of this art, the accompanying snapshot pictures may be of interest. They show two prize boats decorated for a water carnival held on Okauchee lake, Wis., by Aug. F. Kellner, of the Aug. F. Kellner Co., Milwaukee. The rowboat was so decorated as to represent a Chinese watercraft. The rear part contained a canopy built of cane stakes, and ornamented with wistaria vines and red lanterns. The sides were draped with green branches and hydrangea flowers. The gasoline launch was ornamented with an apple tree bearing fruit, while the sides were covered with cornstalks and large pumpkins. At the base of the tree an assortment of vegetables was displayed to good advantage.

been made and sold chiefly of what may be termed self-material, the garnishing being sold separately, for the florist to add at discretion. These wreaths, on the other hand, are made up with combinations of foliage; the work so well done that they will certainly make a place for themselves. One is called the Diana wreath. It is formed of fine sprays of foliage, resembling new growth on hemlock spruce, and is so colored as to give a lavender and green effect; the Diana wreath is strictly speaking a "self" wreath, but not self-colored. the introduction of the paper bouquet holder, which was hardly nice enough. To fill this want Mr. Rice has had the embossed paper bouquet holder made. It combines much of the beauty of the lace and satin bouquet holder with a better grade of material than the one made of paper.

While in Holland Mr. Rice secured some pretty Delftware vases, blue and white china in quaint design, the smaller sizes pleasing for favors.

SOW BUGS OR WOOD LICE.

Will some reader of The Review give me a remedy for sow bugs or wood lice? I have used all the usual remedies, which seem to be of little avail.

L. G. B.

Rye flour is a delicacy much relished by sow bugs, sometimes called wood lice, according to Frank Felke, Wilmette, Ill. If it has been sweetened to their taste, they will gorge themselves with it and will roll up and die of the poison also included. He uses two parts rye flour, two parts sugar and one part Paris green, mixing only so much as is to be used at one time, as it deteriorates if it stands any length of time. The mixture is scattered along the top of the edge-board of the bench in the evening, being careful to see that the board is dry, else the mixture will become lumpy and unpalatable to even the most voracious of the sow bugs. "Try it," says Mr. Felke, "and you will be surprised to find how many it will kill; you wouldn't have believed there were that many on your place."

A WOMAN GLADIOLUS GROWER.

One day last week a few growers of the gladiolus met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Austin, of Wayland, O., to see the gladioli and the grower, Mrs. Austin. A brief account of what we saw will be of interest as showing what a woman can accomplish when her heart is in the work.

The farm, which has been in the Austin family about 100 years, is on high ground, sloping to the southeast. The soil is a clayey loam, but the frequent cultivation it receives makes it look much lighter than it is. In fact, it has the appearance of having been passed through a sieve.

Some years ago, when Mrs. Austin came onto the farm—and she is yet a young woman—she commenced with a few bulbs, and seeing the possibilities of this flower, she continued to increase her stock, raise new seedlings, test the best obtainable and weed out and destroy the undesirable. In the meantime the farm was successfully managed by Mr. Austin, but the time soon came when the few acres of gladioli became important as a moneymaker, besides being one of the attractions of that part of Portage county. Many of the leading growers and seedsmen of the country have been purchasers of bulbs grown there. Last year she had orders for almost 100,000 of a single variety after the stock was exhausted. She has now growing about a million bulbs, including all sizes of America. All the varieties on the farm seem to be in perfect health, although there is a general complaint this season that gladioli are not their best, on account of the drought and extreme heat.

Mrs. A. H. Austin.

Mrs. Austin's bulbs are all grown in rows three feet apart, and about fifty rods in length. Grown in this way an acre will make less than three miles of a row, so that the time required to cultivate that area is not long. A well stirred surface is conducive to a steady and healthy growth.

Besides growing a large area, Mrs. Austin keeps up with the times by testing most of the new introductions offered in America and Europe, besides raising choice seedlings from hand-fertilized seed. Nowhere else have I ever seen such fine seedlings. We looked at them in the forenoon, then talked of them after dinner, and went again later in the day to take a last look. We saw yellows as deep as the daffodil, others pure white and no end of fine colored varieties. I didn't dare to ask what they were worth, but great prices have been paid for some not half as good. I saw some fine ones at Baltimore, but they were nowhere beside Mrs. Austin's. M. Crawford.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED

["Garden Planning," by W. S. Rogers. Doubleday, Page & Co., New York. Size, 5 1/4 x 8 inches; bound in green cloth; 423 pages; about 140 illustrations. Price, net, $1.10; postage, 10 cents.]

"Garden Planning," by W. S. Rogers, is one of the latest additions to the excellent series of books designated as the Garden Library, other volumes of which have been favorably noticed in The Review. The present book is bound in the same tasteful style as the others and its contents are of the same useful character. It was written by a gardener in England and was carefully revised by the American publishers, so as to adapt it to American conditions. The illustrations were made from the author's own drawings and really illustrate the text.

Though the book is not a cumbrously large one, it is comprehensive enough so that it treats the subject from both a practical and a theoretical point of view, clearly stating both the methods and the reasons, "the how and the why." The reasons, the fundamental principles, are discussed in the first part of the book, while the concrete examples, or finished plans, appear in the second part of the book. And, aside from the mere planning or outlining of gardens, much other valuable information is supplied, with reference, for instance, to the nature of the soil and its treatment, the drainage, the making and care of lawns, the selection of plants and shrubbery, the preparation of composts, the paths and their construction, the edgings, fences, hedges, trellises, terraces, rockeries and other details.

The book is comprehensive enough, also, so that it includes plans and suggestions for gardens of numerous sorts, shapes and sizes. It is intended to be applicable chiefly to small gardens, ordinary city and suburban lots. In other words, it was written especially for the use of the majority, for the multitudes of men of only average prosperity, whose landed possessions are tiny patches and specks of the earth's surface, not large estates. Yet the book, though written principally for the class of men who will principally use it, contains the necessary facts for all classes. It contains diagrams and descriptions of tracts of ground that vary in size from a back lot 20x26 feet to a town site.

And the plans, it seems safe to say, are not of the untried, visionary sort that look prettiest on paper. The plans are not only capable of being so used as to attain good results, but may be said to be actual pictures of such results, already attained. In fact, it appears that most of the plans were "executed," tested in practical business, by the author himself. More alluring diagrams or sketches could probably be drawn by any imaginative artist, but they might fail to "work out."

GREENHOUSES ON WHEELS.

An innovation in greenhouse building was launched at Redford, Mich., Monday, September 25, when the fine range of movable houses built by Albert Stahelin was moved into position over the carnation plants which they will shelter this winter. These houses, four in number, 173 feet long and thirty-five feet wide, are built almost entirely of steel and are practically one unit. Garland gutters, eight feet high, and truss were used. As stated in a previous letter, the houses are built on solid wheels about ten inches in diameter, which run on railroad rails, these tracks being held in place by cement supports about three feet apart, making it impossible for the rails to get out of line. Many predicted that the hundreds of 24x36 panes of glass would suffer considerably during the moving, but not one light was broken, showing how accurately the tracks were laid and how rigidly the houses are built.

The Detroit Florists' Club was well represented at the launching, or moving, the party including Gus Taepke, Fred Pautke, Hubert Pierce, George Browne, Fred Breitmeyer, J. F. Sullivan, Hugo Schroeter, William Dilger, Albert Pochelon, Thomas Browne, John Warneke, Ed Beard, E. A. Scribner, Robert Klagge, Mr. Burch, H. Klagge, Mr. Maebius, E. A. Fetters, Robert Rahaley, Theo. Mitchell, Frank Walling, Michael Bloy, Henry Machleit, Otto Blatt and others. H. S. Garland, secretary and manager of the George M. Garland Co., Des Plaines, Ill., the concern that designed the houses and supplied the material, was on hand to see the successful completion of the work.

Remarks were made by George Browne, J. F. Sullivan, E. A. Scribner, A. Pochelon, M. Bloy and Ed Beard. All congratulated Mr. Stahelin and wished him much success in his undertaking. Mr. Sullivan said that many of us could accomplish wonders if we only dared and that Albert Stahelin was one who had dared and he deserved unbounded success. Many were the predictions regarding the crop which would result from this method, especially from planting right into the ground on no benches at all. Some questioned this method, but Mr. Stahelin's scheme was pronounced a most practical one and the general opinion was that its advantages were many and it would pay well. Mr. Stahelin himself is a most modest young man and when called upon for a few remarks took hold of his young wife's hand and, turning very red, said he had nothing whatever to say. H. S.

DAHLIA AND GLADIOLUS.

Western Society at Indianapolis.

The adjourned initial meeting of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Society was called to order at the Dennison hotel, Indianapolis, Tuesday, September 26, at 1:30 p. m., President E. T.

Barnes, of Spencer, Ind., in the chair. The exhibition at Wiegand's dividing the attendance, adjournment was held to that establishment to meet at the hour of 8 p. m. Director E. E. Stewart, of Rives Junction, Mich., presided at the evening meeting in the absence of President Barnes, who was called home because of illness in his family. Homer Wiegand was made secretary pro tem. Eleven new members were recorded, which included prominent growers in the middle west. Richard Vincent, Jr., president-elect of the Society of American Florists, wrote from White Marsh, Md., expressing his regret at his inability to attend and asked that his name be recorded as a member. On motion the chairman appointed three committees to take up in the immediate future the most pressing work of the new organization. First, on coöperation for the Chicago show in August; second, on nomenclature; third, on premiums and specials for the Chicago meeting. A rising vote of thanks was extended to Messrs. A. Wiegand & Sons for their courtesy in supplying exhibition space, assistance in staging and for entertainment of officers. After further discussion and examination of exhibits, the convention adjourned subject to the call of President Barnes.

The Exhibition.

As early as six a. m. Messrs. Stewart, Barnes and others, representing various exhibitors, were on hand at the big Wiegand show conservatory on Illinois street. On account of the late arrival of some exhibits, the staging was somewhat delayed, but the exhibition was ready at noon.

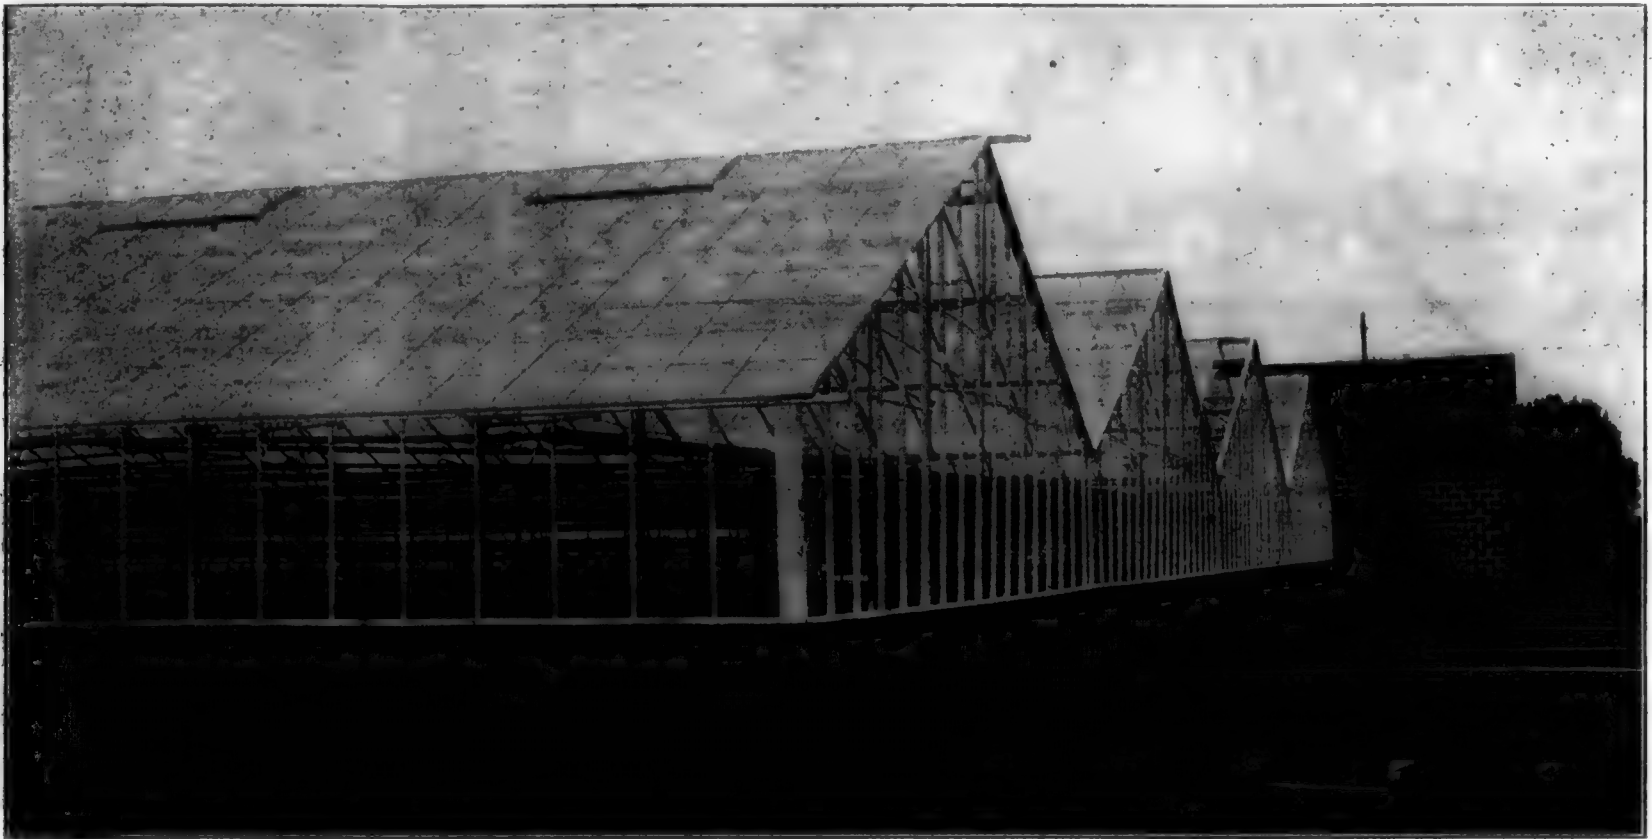

E. T. Barnes, Spencer, Ind., supplied something like 5,000 blooms of dahlias in many types and forms.

E. E. Stewart, Rives Junction, Mich., staged seventy-five varieties of gladioli, which came through in fine shape and showed up well considering the lateness of the season. One of his new ones, somewhat resembling Mrs. Francis King, is called Michigan, a big flower and good spike. He also showed President Taft and Golden Queen.

Vaughan's Seed Store sent from Western Springs, Ill., dahlias and gladioli in about thirty kinds, the latter including Mastodon and Charles L. Hutchinson. Messrs. Wiegand had announced the event in the daily papers and the attendance of the general public and interested amateur growers of these flowers was good both through the afternoon and evening.

DIRECTION OF GREENHOUSES.

What are considered the best greenhouses for roses and carnations, those running east and west or those running north and south, and what are their advantages and disadvantages? Am I mistaken in believing that the Poehlmanns, Reinbergs and most other up-to-date growers build their houses east and west? J. F. D.

Although each direction has its advocates, it really makes but little difference which way the houses run. In many of the large ranges, some of the houses run in one direction and others in the opposite way, without any noticeable difference in the results. When two-third or three-quarter-span houses are built, of course they should run east and west, but there is little choice in the direction for even-span houses.

In theory the houses which run east and west, and particularly the three-quarter-span houses, are best in localities where strong sunlight is needed during the hours from 9 o'clock to 4, and where there is likely to be a deficiency, owing to cloudy weather or other causes. On the other hand, houses running north and south have their glass at right angles to the sun during the early morning and late afternoon and afford partial shade during the middle of the day. For these reasons the north and south houses seem especially adapted to sections where there is an abundance of sunshine, where the light and heat may be excessive during the middle of the day and where more sunshine is desired in early morning and evening.

which I intend to take my next year's carnation soil. As the soil is rather heavy, would it be better to mix sand with it and leave the manure out, or which would be the best way to prepare this soil for carnations? J. D.

The specimens forwarded showed plainly that you have a case of the common stem-rot. Your treatment of the plants seems to have been correct and ought to at least check the disease. I will give a few suggestions.

Be sure that your plants are not set in the soil too deeply. They should be set just about as deeply as they were in the field. Spraying with Bordeaux mixture quite heavily has proven beneficial. Dusting with Grape Dust right into the heart of each plant, so that it will reach the stems, is good. In one bad case relief was found by making small trenches, about two and one-half inches deep and the same width, between each row of plants. When watering, fill these trenches, leaving the soil around the plants rather dry except what reaches the surface through capillary attraction. I would not allow the plants to become extremely dry before watering, but rather try to keep an even moisture, keeping the water away from the plant and especially the stem. This will keep the plants growing steadily, whereas allowing the soil to become quite dry and then soaking it will be going from one extreme to the other and the plant is almost continuously suffering from either drought or flood.

The fertility of the soil has nothing to do with this disease. That your roses are thriving in it is no sign that the carnations should be free from disease. The spores are, no doubt, in the rose soil too, but they do not attack the roses as they do the carnations.

I would not mix sand in that soil which you say is a trifle heavy, but would advise you to use stable manure in preparing it. This will make it lighter. Prepare it this fall, as far as is practicable, so that all the manure will be thoroughly decayed and incorporated with the soil before putting it into the house. A. F. J. B.

STEM-ROT.

I have sent you today a box of soil and carnation plants, taken from the bench on which I planted carnations last month. I am now losing them day after day through stem-rot. The plants took good hold when planted, but the last week in August the trouble started and I have not been able to check it yet. I have given them two applications of air-slaked lime, about ten days apart, but it does not seem to do any good.

I have had some trouble with stem-rot for the last two years, but have been guarding against it all the time, in order to overcome it. This year I had lost but few plants from cuttings until planting time and the plants looked fine when planted in the greenhouse. I have been keeping them on the dry side; that is, I give them a good watering and then let them get pretty dry before watering again. I have good, light houses and have given them full ventilation day and night. The soil is taken from an old meadow field, which I manured first and then plowed under in November. I stacked it up about four feet high and left it there all winter, as the soil remained too wet to allow me to do anything with it until late this spring, when I had it turned over. I used the same soil for roses, which are thriving well in it. Any advice you can give me as to stopping this trouble will be highly appreciated. How often and in what quantity would it be safe to put air-slaked lime on the benches? Is there anything else I could use?

I have an old pasture field, from

SEASONABLE

SUGGESTIONS

Gardenias.

Great care must now be taken of gardenias, especially where they are being grown for winter blooming. While they will endure considerable cold and still look fresh and green, it is a great mistake to allow the temperature to run down in the house where they are grown so that the atmosphere feels cold and clammy. The minimum should never be lower than 65 degrees and a little fire heat to maintain a buoyant atmosphere will now be a necessity. If the benches are well drained and the compost light and porous, the benches will need a thorough soaking of water once in five or six days now. The soil must never become either pasty or at all dust-dry; either condition will cause loss of buds and yellow foliage.

Let the thermometer reach 75 degrees before ventilating; then air a little at a time, reducing it in the same way. The plants, on every clear day, should have a thorough spraying to keep the arch enemy of gardenias—mealy bug—in check. Keep the plants tied up and discontinue pinching where winter flowers are wanted. If, on the other hand, a spring crop is desired, pinch back the runaway shoots for three weeks longer. Go slowly on feeding. A good plan is to give occasional light top-dressings of fine cow manure, in preference to using manure water. The latter will be all right early in the new year, but a little overplus of it now may cause a wholesale dropping of buds. The night temperature should now be 68 to 70 degrees and the atmosphere should be moist.

Poinsettias.

With the arrival of colder nights, it is no longer safe to leave the poinsettias in coldframes, or they will lose many of their leaves. They do not yet need a high night temperature; 50 to 55 degrees will suffice until the bracts show, when 10 degrees higher should be given, keeping them somewhat cooler when the bracts are well developed. Now is the time to make up a good number of pans for the holidays. If these are filled about the last of September, the plants are not likely to become drawn and leggy. Use a light, moderately rich and sandy soil, and work in some small ferns, Asparagus Sprengeri or other green plants among the poinsettias. Use a watering can for some time, in preference to the hose. In fact, it would pay to restrict oneself to the watering pot all the time and there would then be less dead and yellowing foliage in evidence.

Summer Bulbous Plants.

As the tuberous-rooted begonias, gloxinias, gesneras, achimenes and other summer-flowering plants pass, they should be placed in a coldframe or pit, where they can have glass protection and be gradually dried off. Do not let the drying be sudden, as it too often is, or a large part of the bulbs are sure to die. After the bulbs are thoroughly dried, lay the pots or pans on their sides in a dry shed or cellar where there are suitable shelves. While begonias will keep perfectly well in any place where potatoes are stored, just clear of frost, the gloxinias should not have a lower temperature than 50 degrees. Do not lay them under the greenhouse benches, to be the prey of sowbugs and other insects. They look untidy and in many cases the drip from the benches will wet them and start them into premature growth. Later in the season, when the rush work slackens somewhat, the various tubers can be shaken out, cleaned, labeled and stored in boxes in readiness for potting.

Callas.

If any callas are still standing outdoors, they should be got inside without delay. They are now well started and when placed under glass, with a little genial warmth, will make quick headway. Be careful not to overwater them until the pots are nicely filled with roots. This applies as much to bench-grown as to pot-grown plants. Callas want copious waterings and lots of feeding when in active growth, but in the early stages of growth an excess is liable to start decay of the tubers. A night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees suits callas. They can be grown cooler, but flower more freely in a warmer house. Do not lose sight of the Godfrey calla. It is one of the best things sent out in late years.

Nerines.

The brilliant nerines, or Guernsey lilies, as they are popularly called, usually flower from the end of September until November. They propagate rather slowly, and for this reason they are not by any means abundant. Some day I expect to see them a standard florists' pot plant. The bulbs which have been baking under coldframe sashes or on a sunny shelf since early summer, will now be pushing up their spikes and should be taken out and watered. Any with the bulbs much crowded can now be pulled apart and repotted. Such varieties as Fothergilli major and Sarniensis can go half a dozen to a 6-inch pot and four to a 5-inch pot. Use a compost of fibrous loam, broken charcoal, coarse sand and about one-fourth well dried cow manure. Give them a cool house to grow and flower in. Any repotted will not flower well for a couple of years. Nerines must be a perfect mat of roots to bloom freely.

Hydrangeas.

Pot-grown hydrangeas will now have their growths firm and fairly hard. To assist in further ripening them, run them drier at the root now, not to the extent of actual wilting, but considerably reducing the water supply. Keep in the sunniest possible spot outdoors until threatened with frost of sufficient severity to injure them. Plants in the field have made a fine growth of late. There is no need to wait any longer before potting these up. All will lift with nice balls. Shake off the soil, so that they will not need too large pots; 6-inch and 8-inch are convenient sizes. Use a tolerably rich soil. After potting, keep them outdoors as long as weather permits. The advantage of lifting now is that the plants get quite nicely rooted in the pots before cold weather sets in.

AN ACORN.

"Great oaks from little acorns grow," and it is interesting to note the beginnings of some of what are now the largest greenhouse establishments in the country. A good many of them started even smaller than has Mrs. A. R. Scharf, at Mancos, Colo., whose greenhouse is shown in the accompanying illustration. Mancos is forty miles in one direction and 150 miles in the other direction from any other greenhouse. It is twenty miles from any other town, and there were only four deaths in it in the last year. Perhaps one would say it is not the best of locations for a florist, but Mrs. Scharf finds business growing steadily. Last summer she replaced her original house, 14x20, with the present structure, 15x60, heated with a hot air flue. Trade is good in the winter, but there is scarcely any call for cut flowers during summer.

ACACIA PUBESCENS.

Being rather interested in hard-wooded greenhouse plants, such as heaths and acacias, I come to ask you whether it would be possible to get the following information: When and where does Acacia pubescens get its origin? I fail to find it catalogued here or abroad. Its beautiful, pendulent foliage and flowers, in bunches, made a great attraction lately at the different flower shows. Strange to say, during my travels in Europe I never came across a single plant. I understand that it can be raised from seed. This has been confirmed by a prominent Boston private gardener. Young stock has been propagated from cuttings, which has also been confirmed. I hope to get further information through the valuable help of some of your readers. T. K.

Wales when grown under the same conditions. It would be interesting to hear from some of those who have grown this, especially with reference to the temperature that best suits it. As for me, it has proved of but little value to me, and has been discarded. Still, there are others who may have done better with it and I hope they will give their opinion. C. W.

POOR GROWTH OF DAHLIAS.

Considerable comment has been made recently upon the poor growth and blooming of dahlia plants this summer. Perhaps some of the expert dahlia growers can throw some light on the problem.

This season many dahlias in the east have shown a stunted growth, producing scarcely any blooms, whereas those which grow rather high bloomed freely. The two types of plants may be seen growing side by side in the same soil. No disease appears to be associated with this peculiarity; that is, neither fungous nor insect trouble can be detected. The stunted growth of the plants looks much like that caused by malnutrition or overfeeding. In some instances of which I know the plants were grown in trenches of manure; in others, manure was spread loosely on the beds, and in still other cases commercial fertilizers were applied.

In connection with this it may be noted that the summer has been extremely dry and the heat intense. The foliage on the stunted plants, however, was of a deep, rich color, and there was a tendency for the leaves to curl and crinkle.

Perhaps some of the dahlia growers may have something to suggest as to the cause of this trouble. G. E. S.

HARD-WOODED PLANTS.

In spite of the extremely hot and dry summer, hard-wooded plants have made good growth and are particularly well budded. The idea which still prevails in many places, that this class of plants needs shade, either complete or partial, is utterly wrong. They will grow satisfactorily, but bloom disappointingly, when so treated. Where there was a good force of water at command and these plants were kept freely hosed over on clear, hot days, and the ground was frequently stirred with the cultivator or hoe, they are now in fine condition. This applies to azaleas, ericas, boronias, Daphne Indica, acacias, camellias and one or two other varieties which are grown on a small scale.

Recent rains have wonderfully benefited this class of stock and the present is a suitable time to lift and repot them. It is not necessary to provide a peaty compost for any of the varieties named. Fibrous loam, leaf-mold and sand make a good soil, using twice as much loam as leaf-mold. In the case of camellias and the stronger growing acacias, like armata, a heavier soil is to be preferred. Reduce the balls well; in the case of such ericas as melanthera it will do no harm to pare down the sides with a sharp spade. All hard-wooded plants must be firmly potted; particularly is this true of ericas and acacias. Drain efficiently, ram the soil in firmly and be sure to leave no open spaces around the sides of the pots. You can not pot these

PROPAGATING ADIANTUMS.

I have a good stock of adiantum ferns, from which I wish to propagate. Kindly let me know how and when to do so. F. H. T.

Adiantums may be propagated in two ways, either by means of seedlings or by division of the crowns. The latter method, however, is used but seldom, except in the case of Adiantum Farleyense. If the query refers, as it probably does, to Adiantum cuneatum, the best way to propagate would be by means of spores, and the time to gather the spores is any time during the late summer or autumn, in readiness for sowing about the first of the year.

Some judgment is required in gathering the spores, in order to get them just right, but if the fronds are cut off when the spores are beginning to drop, and are tied up in paper or put in large paper bags and kept in a dry place until the fronds are perfectly dry, they ought to turn out satisfactorily. By the time the latter stage is reached, the spores will be found in the form of brown dust within the paper, and are then ready for sowing.

Some clean 6-inch pots should then be prepared for the spores by filling them to within about an inch of the top with clean cinders or other drainage material, on top of which some finely sifted soil is pressed down level, so that the surface is below the top of the pot. The best soil for the purpose is either peat or fine leaf-mold, though this is not absolutely necessary. Then the pots are given a thorough watering and allowed to drain for a couple of hours, after which they are ready for the sowing. Sow the spores thinly on the surface of the soil and cover the pots with panes of glass, after placing them in a shaded part of the greenhouse, where they will be well protected from sun and wind.

No further watering should be required until the seedlings show in the form of a green growth on the soil, provided the pots have been properly cared for, and the seedlings should not be disturbed until they show signs of the first frond, which is usually in eight or ten weeks from the time of sowing. When this stage is reached the seedlings may be pricked out in small clumps into pans or flats which have been prepared in the same manner as to soil and drainage as the original seed pots. After this transplanting, the seedlings remain in the pans until they are large enough for handling, when they should be potted off into small pots.

Throughout all these early stages in the life of an adiantum, it should be protected from the sun and strong winds and should not be allowed to get really dry at any time. A night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees is best for the seeds and seedlings. W. H. T.

BIDDING FOR BUSINESS.

Taking advantage of the well known disposition of florists to put off ordering until the last minute and then use the wires, Wertheimer Bros., the New York ribbon house, procured of the Western Union a quantity of "night letter" blanks and printed in their address, so that the user would be saved writing it. These blanks were then mailed to customers and prospective customers, with an invitation to use the blanks to send 50-word orders by wire at the expense of the firm. Sydney B. Wertheimer says the idea has contributed its share toward making this an exceptionally busy season.

THE DORSET VIOLET.

Please inform us how you consider the Dorset violet compares with the Princess of Wales, as to color, size of bloom, length of stems, productiveness and other qualities. C. G. J. & S.

The color of Dorset is similar to that of Princess of Wales, but the stems are shorter and the flowers smaller. Some growers believe it is a fine variety, but a trial for one season showed it to be in every way inferior to Princess of plants firmly enough without the aid of a good potting stick. Keep them outdoors a little longer after potting. When housing, let the house be cool, light and airy. Remember to water carefully, but spray freely. All hard-wooded plants have fine, hair-like roots, especially the ericas, and a severe drying out usually kills them. Plants of Erica melanthera, with the buds showing color, can be given a slightly warmer house; 45 to 48 degrees at night will suffice to get them in good flower for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

WINTERING YOUNG ROSES.

We should like to know how to winter roses that are just rooted now. We have potted some hardy rambler cuttings in 2½-inch pots and should like to know whether we can winter them in a coldframe that will freeze a few times during the winter. C. W. R.

The rambler roses will winter perfectly in a coldframe. In fact, the frame is much to be preferred to a greenhouse. Keep the plants well exposed until really cold weather arrives, leaving the sashes off until that time. If you cover the pots with a few inches of perfectly dry leaves, they will keep out a lot of frost. Do not put the sashes on until the leaves are scattered over the plants. Ventilate during mild spells of weather in winter and freely toward spring. Remove the leaf covering as soon as the weather has sufficiently warmed. C. W.

POTTING FIELD-GROWN ROSES.

Please tell me when to take roses up from the field and pot them, to have them for the holidays. What kind of soil is the best? I am located in Kansas. J. A. G.

Field-grown roses should not be lifted earlier than the end of October, and with you November would be better. The wood should be well ripened before they are dug. Roses prefer a rather heavy soil; one containing a little clay is excellent, but they will thrive in quite light loam if well fed when the pots are full of roots. If by the holidays you mean the Christmas season, you can not dig up roses and have them in any condition at that time. Possibly you could get a few flowers on Clothilde Soupert and some of the teas by carefully digging now, but they would not be very salable plants. Christmas is too early for pot roses also. All that I grow are used from Easter to Memorial, chiefly at Easter. A few come earlier and some later. Watch the calendar of operations in The Review for later hints. C. W.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

An executive committee meeting will be held in New York city September 28, to consider arrangements for the Detroit exhibition. This meeting will be followed by a conference in Detroit to determine upon the detail work. The Rose Society will ask its friends to subscribe a guarantee fund, so that the society may be able to offer an excellent list of prizes, and be assured of financial support. The Rose Society's permanent investment fund of over $3,000 has been accumulated from its life membership fees. This fund is invested in guaranteed mortgages of New York; the securities are those in which the state savings banks are authorized to invest.

ANTIRRHINUMS.

Where antirrhinums were benefited early they are now starting to grow away nicely. It does not pay to allow the main shoot to run right up to flower. Pinch it back and let four or five of the strongest sprouts, near the base of the plant, remain. Rub off all weak ones; a few good spikes will pay better than a lot of weaklings. Antirrhinum spikes are of little value now and there are few calls for them before November. It is in late winter and early spring that they are most appreciated. The plants can be tied up to stakes, or, better still, supported by wires and twine in the same way as carnations.

Plants which are in pots and intended to follow chrysanthemums should not be allowed to get potbound. If in 3-inch pots, give a shift into 4-inch. Keep them cool and well supplied with water. Pot off any in flats which are of sufficient size. Snapdragons, if allowed to become of a fair size in flats, do not safely transplant to benches. Pot-grown stock gives better results. Now is a good time to get a batch of cuttings from plants outside. Those along the sides of the flowering stems are the best. These will root easily in a carnation cutting bench. Seeds sown now will produce nice plants with which to follow mid-season and late mums.

IMPORTS OF PLANTS.

The S. S. Finland, from Antwerp, which arrived at New York September 19, brought the following consignments:

Rosess, J. P., 8 cases plants.
Langelier, H., 68 pkgs. laurel trees, etc.
Maltus & Ware, 105 cases plants.
Vandegrift, F. B., & Co., 43 cases plants.
Kuyper, P. C., & Co., 40 cases plants.
McHutchison & Co., 64 pkgs. plants.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Committees to Examine Seedlings.

President Elmer D. Smith announces the committees to examine new chrysanthemums for the ensuing year, which are as follows:

Boston—William Nicholson, chairman; James Wheeler, Alex Montgomery. Ship flowers to Boston Flower Exchange, C Park street, care of chairman.

New York—Eugene Dailedouze, chairman; W. H. Duckham, A. Herrington. Ship flowers to New York Cut Flower Co., 55 Twenty-second street, care of chairman.

Philadelphia—A. B. Cartledge, chairman; John Westcott, S. S. Pennock. Ship flowers to A. B. Cartledge, 1514 Chestnut street.

Cincinnati—R. Witterstaetter, chairman; James Allen, Henry Schwartz. Ship flowers to chairman, Jabez Elliott Flower Market, care of janitor.

Chicago—J. B. Deamud, chairman; E. A. Wood, T. E. Waters. Ship flowers to J. B. Deamud, 51 Wabash avenue.

Shipments should be made to arrive by 2 p. m. on examination days, to receive attention from the committee. They must be prepaid to destination and an entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week they are to be examined, or it may accompany the blooms.

Seedlings and sports are both eligible to be shown before these committees, provided the raiser has given them two years' trial to determine their true character. Special attention is called to the rule that sports, to receive a certificate, must pass at least three of the five committees. The committees will be in session to examine such exhibits as may be submitted on each Saturday during October and November. The dates will be October 7, 14, 21 and 28, and November 4, 11, 18 and 25.

Chas. W. Johnson, Sec'y.

Cambridge, Mass.—John McKenzie returned September 7 from a two months' visit with relatives in Scotland.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Market conditions remain unchanged since last week's report. Business is picking up with the advent of the cooler weather. Some fine Golden Glow mums are now available and selling nicely.

Two store openings here last week made inroads on the dahlia supply and cleaned these up well. Considerable quantities of long-stemmed asters, Beauties and carnations also were used in various ways.

Various Notes.

A number of local newspaper men were entertained in Breitmeyer's new store Monday evening, September 25, when a seven-course dinner was served in the beautiful conservatory and enjoyed to the fullest extent by the press. Friday evening, September 29, the members of the Detroit Florists' Club and their ladies will be Mr. Breitmeyer's guests in the new store, when light refreshments will be served and music will add to their pleasure. Saturday, September 30, the store will be opened to the public. This new store is immediately adjoining the former store, has a frontage of about forty feet and is 110 feet deep. The interior is finished in ivory and green. Window-boxes planted with boxwood will rest on stone projections on the front of the building, while along the front close to the windows will be a hedge of boxwood. H. S.

HARTFORD, CONN.

The annual dahlia exhibition of the Connecticut Horticultural Society was held at Unity hall, September 19 and 20. The recent unseasonable frost had its effect on the quantity, but not on the quality, of the flowers shown. The attendance was large. The stage in the hall was concealed behind a splendid collection of potted ferns, placed there by President John F. Huss of the Hartford Horticultural Society.

The following were the principal prize winners connected with the trade: John H. Slocombe, New Haven; N. Nelson and John F. Huss, both of this city; Forbes & Keith, New Bedford, Mass.; Warren S. Mason, Farmington; Wm. F. Jost, East Haven; D. W. Babcock, Berlin, Md.

J. A. Weber, gardener for W. L. Goodwin, won first prize for the finest collection of vegetables, and John F. Huss was second.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The regular monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall on Wednesday evening, September 13. President Trepass occupied the chair and a good number were present.

The judges appointed for the exhibits were Messrs. Cliffe, Johnson and Marshall, and their decisions were as follows: Six ears of corn, first, F. Petroccia; twelve potatoes, first, H. Boettcher; one melon, first, S. J. Trepass; dish of peaches, honorable mention, E. Brown; Brussels sprouts, thanks of society, F. Petroccia.

There were two applications for membership.

Henry Gaut, in behalf of Mrs. H. L. Pratt, offered a silver cup as a special prize at the fall show. A. Walker, in behalf of R. C. Smith, offered $15 as a special prize for a vase of chrysanthemums, eight blooms, one variety, at the fall show. Mrs. Pratt and Mr. Smith were accorded a unanimous vote of thanks.

G. N. Hoff, of the Alphano Humus Co., gave an interesting talk on humus and the benefits to be derived from its use on all soils. He was accorded a hearty vote of thanks for his address and for his courtesy in answering the questions asked.

The exhibits for competition in October will be for three heads of celery, a vase of pink cosmos and three heads of cabbage. E. W.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

A general improvement in business was reported from all quarters this week, a few early weddings and social functions, with decorations for millinery and dress goods openings, being the accelerating influences. Funeral work has also kept well to the fore. There has been a larger variety of stock and all of a greatly improved quality, which also had its influence. Prices range normal and the supply and demand about balance. Chrysanthemums are beginning to show themselves and bring from $2.50 to $4 per dozen at retail. The first violets of the season came to hand last week and were at once spoken for, though a trifle soft as yet. The first cuttings of carnations are also at hand.

The Wholesale Market.

The large store at 43 Washington street, which has been leased for the Providence Wholesale Flower Market, has been fitted up with the necessary stalls, telephones, lighting facilities and other furnishings, and now awaits the date for the formal opening. Some of those interested in the establishment of the market held a meeting September 22, at which the committee appointed some weeks ago on ways and means was instructed to go ahead and have the association chartered under the laws of the state of Rhode Island, and this will be done at once. There are twelve stockholders in the scheme, but it is understood that several growers have announced their intention of applying for room. The stalls are to be disposed of at auction on Saturday afternoon, September 30, at 2 o'clock, at the store.

Various Notes.

James A. Budlong, of the J. A. Budlong & Son Co., of Auburn, has declined to allow the use of his name as a candidate on the republican ticket for the nomination for mayor of Cranston.

W. A. Fiske, president of the W. E. Barrett Co., has returned to this city with his family, after spending the summer at his seashore home at Prudence Island, in Narragansett Bay. Mr. and Mrs. George Williams, of this firm, have also returned from a sojourn at the same place.

Joseph Kopelman received the contract for all the plant decorations at Infantry for "The Orient in Providence," which continues from September 21 to October 7.

William J. Stewart and P. Welch, of Boston, were recent visitors in this city.

One new member was voted in at the regular monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island. A special meeting is to be held in a few days, for the purpose of considering an offer made by the Rhode Island Horticultural Society to devote $150 for premiums at the coming chrysanthemum show in November, as the Florists' Club might arrange.

Johnston Bros., on Dorrance street, had a conspicuous floral slipper at one of the department store openings last week. It was entirely of lily of the valley and orchids.

Timothy O'Connor has a handsome new covered delivery wagon.

M. Macnair had the decorations for the dedication ceremonies of the new Jewish synagogue on Broad street last week.

Frederick Deitz, of French street, has returned from a vacation trip to Boston and Albany, and thence down the Hudson to New York city.

John Macrae, of Smith street, has completed the benching of his stock and is now making necessary repairs about his range, preparatory to winter. His carnations are looking fine and he has begun cutting.

J. A. Budlong & Son Co. is cutting a few of the new yellow rose, Mrs. Alma Ward, at the houses in Auburn.

Ernest Smith, bookkeeper for W. S. Pino, has returned from a week's vacation.

At the annual exhibition of the American Institute, in the Berkeley Lyceum building at New York recently, one of the oddities was a collarette dahlia, raised by George L. Stillman, of Westerly. It is a new variety and has lavender colored petals, with lavender and white collar and an orange center.

Mr. Smith, representing T. W. Emerson Co., of Boston; C. H. Hudson, representing Hammond's Paint & Slug Shot Works, of Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y., and Mr. Crosby, of Danielson, Conn., were among the visitors in this city last week.

Carl Jurgens, of Newport; H. C. Neubrand, of this city, and Louis J. Reuter, of Westerly, were among the recent visitors in Boston.

Earl Barlow, with Z. D. Blackistone, of Washington, D. C., has returned to that city after a six weeks' stay in Newport.

James B. Canning has just brought out an attractive covered delivery wagon.

A. Leuthy, of Roslindale, Mass., was a recent visitor among the trade in this city.

One hundred and sixty-nine cases of Holland bulbs arrived at Newport one day last week for Carl Jurgens.

George L. Stillman, of Westerly, has been exceptionally fortunate with his exhibitions of dahlias this season. He has captured nearly all of the first awards of the American Institute in New York and the New England Dahlia Society in Boston. W. H. M.

Albany, N. Y.—H. G. Eyres is building two more greenhouses, each 20x100, at Morris and Knox streets.

Bridgeport, Conn.—John Reck & Son, at 985 Main street, recently had an especially tasteful and unique window display. It consisted of a thatched cottage against a woodland background, with mosses and ferns in the foreground outlining a pond on which floated tiny swans.

BOSTON.The Market.

Conditions are steadily improving. There is no boom, but flowers are selling better than for a long time and the growers are quite optimistic. Recent frosts and rain ruined many of the asters and these have now ceased to be a controlling factor in the market. A good many still arrive, but they are bringing much better prices all around. Roses are beginning to assert themselves and are temporarily more numerous and important than any other flowers. The prices on the smaller grades show a downward tendency, but better grades are selling quite well. Carnations, while short-stemmed, are much more abundant. The best are making $2.50 to $4 per hundred. Violets have made their appearance, quite a few Princess of Wales being seen, some of quite nice quality. Chrysanthemums as yet are limited to Golden Glow, with the exception of a few Smith's Advance.

Lilies are still in undersupply. There is a fair lot of speciosums obtainable. Some nice dahlias are seen, but many were destroyed by the early frosts. Tuberoses sell poorly and cosmos as yet is not in much demand. Some nice antirrhinums are coming in; these, however, only sell moderately. Gladioli are still seen and sell better than a month ago. Lily of the valley is abundant. Cattleya labiata is occasionally seen and will soon be abundant. Oncidium Rogersii is being used in window displays. There is a little better call for both asparagus and adiantum, Asparagus Sprengeri being in the lead, as usual.

Various Notes.

The Rosary Flower Store, which has hitherto been on Clarendon street, has moved to more central and commodious quarters at 512 Boylston street, opposite Copley Square. J. J. Casey, the who are sending these in this early include Edward Bingham, of Dedham; W. E. Turner and E. E. Cummings, of Woburn, and H. Waldecker, of Braintree. The last named gentleman also has splendid carnations.

F. H. Houghton, formerly located on Boylston street, will open a new and up-to-date flower store at 4 Park street October 1. Percy S. Snow will be first assistant. Mr. Houghton is noted as one of the leaders in design work in Boston.

Montrose Greenhouses are sending to the Boston Flower Exchange unusually good Killarney, White Killarney, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Richmond and Perle.

Bulbs for fall planting will be the leading subject at the next club meeting, October 17. They will be separately treated for forcing, bedding and naturalizing.

Thomas Pegler is receiving fine dahlias and the new crop of pansies from W. C. Ward, of Quincy, and charming pink antirrhinums from R. D. Kimball, of Waban.

The vegetable growers' convention and exhibition brought numerous out-of-town visitors to Boston. It was unfortunate that early frosts had spoiled many of the tender crops. The trade exhibits were quite numerous and the representatives of the various firms in this section reported good business.

R. C. Bridgham, of the Newton Rose Conservatories, is this season having good success with Mrs. Jardine and Prince de Bulgarie.

Welch Bros. have had an excellent September business up to date, considerably ahead of 1910.

Geo. McAlpine, one of the latest rose specialists to enter the field here, is sending in excellent Mrs. Ward, Lady Hillingdon and Killarney roses from his Exeter, N. H., establishment.

A big fruit show under the auspices of the Boston Chamber of Commerce will be held in Horticultural hall October 23 to 28. Several thousand dollars

Carl Everburg and Gustave Olsen, of Woburn, and L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, all of which are sold at the Boston Co-operative Market.

The W. W. Edgar Co. is having heavy sales on cyclamens and Lorraine begonias, which they have in fine shape. Begonia Glory of Cincinnati is being grown in quantity by them. Mrs. W. W. Edgar joined the Gardeners' and Florists' Club September 19.

Among the finest asters seen in Boston this season are those grown under glass by W. S. Phelps, of Marlboro, and handled at the Boston Co-operative Market by J. M. Cohen.

W. W. Tailby, of Wellesley, and Mann Bros., of Randolph, are leading shippers of Liliun speciosum at present.

William A. Riggs, of Auburndale, in addition to his regular supplies of Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus, has now good Golden Glow mums, to be followed by other varieties shortly. Mr. Riggs was for years one of the leading mum growers for the Boston shows while a private gardener.

Mrs. J. F. Flood will continue the florists' business at Woburn, with William Martin in charge. Asparagus, adiantum and bedding plants will be made specialties.

H. W. Field, of Northampton, through Thomas Pegler, is disposing of fine daily cuts of Mrs. Aaron Ward, Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond roses. W. N. Craig.

A CITY IN ITSELF.

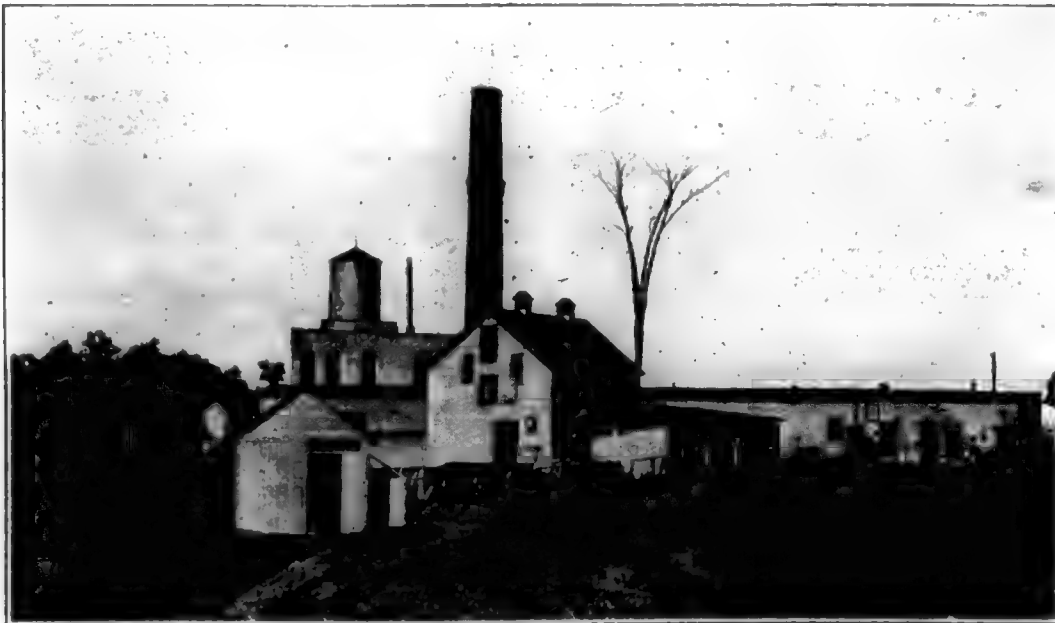

Those who have not visited the Edgebrook greenhouses and nursery of the Geo. Wittbold Co. have no idea of the different industrial pursuits carried on there. Eighty acres are devoted to the growth of everything in the nursery line; 75,000 square feet of glass to everything in the plant line, while all kinds of bulb stock are forced, and carnations, chrysanthemums and poinsettias are grown in enormous quantities.

Being out of reach of accommodations, the company is obliged to own and operate a grocery, restaurant and blacksmith shop. The grocery supplies the families living on the place, while the restaurant furnishes meals at all hours and also has from sixteen to twenty regular boarders, all of whom work for Wittbold. Rooms with modern conveniences, a great improvement over the old ones, are under construction for the sleeping apartments of those who board there.

The blacksmith shop is kept busy shoeing twelve to fourteen horses, building and repairing wagons and other implements, and also with the construction and repairing of the miniature railway system which forms a network throughout the greenhouses and hotbed sections.

The company does all the work in the construction of its cement sheds, hotbeds, sidewalks, etc., also manufactures all the cement boards and posts for its cement benches and the tile used in tiling the nursery, of which 20,000 feet of 6-inch, 2,000 feet of 12-inch, and 17,000 feet of 24-inch have been used to date, in addition to thirty-two cement basins.

An average of forty men have been employed throughout the last year, an increase of five over the year of 1910. Six families live on the place, including those of Otto Wittbold, superintendent, and C. G. Anderson, assistant superintendent.

Industrial Buildings at Edgebrook Establishment of Geo. Wittbold Co.

proprietor, always contrives to have an attractive window display, and his business continues to grow.

Herbert Clark, of Southampton, L. I., formerly of Manchester, Mass., will return October 1 to take charge of the estate of W. D. Denegre, Manchester, Mass.

William Sim is marketing single violets in quantity of good quality. Others are offered in prizes. This is part of a big movement to boom New England fruits and encourage their extended culture.

A. A. Reed, of Whitman, is getting some nice Cattleya Dowiana flowers and has a fine lot of labiata just coming in.

Among prominent shippers of Chrysanthemum Golden Glow this week are

CHRISTIAN BINNING.

The president-elect of the Springfield Florists' Club was born January 24, 1870, at Schefflenz, near Heidelberg, grand duchy of Baden, Germany, and attended the public schools of the fatherland until the time of his departure for America. Upon landing on this side of the water he went to Painesville, O., where he entered the employ of the Storrs & Harrison Co., July 4, 1883, working in the budding field of the nursery department. Robert George was quick to recognize the ability and faithfulness of the subject of this sketch and placed him in charge of the greenhouses, in which a line of miscellaneous plants were grown, where he continued until January 1, 1888.

Locating at Springfield, O., he took charge of the growing in the Innisfallen Greenhouses, then owned and operated by Chas. A. Reeser. June 18, 1893, these houses passed into the hands of the Geo. H. Mellen Co., a corporation composed of business men inexperienced in the line, with the exception of Mr. Binning, who became superintendent. Being the practical man of the company, much of the detail and initiative of the business, including a large share of the preparation of copy for the fall and spring catalogues, has devolved on Mr. Binning, who is a tireless and methodical worker, residing in a comfortable residence on the greenhouse premises and being in constant touch with the houses by night as well as day by means of a temperature alarm in his bedroom. The president of the company is George H. Mellen, who manages the office and financial matters and assists in preparation of the catalogue, but he generously concedes to Mr. Binning much credit for the success of the company.

In the new president the club will have a presiding officer both dignified and courteous and much progress during the coming year is naturally expected.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

The fall openings in dry goods, millinery and shoe stores helped business considerably last week, and these, with the numerous funerals and weddings, kept things humming for a short time. We have had exceptionally good weather for September and good weather generally makes business good. The Jewish New Year, which came at the end of the week, added its share of business for the florists who cater to Jewish trade. The "blessing of the graves" is observed here by the Catholics and all kinds of flowers were sold for decorating graves for this particular day. The last Sunday in September is always observed here in that way.

Roses have reached their finest condition for quality and are excellent in every respect. Killarney, Radiance, Maryland, Ward and Richmond are all fine and are selling well. Beauties are much improved and the demand for them is increasing. White Killarney is a great favorite and a good seller for all occasions. Gladioli are still good and are selling well. A few choice asters still remain, in pink, white and lavender. Carnations continue good; there are some excellent Enchantress and white, but there are scarcely any red ones at present. Valley is meeting with an unusual demand; a great deal is used for corsages, with Ward and Killarney roses. Violets have come again, to remain for the winter. They have firm stems and a good color, but the flowers themselves are small and poor in quality. There is already a good demand for them. There are but few dahlias on the market, but the few are good in quality. Helianthus is in great demand. There is a good supply of greens of all kinds. Speciosum lilies are plentiful and of good quality. Pink and white anemones have put in their appearance, and also some good cosmos.

Various Notes.

T. Ogston, formerly with J. B. Keller Sons, has left the florists' business and has a position with the American Express Co.

Mrs. Julius Roehrs, of Rutherford, N. J., is the guest of Mrs. William Keller. Miss Margaret Howe was on the sick list last week.

Ellwanger & Barry have a fine exhibit at the Industrial Exposition.

E. C. Campbell reports that business has been extra good for a week or so. He did a great deal of work for the Hilficker funeral, at Pittsford, N. Y. The same firm did the decorating for the opening of Sibley, Lindsay & Curr last week.

A. Zirkman, of M. Rice & Co., was in Rochester recently, just back from his California trip. He says his trip to Catalina Island, Cal., where he visited the submarine gardens, was wonderfully interesting.

George Boucher's business is improving now, he says. He has some good Jerusalem cherries in large sizes on sale.

J. B. Keller Sons find trade unusually good for early autumn. They are selling great quantities of Boston ferns.

John Vollmer is having a few days' vacation, to make up for a curtailed vacation last summer.

The Rochester Floral Co. finds that business is increasing steadily and there has been a good volume of sales throughout September.

Otis Bassage took a trip to Syracuse a short time ago.

Miss Margaret E. Brown, daughter of Charles J. Brown, of the Brown Bros. Co., and George J. Kaelber, of this city, were married September 21. Nearly all the flowers and vines used for the wedding decorations were grown on Mr. Brown's estate, Brown-croft, in Brighton, N. Y.

Salter Bros. report business just fair, with a great deal of funeral work last week.

Fred Bennett had a fine lot of lavender and white asters for the day of "blessing of the graves."

H. E. Wilson reports that business is fairly good, but that no special jobs are booked at present.

Charles Briggs is away for a two weeks' vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Armbrust spent a few days in Buffalo, attending a wedding there.

William Keller conducted an automobile party to Canandaigua September 22, to inspect the gardens and greenhouses of Mrs. Thompson, which are famous throughout western New York.

Keller Bros. had an unusually large share of the trade for the Jewish New Year.

At a final meeting of the exhibition committee of the annual flower show, held September 22 at President George B. Hart's office, it was decided to abandon the flower show for this year, because the time was too short to make adequate preparation. President Hart said that the decision did not necessarily mean that there would be no more flower shows in Rochester, as there are good prospects that the plan will revive when conditions become more favorable. E. C. A.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade is improving right along, with stock more plentiful and getting better as time goes on. There has been considerable funeral work lately and it has kept stock worked up closely at all times; on several occasions it was difficult to get enough stock to go the rounds. There are few flowers in this market at present except carnations and roses. The roses are improving, both in quality and supply. Killarney and White Killarney are fine and some good Maids and Brides are coming in. A few good Richmonds are to be had and the demand has been about equal to the supply. The demand for Beauties was good last week, as there were a great many fall openings and these created a good demand for cut stock, as well as taking everything in the line of decorative plants. Potted ferns are moving well, but the supply is limited in this market. A number of weddings have been booked for the coming month or so, and business will soon assume about the right gait to keep everyone on the move.

Various Notes.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. is installing a new boiler at the Fifth avenue plant. They are cutting large quantities of carnations.

E. Metzmaier has a fair amount of work right along and expects a heavy trade in the near future.

The Columbus Floral Co. has finished planting two of its new houses to carnations and is just planting the last half of the third one to lettuce; the other half contains tomatoes, which are in fine condition. The firm is also installing a new boiler, which makes a battery of three boilers. Everything here is in fine condition and the prospects are good for some excellent carnations. J. M.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

The Market.

The season of 1911-12 is now open and, with the return of the people from the shore and mountains, it is expected that business will pick up rapidly. Trade during the summer kept up fairly well and business increases as fall advances. The florists are looking forward to a busy and prosperous season.

The first frost of the season occurred September 13 and much damage was done throughout Connecticut. There has been a great deal of rain, which did much good to vegetation and outdoor stock. Asters continue to be the leading flower. Carnations are making an early appearance, but as yet the stems are rather short.

There have been many weddings this month. Bridal bouquets seem to be in great demand. There seems to be a scarcity in different lines of stock. Funeral work still keeps the florists busy. Palms and ferns sell well. Roses are plentiful, but are not first-class as yet. The recent rains did a great deal toward improvement of the dahlias. There seems to be a great demand for flowering plants this fall.

Various Notes.

J. H. Smith, at South Norwalk, reports a highly satisfactory season. He is building new houses at his plant.

The Horticultural Society held its fair at Orange, September 5 to 8.

The dahlia growers of Connecticut have had poor luck this year, due to the long, dry, hot season.

Charles Munro had a sale of fine ferns last week.

James Bruce, on Orchard street, has some fine houses of carnations.

The dahlia show of the New Haven County Horticultural Society was held in this city September 13. B.

THE NEW NIESSEN BUILDING.

The Leo Niessen Co., Philadelphia, has moved into its new quarters at the northwest corner of Twelfth and Race streets. The accompanying illustration gives an excellent view of the building, 60x100 feet, with nine stories and a basement, built of reinforced concrete. The first floor and basement will be occupied by the company for the wholesale cut flower business. The sixth, seventh and eighth floors are already occupied by other business enterprises, while the second, third and fourth floors are not yet under lease.

Leo Niessen says that in the new quarters the company has three times its former facilities. There is additional counter space, badly needed to properly handle shipping orders, or, as Mr. Niessen graphically described it, as "no Stephen Girard business," by which he was understood to mean the rehandling of orders. There is additional space in the cooling room, enabling the company to handle more flowers. Best of all, there is more light. Mr. Niessen lays great stress on this advantage. The basement, with its 12-foot ceiling, is lighter than his first floor was on Arch street. The first floor is even better, a corner building with large windows and high ceilings giving perfect light. Phil.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market is menaced, at the opening of the present week, by a combination of excessive heat and humidity. The warm Indian summer of the last week was bad enough, for rose stock especially, much of which came in open, soft and unsalable. Now we have a hot wave to contend against. Business is far from satisfactory. Little lift is expected until the frost does its deadly work on the outside flowers. There still are asters and gladioli to be reckoned with, and plenty of them are arriving daily. The dahlia tide is at its zenith, and a great deal of handsome stock is arriving. Prices of these do not advance, however, and if the hot temperature remains, the market will be flooded with them before the week is over. The top figure for orchids September 23 was 35 cents, and the shipments are growing larger. Many sold as low as 20 cents and the street men were offering them on Fifth avenue. The only flower that seemed at all normal was the lily. A few sold as high as 8 cents, though the week's end saw 6 cents as top. Valley holds firm at the usual quotations.

Strange to say, large quantities of violets come down daily. Many are claiming a growing foundation of over fifty violet experts. As there are about fifty wholesalers here, you may gather some idea of the prospective supply this winter. These early shipments of poor stock in hot weather seem about the weakest display of business enterprise imaginable. Far better to wait and send perfect stock and receive a reasonable price for them.

Carnations are not yet perfect enough to command over $2 per hundred and most of the stock is still short-stemmed and sells at the buyer's offer. The quality of American Beauties is now attracting the buyers and the demand for these is insistent. Other roses are also fast improving and the best sell readily at $4 to $5 per hundred. The short-stemmed roses go at any price and many do not go at all.

Various Notes.

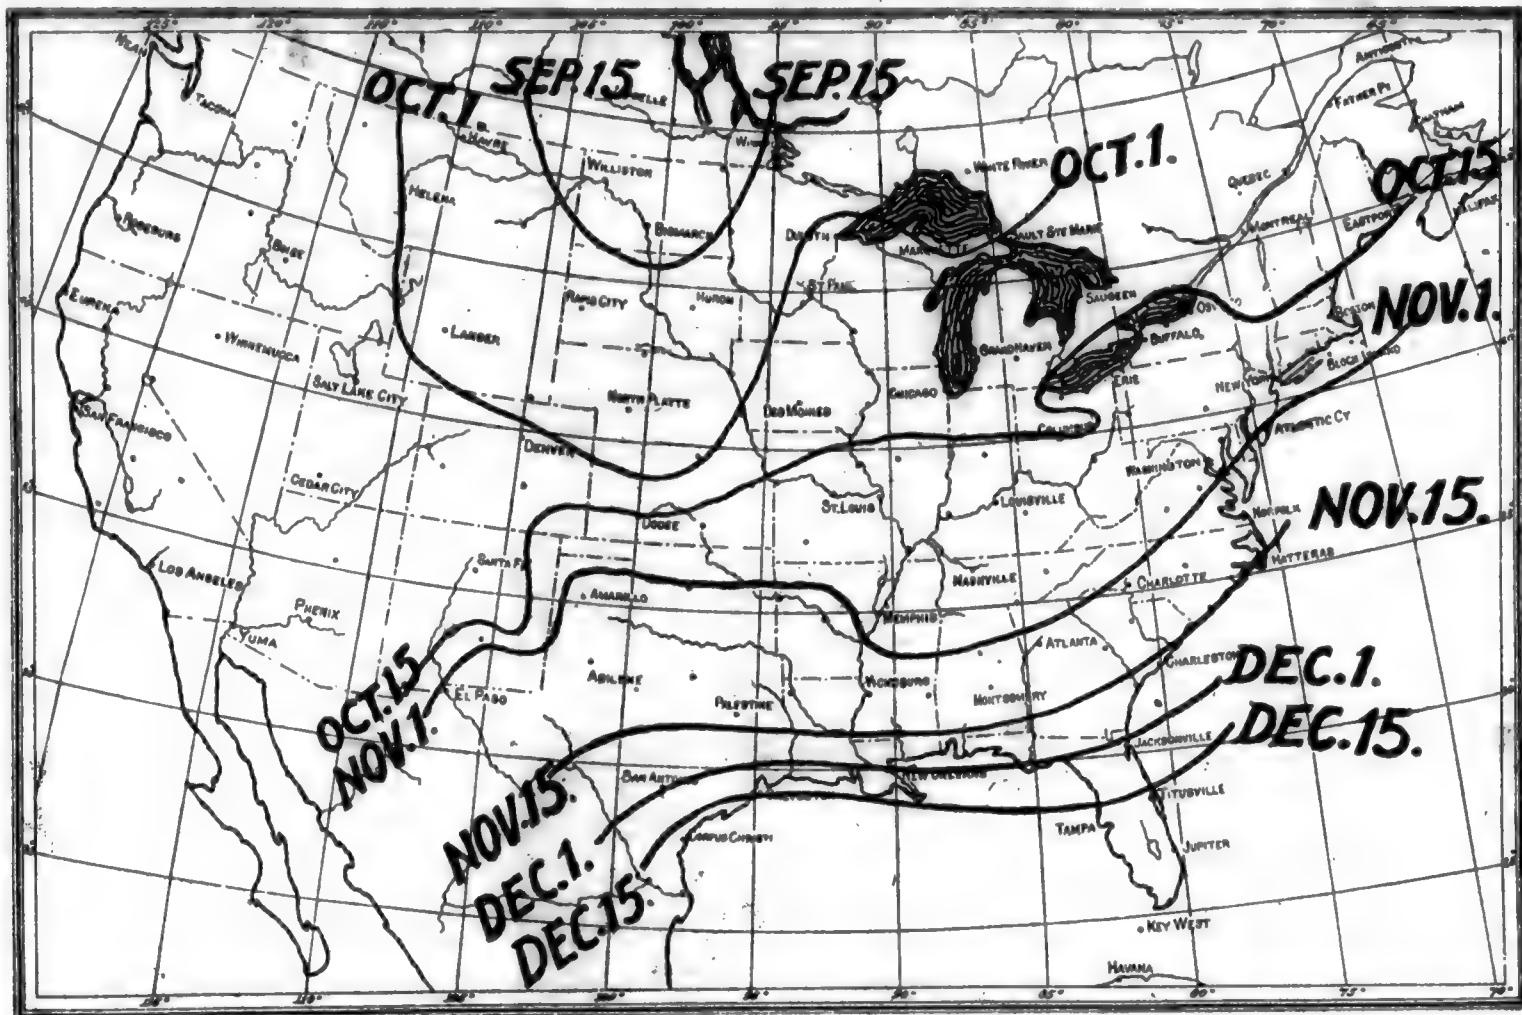

Great sympathy is expressed for the family of I. L. Powell, of Millbrook, N. Y., by the members of the New York Florists' Club, of which Mr. Powell had long been an honored member. His sudden death, from pleuro-pneumonia, took place September 22 and several of his New York friends attended the funeral Sunday.

Sympathy is also extended another member of the local Florists' Club, in the accidental death of a brother of Frank Piorowski, of White Plains, N. Y.

W. C. Hart, of the Sycamore Dahlia Farms, East Walden, N. Y., was a visitor last week and attended the American Institute dahlia show.

G. H. Chisholm, representing Sutton &

AVERAGE DATE OF FIRST KILLING FROST IN AUTUMN.

Sons, Reading, England, was in the city last week.

Mr. Krawel and Mr. Speelman, Jr., of Speelman & Sons, Sassenheim, Holland, are among the foreign arrivals, the advance guard of a multitude of salesmen.

J. W. Davis, of Davenport, Ia., visited New York and left an order with Lord & Burnham Co. for three houses 43 x 600, the whole to be devoted to cucumber growing. The same company has secured the order for the greenhouse in the Buffalo park. M. C. Wright will change from the New York to the Philadelphia office. Dennis Connor, the Philadelphia agent for Lord & Burnham Co., was in New York September 23.

The Mt. Kisco Horticultural Society will hold its fall show Friday and Saturday of this week. Great crowds will attend the Mineola exhibition all the week, the nearness of the aviation meet drawing an enormous attendance and so "killing two birds," etc. The flying men and women are almost as great an attraction as the flowers and pumpkins at this wonderful county fair, which every florist on Long Island religiously attends.

Several New Yorkers have signified their intention of attending the annual dahlia and flower show of the Maryland Horticultural Society on Tuesday and following days at the establishment of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Plains, Md.

Two novelties that attracted much attention at the dahlia show in New York were Lovett's Catawba-Concord grape and his ever-bearing red raspberry.

The Revere Rubber Co. has added to its enterprises the manufacture of rubber heels and E. W. Holt, the New York representative, is offering a pair to every bowler who makes a 200 score from now until the club wins the championship in 1912 at Chicago.

Percy B. Rigby, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., says the company is now offering daily roses of these varieties, among others: Melody, Taft, Cardinal, Mrs. Ward, Radiance, Baltimore, Dark Pink and Double Pink Killarney.

Harry Lewy, 784 Sixth avenue, has doubled the size of his store and is doing a fine dinner and theater trade, with Mrs. Lewy at the desk as his assistant and bookkeeper.

Craig Muir, formerly with C. A. Dards, has opened a neat store on Forty-second street, between Fifth and Sixth avenues. He is a popular young man, an artist and inventor of a violet shield that is a useful addition to florists' requisites.

Taking Greeley's Advice.

The auctions are beginning to draw and every Tuesday and Friday until snow flies the persuasive voices of the men behind the batons will be heard.

Badgley, Riedel & Meyer have been celebrating for a week the passing of their first milestone, and all look cheerful and prosperous.

Gunther Bros. were much pleased with the success of their dahlia growers, Herbert & Sons, at the American Institute exhibition. They handle all the stock of this house that reaches the New York market.

R. T. Brown, of the Cottage Gardens Co., is back from his annual European visit.

The seedsmen all are busy. The bulb business this fall is immense and not a few houses find night work a necessity.

W. E. Marshall is making a western trip, extending beyond Chicago. The firm has greatly improved its store front.

Charles Millang has been enjoying a week with his family in the mountains.

Mr. Kervan, Sr., has returned from a happy outing with his G. A. R. post at Providence, R. I.

B. S. Slinn, Jr., has moved his office and icebox close to the entrance of the second floor of the Coogan building.

Kessler Bros. have filled their store and conservatory with flowering plants, ferns and palms.

Bowling begins in earnest October 6. There will be practice every Friday evening at Thum's alleys, and the officers of a permanent organization will be appointed on the date mentioned. The preliminary bowling September 22 produced the following scores:

OBITUARY.

Caldwell the Woodsman.

George W. Caldwell, to whom the trade owes the introduction of that now almost indispensable decorative green, the southern wild smilax, died at his Alabama home early this month after a long illness with tuberculosis.

It was fifteen years or more ago that Mr. Caldwell located at Evergreen, a then unheard of town, which he has since made known to practically every florist in the land. Though he was without money and without friends, Mr. Caldwell was possessed of the spirit of the pioneer and, going into the woods, gathered there the articles that the northern decorators were waiting to welcome. Although he gathered and shipped all the southern decorative evergreens, working up a large business under the title "Caldwell the Woodsman," it is with the wild smilax that his name is most closely associated. He was the discoverer of its commercial possibilities. Shipments which he began in an experimental way have now become carloads and run into hundreds of thousands of cases a year. At first Mr. Caldwell went into the woods and gathered his greens, hauling them to the railroad and shipping just what he gathered, but later he established his shipping stations and bought there the stock brought in by the natives. In the course of time there came to be many other shippers through the section and the industry was on a solid footing.

About six years ago that insidious and most fatal disease, tuberculosis, fastened itself on the vitals of the pioneer, and he was forced to retire. His old business is now conducted by E. A. Beaven.

Sebastian Fischer.

At Evanston, Ill., Sebastian Fischer died September 21, after only a brief illness. The funeral was held Saturday, September 23, and was largely attended, for Mr. Fischer was a member of the Chicago Florists' Club and one of the popular young men of the Chicago suburb. He was born in Luxemburg and had just passed his twenty-seventh birthday anniversary. The father, Fred C. Fischer, was one of the old school of gardeners. He brought his sons to America in their early days, but gave them a thorough training in his profession and, when they had arrived at suitable age, took them into the business he had established at Evanston, a few years ago turning it over to them. The firm then became Fischer Bros. Sebastian was the junior. John, his elder brother, will continue the business.

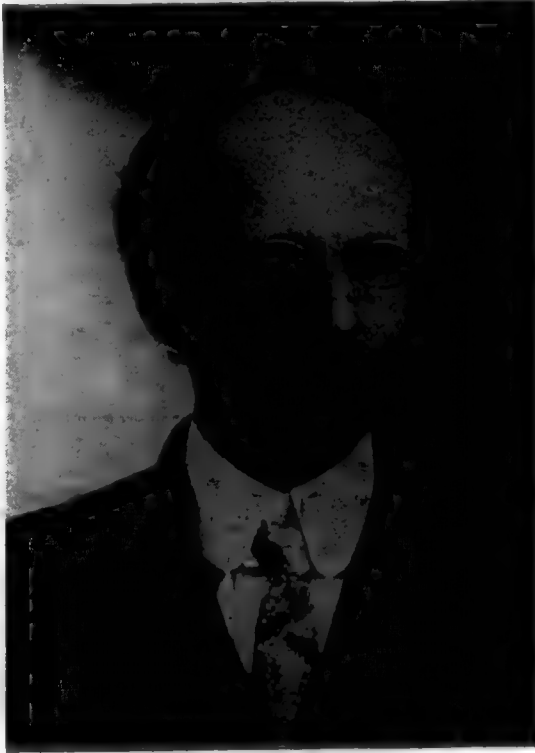

Nicholas P. Reddy.

Nicholas P. Reddy, of Fall River, Mass., died at his residence, 32 Laurel street, on Sunday morning, September 17, after a brief illness. He was born in Dublin, Ireland, and learned the florists' business at his home while still a young man. Coming to America, he arrived at Fall River about forty years ago and was in the employ of the late Dr. Durfee for some time before starting in business on his own account. Because of ill health, he turned his business over to his two sons about two years ago. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mary E. Reddy, nee Keough, and by two sons and three daughters. The sons are Edward J. and John F. Reddy, and the daughters are Mrs. M. J. Logan, Miss Mary L. Reddy and Miss Jennie Reddy.

day, September 24, and was largely attended, out of respect for the deceased and sympathy for his widow.

Mr. Powell was in the prime of life. He had been for some years head gardener on the estate of Samuel Thorne, at Millbrook, N. Y. He was an expert on many subjects, but especially on the chrysanthemum, and only a few weeks ago Doubleday, Page & Co. issued a volume in its gardening library, "Chrysanthemums and How to Grow Them," from his pen. Mr. Powell was a regular exhibitor at the eastern shows. He was an active member in the New York Florists' Club, a regular attendant at S. A. F. conventions, with Mrs. Powell, a member of the American Chrysanthemum Society and other trade organizations.

MERIDEN, CONN.

The Market.

Business has been dull for the last two months, but is now increasing, and it is expected that a month hence trade will surely be good. The weather here during the last week has been ideal, and we hope to have this Indian summer two or three weeks longer. September has witnessed many large weddings. Three or four funerals last week helped to keep the florists busy.

White flowers seem to be plentiful. Asters are still in the market, though most aster crops were badly damaged in this vicinity by the heavy rains. Asters are taken in preference to roses and other stock. Most dahlias were killed by the recent frost. Carnations are more abundant, but the stems are still short. Sweet peas are a thing of the past. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are plentiful. Lilies are fine. There have been good sales of ferns and it is expected there will be a heavy demand for them after the outdoor stock is taken in.

Various Notes.

The beauty of Hubbard park has attracted many visitors. Great praise is given the keeper of this beautiful park. The Blatchley Co. had a fine window display of choice Boston ferns last week.

Joseph Greenbacker is still doing business at the old Colony road greenhouses, near Yalesville.

John Bonell has been busy during the last few weeks getting his houses remodeled. He is now getting his young stock in for winter. B.

NEW ORLEANS.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting September 21, at Kolb's German tavern. President Claude Ory and Secretary C. R. Panter were in their places, and there was a good attendance.

The society had received an invitation from the local Progressive Union to take part in the reception to the steamboat Quincy, plying between St. Louis and this port. A committee of ten, headed by President Ory, attended. No doubt the florists will get their share of the increased trade created by an enlarged river traffic. A vote of thanks was extended to Captain Streckfus of the Quincy for the enjoyable time all had.

The committee on securing a meeting room in the new building of the Progressive Union reported success and will bring in a definite answer at the next meeting.

Harry Papworth, the state vice-president of the S. A. F., spoke of his attendance at the Baltimore convention and gave great praise to the trade exhibits. He spoke interestingly of his visits to the large nurseries in the east.

B. M. Wichers spoke entertainingly of his business trip through Kentucky, Ohio and Illinois, stating that it is of great benefit to see one's various customers personally.

Herman Doescher said he was delighted with his trip through Texas, both from a business and pleasurable standpoint.

P. A. Chopin, the energetic standby of the society, aroused great interest by his proposal to hold a flower show during the next spring. The suggestion was well received on all sides and several members voiced their sentiments. C. R. Panter's proposition to hold a flower show in conjunction with exhibits of the agriculturists and kindred bodies of the city and state, on an elaborate scale, making it a financial as well as an artistic success, was hailed as the best plan. He was instructed to send a special notice to all the members to be present at the next meeting, October 19, for the final discussion of this important proposition and the appointment of the various committees. R. E.

Babylon, N. Y.—Geo. W. Keyser reports an excellent season. Owing to the drought, the salvia, which flourishes particularly in this locality, has bloomed even more freely than usual, with the prospects of an abundant seed crop.

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Rockland, Me.—W. A. Ripley is successor to Walter O. Frost, at 253 Camden street.

Madison, Wis.—The Capital City Greenhouse Co. has increased its capital stock from $15,000 to $50,000.

Albia, Ia.—The Richey Floral Co. is building an addition which will about double the space under glass.

New Bedford, Mass.—Edward G. Davis has built an addition to his greenhouses, at 191 Shawmut avenue.

Salt Lake City, Utah.—C. S. Martin, of 747 East Fifth South street, is building a greenhouse, at a cost of about $1,500.

Sedalia, Mo.—C. A. Claison, foreman at the greenhouses of the Archias Floral Co., has been appointed superintendent of floriculture at the Missouri state fair, to be held September 30 to October 6.

Groton, Mass.—A double wedding recently occurred in the family of H. Huebner. His eldest son, Herman A. Huebner, and his eldest daughter, Miss Minnie Huebner, both ventured into matrimony on the same day.

Allentown, Pa.—John P. Medernach, of 548 Ridge avenue, the florist in the employ of the Lehigh Valley railroad, was recently disabled for a time by a deep cut in his right foot, caused by its coming in contact with a piece of glass.

Johnstown, Pa.—Traugott Malbranc, the Market street florist, is now proprietor, also, of the flower store in the Capital hotel. Including the show house, the hotel flower store has a total frontage of ninety feet on Main street, and the opportunities for display of the stock are excellent.

Champaign, Ill.—It is reported that officials of the Illinois Central railroad are contemplating the removal of the railroad greenhouses from this city to Flossmoor, Ill., in order to get them away from the roundhouse gas and smoke that molest them here. The greenhouses and grounds are at present under the care of H. A. Bode and three helpers.

Utica, N. Y.—J. C. Bigelow & Son have just added to their greenhouse plant at 1010 Sunset avenue another house, 28x100, for growing carnations to supply their store trade, in the center of the business section of the city. They have also erected a propagating house, 15x45. The entire range is heated by a 150 horse-power tubular steam boiler. In cold weather they carry thirty pounds of steam, reduced to two and one-half pounds, thus doing away with the need of a night fireman.

Amboy, Ill.—C. M. Weaver has opened a flower store in the Hegert building. Besides a full line of florists' stock, he will also handle trees and shrubbery.

Hampton, Ia.—The Curtis Floral Co. has engaged Miss Nina G. Wheeler as manager of the firm's branch store, the Flower Shop, at Fifth and Washington streets, Mason City, Ia.

Franklin, Mass.—M. J. Van Leeuwen, proprietor of the Continental Nurseries, has presented to the officials of the town of Wrentham an excellent plan for the improvement of the common.

Pekin, Ill.—George A. Kuhl and wife have returned from Harbor Springs, Mich., and Waukesha, Wis., where they summered, and Mr. Kuhl is taking hold of business with health fully restored.

Racine, Wis.—Clark E. Adams, on Washington avenue, is erecting iron-frame greenhouses, with foundations of cement blocks, on the site of the houses that were recently destroyed by fire.

Moscow, Idaho.—J. L. Bourne, formerly in the greenhouse business here, has gone to Oregon and Washington, in company with his son, Vernon, with a view to selecting a new location to start in the business again.

Clinton, Mass.—H. Leroy Sawyer, who for the last six years has been in Jacksonville, Fla., will return to this city this fall and be associated with his father, Frank P. Sawyer, in the florists' business.

Aldan, Pa.—Clarence Alwine, who formerly was employed by Mrs. Sarah I. Smith at Secane, is starting in business here. He is putting up three houses, each 25 x 100, and will grow carnations, snapdragons and sweet peas.

Gasport, N. Y.—Carnations planted in the greenhouses of White Bros. are growing nicely and the chrysanthemums also are in good shape. Asters have been giving good crop, notwithstanding the dry weather. The new plant at Medina, N. Y., four houses 26 x 250, is nearly completed and the 32,000 carnation plants are being benched. White Enchantress and Pink Delight are the two varieties grown in largest quantity.

Belleville, O.—Walter Clever, a young florist who resides near this town, has distinguished himself by his manly and adroit defense of himself and a lady companion from the attacks of a ruffian who has been identified as an ex-convict. Mr. Clever was unarmed, while his assailant carried a revolver. At first Mr. Clever pretended to be submissive, but when an opportune moment arrived he caught the fellow by the throat and choked him. When a policeman appeared on the scene, the desperado was found to be dead.

Orange, N. J.—Frank Thomas, gardener to E. C. Graves, is justly proud of the choice collection of cypripediums under his charge. He has some hybrids of rare value.

Wayland, O.—The gladioli grown by Mrs. A. H. Austin have attracted so much attention that a local newspaper recently devoted half a column to Mrs. Austin's methods and success.

Franklin, Mass.—The contract for the new greenhouses to be erected here by Harry T. Hayward has been awarded to the Lord & Burnham Co. and work on the foundation has been started.

Findlay, O.—Miss L. E. Miller's flower store, at 610 South Main street, was broken into by marauders September 4, but little of value was taken. This store has suffered a similar experience several times within the last few months.

Newcastle, Ind.—Myer Heller has succeeded in inducing the Indiana Florists' Association to hold its next meeting in this city, instead of Indianapolis, which has been the society's usual meeting place in the past. The date will be October 3. Mr. Heller and others are busy making the necessary preparations for a first-class meeting.

Greencastle, Ind.—Mr. and Mrs. George D. Reid, of Elmhurst, Ill., have taken charge of the Troxell & Shake greenhouses, and later will probably purchase the establishment. They will live in the residence now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Shake, near the greenhouses. Troxel & Shake have conducted the greenhouses for several years. Dr. G. W. Bence is the owner.

Norfolk, Va.—Frank Brunton, manager of the Fox-Hall Farm, is making extensive preparations to meet the demand for vegetable plants. He is now building another iron-frame, Lord & Burnham greenhouse, 25x300, and putting up a number of sash and slat houses for plant growing. Cabbage and lettuce plants are grown here by the acre for the trade, as well as for the firm's own extensive truck farm.

Denver, Colo.—T. H. U. Smith, at 2961 Lawrence street, shows his progressiveness by the use of letter-heads which bear an attractive picture of his range, and by the use of two handsome delivery wagons, artistically painted and lettered. One of his greenhouses, a tall house of Foley construction, was erected in September of last year and was stocked with roses, carnations and other plants. A large part of one house is occupied by begonias in eleven varieties. He also grows palms, ferns and novelty plants.

The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.THERE is only one reason for giving trade prices to a retail buyer: the fear that otherwise the order will be lost.
Some men are not strong enough to turn away, on principle, any order that promises a profit.THE population of the United States increased twenty-one per cent in the ten years between censuses. If the flower business had increased only in proportion, few of us would be where we are today.
Florists have increased their sales much faster than the population has increased.WITH a high-priced automobile for delivery purposes, the principal items of operating cost are upkeep and deprecia-there's neither efficiency nor advertising value in that. Keep the auto bright and clean.FOR a new yellow rose to be grown under glass, Frances Roche, of Newport, offers a prize of $50, to be competed for at any exhibition the American Rose Society selects after June, 1912. It is stipulated that the rose is to resemble as nearly as possible the color of Mare-chal Niel, but to be a strong, upright grower.THE double-page spread in the center of The Review is like the lower berths in the center of a Pullman—so comfortable, accessible and popular that those who want what they want make reserva-spreads have appeared in the last seven issues, but only one each week can get the center position.IF the National Sweet Pea Society makes as good a show as possible in connection with the exhibitions of the Rose and Carnation Societies at Detroit in January it will give the flower another big boost. It should not be forgotten that the time to draw attention to a flower is when the season's supply is waxing, not waning.

ARE YOU MISSING BUSINESS?

There still are florists who are missing profits because they do not realize the possibilities offered them by The Review's Classified Ads. Why be content with the limited local demand when these inexpensive little ads open the whole country to you? Why let surpluses go to waste when they can be turned quickly into cash? Here is how:Please discontinue my advertisement that has been running in the Classified Department of The Review. I have found it most profitable, as three insertions have cleaned up my entire stock.—

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

There is continued improvement in the market situation, but the increase in business has not been rapid. The asters have gone, and the big hole their departure made in the receipts has been filled by increased arrivals of other flowers. Carnations in particular have come in heavily and it has been largely for this reason that the increase in demand has had so little effect in stiffen-ing prices. Chrysanthemums also have come in more plentifully and this has had the usual result of a diminishing demand for long Beauties. On the whole, each day's sales for the last week have shown some increase, but the volume of business in money total is not yet up to what it was at this date last year.It is interesting to note that some of the Beauty growers are cutting a large proportion of long stems and report most of the demand to be for medium and short lengths, while other growers who are cutting mostly mediums say the orders call for the special lengths. None of the Beauty specialists appears to be thoroughly satisfied with the condition, but apparently, if one considers the market as a whole, supply and demand are fairly well balanced. With some of the growers the cuts of roses have increased considerably, and it is noticeable that the demand calls for neither short stock in quantity nor the special grades to the extent of holding the prices where they should be in comparison to the market value of the medium lengths. Both short roses and special fancy roses are selling at moderate prices. Killarney shows some effect of dark weather in the color of the flower, but generally speaking the quality of the rose stock leaves little to be desired. The rose list is unusually long this year. In

Medium-stemmed BEAUTIES

Here's Where You Can Get All You Need

We have a very large cut of Beauties that will meet with the approval of the most critical buyers—nothing whatever the matter with them. Large heads, splendid color, strong stems, perfect foliage. Plenty of special long stems, but most of the cut is the medium length that all stores use in greatest quantity. Those who are looking for a thoroughly satisfactory supply of Beauties should get acquainted here.

CARNATIONS

Try these—you will like them.

The new crop of Carnations is coming in strong, just as the Asters go out—it is earlier and finer than the first crop ever has been before. These are as good flowers as one could ask at this date and the stems are good, long enough for any purpose you are likely to want them for. Order some today and see for yourself.

KILLARNEYS

Pink and White—the finest.

Our Killarneys and White Killarneys carry fine heads on all lengths—good flowers on the short stems and the very finest of flowers on the "special" lengths. We always have a large supply. None better anywhere, and few so good. Send an order and we will prove it to you.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Send along your orders—we've got the stock: Golden Glow and October Frost, excellent quality and a steady supply, as usual. We are headquarters for the finest early Mums the market affords.

FANCY CATTLEYAS

We have a large and steady supply of the finest Labiatus that have been offered this season. Always on hand; wire and we ship on next train.

Lilies

We can supply all the Easter Lilies you can use. Try us any day in the year.

Valley

One of our specialties. None finer. The largest supply. Always on hand.

HEADQUARTERS FOR ALL GREENS

MUMS

Smith's Advance

The Earliest White

Golden Glow

The Earliest Yellow

Our early Mums are exceptionally good, especially the Smith's Advance, white. These are from a good grower, who has made a specialty of early Mums and whose success with Golden Glow has been widely noted. Smith's Advance is a revelation in early white mums. Now cutting heavily in both colors.

Can furnish stock plants of the Smith's Advance to growers, immediate or later delivery, at 40c each; $4.50 per doz.; $35.00 per 100.

DOUBLE VIOLETS NOW IN DAILY SUPPLY.

CARNATIONS

The cut has become large and flowers are fine. Stems good and lengthening rapidly. We surely have a splendid supply this season.

VALLEY

Call on us at any time; we always have it.

ORCHIDS

We can supply the finest Cattleyas in quantity, and fine sprays of Oncidiums, yellow. Write, phone or wire, we do the rest.

LILIES

You need Easter Lilies all the year around—and we are in position to supply the finest stock in any quantity at any time.

KILLARNEYS

You can find no better Killarney or White Killarney than those we ship.

BEAUTIES

Now cutting a good crop, all lengths but principally the medium stems that are in strongest demand.

WILD SMILAX in stock, can ship on receipt of wire, fine stock, $5.00 case.

addition to Killarney and White Killarney, which, with Richmond, are the staples, Maryland is available in quantity and there are growers who are specializing on Mrs. Jardine, Mrs. Field, Prince de Bulgarie, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Rhea Reid, Double Pink Killarney, Deep Pink Killarney and Uncle John. Lesser quantities of Melody, Perle, Kaiserin, Sunrise and Ivory are seen. A few growers still retain Bride and Bridesmaid, and of these, fine flowers still are available, though in nothing like the quantity of the Killarneys.

The wholesalers have been at their wit's end to merchandise the carnations at prices that would give the growers a respectable average. There are some first-class carnations that are bringing fair money, but the quantities of short-stemmed stock have been beyond any possibility of cleaning up through legitimate channels. Excellent chrysanthemums are to be had. The three principal varieties are Golden Glow in yellow, and October Frost and Smith's Advance in white. Never before have there been so many white mums in September. Considering the quality, prices on mums are lower than last year.

There continue to be spasmodic shipments of gladioli, but the asters have been finished off. Easter lilies are not quite so abundant and prices are a trifle firmer. There is plenty of valley. Cattleyas are so abundant that prices have fallen to the point where the retailers are using them for window display. Violets are now in daily receipt, but weather conditions have been unfavorable and they have suffered in the

The phloxes were fine and such varieties as Eugene Danzavilliers, Gruppen Koenigin, Antonin Mercie, Mme. Paul Dutrie, Jeanne de Arc and L'Aiglon went down in many notebooks. Among the cannas Graf Waldersee and Hungaria attracted by their unusual color.

The exhibit from the Cushman Gladiolus Co., Sylvania, O., was Majestic dahlia, a large red decorative sort, awarded honorable mention.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club's entertainment committee has arranged for a banquet at the Union hotel, Thursday evening, October 5, following the business session, at which Elmer D Smith, Adrian, Mich., is to read a paper on chrysanthemums. It is expected that there will be good delegations from Milwaukee, Detroit, St. Louis and Cincinnati. The committee in charge is A. T. Pyfer, A. C. Kohlbrand, E. C. Amling, Allie Zech and H. N. vardia this year. In the early days this was a Budlong specialty.

Peter Reinberg has made wonderful progress in repairing the damage done by the storm of September 18. Within a week all the bars and glass had been restored in the section north of Summerdale avenue and before the end of the present week the roof of the section to the south will be made as good as new. Attention is called that Mr. Reinberg was incorrectly quoted in last week's Review, inasmuch as he has used cedar gutters in recent construction at his place called the farm.

C. A. Samuelson's delivery car is out with a new body, rebuilt during the summer. In its first season the car did about 6,000 miles at a cost of about $1,000. It is not thought to be economical, but effective. A horse outfit still is in use, but its sale is now being considered, to make a place for another and lighter automobile.

E. C. Amling Co. reports one of its growers at Maywood is now cutting from his Beauties for the fourteenth month since giving them a rest.

The many friends of A. C. Spencer will have the pleasure Monday morning, October 2, of welcoming him back to the north side of Randolph street, for an arrangement has been made by which Mr. Spencer will join the forces of Kyle & Foerster on that day.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association will have a stockholders' meeting October 2, for the purpose of voting on the proposition to increase the number of directors from seven to eight.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. had large decorations for Stevens and Carson-Pirie this week.

C. L. Washburn states that a meeting has been called of the executive committee of the Illinois State Florists' Association, of which he is president, to be held in the Dome building at the State Fair, Springfield, October 3, at 2 p. m. The principal business will be the selection of a place for the next meeting. Invitations have been received from Peoria and Joliet.

Frank Johnson has returned from a successful western trip for the A. L. Randall Co. He points with special pride to the Smith's Advance chrysanthemums now coming in. They think highly of this variety.

N. J. Wieter has placed an order for a 1912 Haynes touring car. The 2:10 trotter is for sale.

D. K. McMillan, field assistant to the state entomologist, is in Chicago studying the cattleya fly.

The Market.

Last week business improved nicely; there was a better demand and less stock. The continual rains of the last ten days have practically put asters out of the market and reduced the supply of gladioli so that they do not cut much figure. The supply of carnations is just about equal to the demand, while there are enough roses to go around most of the time.

A limited quantity of Golden Glow marks the opening of the mum season, and they all find ready sale. With the exception of smilax, the green goods market is well supplied.

SATURDAY morning we will be open for business at the above address, where we hope to welcome our florist friends in Cleveland and vicinity. Call and see us, so we will get better acquainted. We probably have something you want, we want your trade and we all want to push the flower show. We expect to open up with a line of Asters, Gladioli, American Beauties, Roses, Carnations, Lilies, Water Lilies, Valley, Cattleyas, Chrysanthemums, Violets, Dahlias, Smilax, Adiantum, Asparagus Plumosus (bunches and strings), Sprenger, Ferns, Galax, Leucothoe, Wild Smilax, etc., and a full line of Florists' Supplies. Remember, Mr. Retailer, with your assistance we will maintain a first-class house, that will be a big benefit to you this winter. We positively will do no retailing under any circumstances. We intend to protect the retail dealer all we can, and we in turn expect your assistance in order to carry this out.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Kinsman, of Austin, Minn., were in town last week. They are out for a pleasure trip, having come here all the way from Colorado Springs.

John Bragazee, Racine, Wis., who is about to open up a new store, came up to look for some of the necessary goods, the latter part of last week.

Adam Zender, of Chicago, also was a visitor recently.

September 25 marked the opening of the third wholesale flower house in Milwaukee. The name of the new concern is Gust Rusch & Co. The headquarters, which are practically new, are located at 448 Milwaukee street and are in the personal charge of Mr. Rusch. He is a Milwaukee boy, who received his training in his home town, and there is no reason why he should not make it a success.

H. V. Hunkel, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., went to Chicago September 24 on a combined pleasure and business trip. His firm reports business moving along nicely.

Early last week the C. C. Pollworth Co. moved its cut flower department into its new quarters at Oneida and Market streets. Mr. Pollworth says that owing to the increasing business in the supply line, that department will still be maintained at the old stand, 454 East Water street. E. O.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The cut flower market continues to improve, despite unfavorable weather conditions. The heat has been sufficient to take the life out of the demand for flowers; nobody wants them when they droop immediately, unless it is a case of necessity. Flowers are evidently becoming a necessity, happily for us, placing the business upon a more substantial footing that keeps our best men from other paths.

Dahlias are in their glory now, only it isn't dahlia weather. Cool nights put life into the stock. The demand for dahlias testifies to their popular favor. A local shop bought 5,000 September 23. Orders for 1,000 or more, usually of a single color, sometimes of one variety, are not infrequent. Prices are well maintained.

Roses stand next to dahlias as the stock in which there is most trading. Beauties continue to lead. They are better value at listed prices than any other variety. Roses, like dahlias, are in excess of the demand. Asters are fast going. It is difficult to fill a large order for high grade stock. Carnations, on the other hand, are rapidly improving and more good stock with stems of salable length is arriving each day. Cattleyas are also increasing. Orders are now taken in hundred lots at $40 that would have been an impossibility a week ago, both because of no cattleyas and because of no orders. The price of Golden Glow chrysanthemums has advanced, chiefly due to the quality of the stock, now fine; due also to the fact that quality is appreciated. Valley is rather dull. It is too hot for violets. The demand for greens, notably plumosus, is increasing.

The Dahlia Meeting.

The dahlia meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society was held in the lecture room of Horticultural hall on the afternoon and evening of September 19, as mentioned in this column last week. The principal exhibitors were W. Atlee Burpee & Co., who had a fine exhibit, effectively staged. The arrangement was relieved by nine of their handsome pyramids or trophies. A feature of their exhibit was the new decorative variety, Golden West.

Bassett & Weller, Hammonton, N. J., staged eight varieties, among them a seedling of their own, A 303, 1910, old rose, which was exceptionally beautiful. A. & G. Rosbach, Pemberton, N. J., had an excellent exhibit of thirty-seven varieties of dahlias of fine quality and size. An interesting exhibit of theirs was the African daisy.

The other exhibitors were John McCleary, in vegetables; John Little, Robert Morrow and David Aiken, in asters; Thomas Roberts, Jr., and David Aiken, in zinnias; John Little and David Aiken, in tomatoes. Some exhibits of outdoor flowers were shown in good form.

in his new business home, his coat off, a cheerful expression on his face, as the work of the last two months was nearing completion. The old Philadelphia home has been changed past recognition; one thing remains—its dignity. Though no words were spoken, it was clear that Mr. Fox had grasped that idea, improving it to the utmost. While the old-time residence has been turned into a shop, the impression is the same; there is an air of elegance and dignity throughout, suggestive of taste and refinement.

The front is occupied by a handsome show window, supported on either side by a door, one leading into the shop, the other to the apartments above.

Tapestried stone, tile and oak, each in its proper place, give an idea of the impression from Broad street. The window, fitted with a movable platform to give the advantage of different heights for display, is beautifully proportioned; it is floored in green, backed by a green lattice and white curtains.

ELECTRIC LAMPS

Your stock for the coming season is incomplete without these beautiful accessories. We make them in our own factory in a variety of styles that have been admired by all who visited the Baltimore Convention or our store. We have just filled a special order for a dome-shaped lamp after a pattern fancied by a prominent eastern firm. The effect was so good that our customer was greatly pleased. A pair of these lamps in your shop will look well and enable you to sell many, many times their value in plants and flowers. You know all these lamps are fitted with pans for a plant or for flowers; it makes them peculiarly adapted to florists' wants.

In the interior the lofty appearance of the ceiling has been increased by depressing the floor of the former residence four feet, to the street level. The effect is admirable. A handsome mantel, in which tapestried stone is again used, surmounts an open fireplace. A curious oak panel, darkly stained, with powdery finish, somewhat in the manner of the antique baskets, ornaments the wall. An attractive writing desk, with all the necessary paraphernalia, stands in a screened alcove, affording seclusion to writers. These are the artistic signs; the commercial are a marble-topped table for making up corsage bouquets and boutonnières, and the office in the rear, finished as handsomely and unobtrusively as an office can be. Back of the office is the workroom, with its perfect light from above by day, from the walls electrically by night. Farther back is Mr. Fox's private office, also a brick vault for flowers, well ventilated, and a well-lighted receiving room, where supplies come in from the rear street.

The door into the Ritz Carlton will be cut when that coming hostelry is complete, probably in the winter.

Various Notes.

Godfrey Aschmann has built a new office, with special arrangements for the accommodation of his customers. A comfortable room for the men also has been built.

A Chestnut street druggist attracted considerable attention by his window display recently. It was in yellow. Artificial goldenrod, and glass canaries of the proper shade of birdy yellow, their little bodies resplendent with internal electric light, caused the crowds to gather. You can add the arrangement of their hopping about naturally among the artificial ferns and flowers.

Bassett & Weller, Hammonton, N. J., have forwarded to Philadelphia blooms of their handsome red decorative dahlia that will be sent out next spring and their new bronze that will be introduced a year later. Both were distinct colors and pleasing.

demand for the domestic sizes increases with the approach of cooler weather; this makes the steam sizes more difficult to obtain quickly. The early frost at Boston spoiled many of the dahlias there, although one bright exhibitor cut all his flowers the night before. At New Bedford a grower made an interesting exhibit of thirty seedling cactus dahlias, all of rare promise. David Herbert & Son, of Atco, were

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

Trade shows signs of looking up, but it still is quiet. People are rapidly coming home, and if a cold snap would but accelerate their return the florists would smile broadly and hustle to fill orders. Still, there is little complaint, and the retailers all seem to have something to keep them going. Last week there was some business immediately preceding Jewish New Year, but Friday and Saturday lapsed into business doldrums of a pronounced variety.

The wholesalers complain the worst of the temporary depression. They have an abundance of stock, with practically no demand. Everything is plentiful, save asters, which are seeing their last days and are mostly of poor quality. Only the longer-stemmed asters find any kind of a demand. Orchids are plentiful, with slack sales. Dahlias are moving well, although evidently worth more money. Roses are glutting the market and the retailers are wary in their buying. They can be had almost at "your own price" in five hundred lots. They are in fine shape.

Greens still are finding a fair demand. Easter lilies are moving slowly. Carnations are more plentiful, but the reds are not moving. Yellow mums are good for the season. Whites will be ready next week. Gardenias are coming along nicely.

Various Notes.

The Pennoek-Meehan Co. states that it will not build until spring. Some repair work at 1216 Fourteenth street, where its new store will be located, led to the report that the work of demolition had already begun preparatory to rebuilding.

Fancy and Dagger

Packed and shipped by myself. Old customers know what that means, when they see whose adv. this is, and new customers will know if they try a case from me. I have not bothered you with writing this summer, telling you that I had the only Ferns there were in the market, but starting Sept. 1st, I am right on the job with an unlimited supply; you should place your order with a man that can and will supply you until new crop next spring at a reasonable price. There will be no harm done if you ask me for my price for the balance of the season, and it may do you a lot of good.

ONE OF THE MANY NICE LETTERS WE ARE RECEIVING:

Dayton, Ohio, September 7, 1911.

Chas. S. Lee & Co., Evergreen, Ala.

Gentlemen: It is a pleasure and a revelation to receive regularly our weekly order of Southern Smilax from your firm. It is the best and freshest we ever had from any point in the South, being far superior to any we ever handled, and we use hundreds of cases annually. The packing is also above the average. What makes your Smilax excel all others is because you gather it and ship the same day.

Most respectfully yours,

(Signed) Dayton Floral Co.

It is a big week in Washington because of the Masonic gathering here, and the florists are getting a share of the benefits accruing. One of the most effective decorations is in the F street window of the Washington Florists Co. The elaborate decorations for the Masonic Temple, where the imperial session of the grand officers of the grotto will be held, fell to the lot of Gude Bros. Co. Small & Son got the work at the Willard hotel, which will be especially elaborate. Wm. F. Gude was chosen grand marshal of the parade, which was held September 26.

W. W. Kimmel is going to Blackstone Island, seventy miles distant, for a few days' fishing.

Z. D. Blackstone's remodeled store promises to be one of the handsomest in Washington.

Geo. H. Cooke has a well arranged display of flowers and plants.

F. H. Kramer has taken a flier in the theater business, but it does not prevent him from gathering in a large slice of the flower trade at his several places of business.

Geo. C. Shaffer's windows attract a good deal of notice from the passing throng.

F. J. D.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Trade is good, but asters and other flowers suitable for funeral work are rather scarce, while carnations are not yet plentiful. Roses and gladioli are in moderate supply and bring fair prices.

Funeral work is heavy and calls for lots of short stock. Mums appear to be in excellent shape and the early whites will soon be in bloom. Carnations in the houses look good. The weather continues warm.

W. L.

Marinette, Wis.—George Vatter has purchased an additional two acres of land south of his greenhouses. A large part of this space will be occupied by shrubbery and outdoor plants, but he will also erect another house, to be used for roses.

H. & D. FLORISTS' BOX

Universally used for shipping cut flowers and designs. The dead-air cells form a perfect non-conductor of heat and cold, thus preserving contents much longer than ordinary wood box.

H. & D. Florists' Box can be used several times. Is much lighter than the ordinary box, thus saving in express charges.

AS A MEDIUM FOR

The Allied Trades

AN ADVERTISER IN THE ALLIED TRADES—a firm which makes an article used by nearly all Florists—recently wrote, at the expiration of his first order :

“Replying to yours of the 9th, you may continue the Adv. in your publication until forbid.

“We are rather surprised at the large number of inquiries secured from the small Adv. in the comparatively short time you have had the order. Up to this time, we feel that the inquiries received are proof that it is money well spent.”

THERE ARE TWO REASONS for advertising. One of these is to add to your business, but an equally important one is to hold that which you already have—to keep your competitor, who advertises, from winning it away from you.

You achieve both these objects when you tell your story to the whole trade through The Review.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Market.

There was a marked improvement last week over several preceding weeks. Funeral work was the heaviest it had been for some time. There have been quite a number of weddings and early fall socials lately, and these, with store openings, have kept some of the florists pretty busy. This week we had German day and Home Coming week, with Governor Marshall and Senator Kern as principal speakers. Tuesday was German day, with a fine parade, a feature of which was the floral decoration of all automobiles.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons report fine business last week. They had part of the decorations of De Jong's new store, which was opened to the public September 25. The stock here is all in grand condition. The roses are fine, especially the Killarneys, and there will be plenty of them to cut soon. The carnations are giving some blooms of good substance, though the stems are short. The mums could hardly look better. Monrovia is showing color, it being the earliest one here. There is one bench of the Governor Herrick violet and the plants make a fine showing. They have produced lots of buds and these have been picked off, with plenty more showing. Firing was commenced last week, as the nights are cool enough to make a little heat necessary for roses.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. is cutting plenty of roses and a good many carnations. Their Marylands are extra fine. Business is excellent. They have had a large number of out-of-town weddings and a number booked in advance. They also had a good share of the decoration of De Jong's new store. They cut their first mums September 25 and a few Advance have been sent to their store.

Louis Fritsch has been quite busy of late. He looks for a large trade this season.

J. C. Elsperman has had a good run of funeral work lately. He has an immense stock of fine plants of all kinds. He received a large shipment of dried flowers from M. Rice & Co., of Philadelphia, last week.

Henry Seymour says business is improving.

Karl Zeidler is busy with funeral work.

Nellie Goodge was in a serious condition for part of two days last week. It was feared she could not live, but she is better now and all are hoping for her speedy recovery.

Royston & Fenton report a much better sale of roses since asters have been gone.
E. L. F.

Buffalo, N. Y.—The city park commissioners have awarded to the Lord & Burnham Co. the contract for the erection of the new greenhouse and dome in Delaware park, at a cost of $18,063.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

The Market.

The wholesale markets have been overstocked almost daily all through the last week, some of it of excellent quality, which indicates that the retail trade does not yet feel a steady demand. However, President Taft's visit and several good wedding decorations created quite a call for good stock. Funeral work was scarce last week.

Roses of all kinds are in abundance and from $10 to $20 per thousand for good stock is being asked. Beauties also are plentiful in all grades. Carnations are improving daily in size, color and stem, and there are enough to meet the demand.

Other seasonable stocks in the market are cosmos, valley, gladioli, tuberoses, dahlias, lilies and asters. Smilax and asparagus are in good supply.

Various Notes.

Robert J. Windler and his bride returned home from their honeymoon last week. Mr. Windler will be installed

Harry Young & Son, who opened a flower store on Maryland avenue last week, say they are well pleased with their first week's business. They make an attractive show in their windows.

Among those who had large fall opening decorations last week were C.
Young & Sons Co., Chas. Beyer, F. W.
Bruenig, Wm. Schray & Sons and Sanders Nurseries.

The entire Smith force spent an enjoyable afternoon Sunday, September 24, at Kirkwood, on a crawfish hunt.
Those in the party were Mr. and Mrs.
W. C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ossick,
Mr. and Mrs. P. Patton, Mr. and Mrs.
O. Kuehn, Frank Windler, Miss Rose
Windler and Wm. Vogel.

Geo. Angermueller and Chas. Schoenle had great luck on their recent fishing trip to Spanish lake. Both came home loaded down with fish.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, who introduced the Mazzura violets to the local trade, says that he has fine plants this year and expects a large cut this season, even though last summer was a hard one on violet plants.

The committee that has the Chicago trip in charge will call a meeting this week of all who expect to make the trip, and decide on the road to carry the party and make other necessary arrangements for the trip.

There is some talk going the rounds that the florists are organizing a union, but it seems to be chiefly rumor.

The removal of H. N. Siegenthaler, druggist, from a central to a suburban location caused his flower department manager, Miss Jacobs, to form a partnership under the style Jacobs & Rightmire, Mrs. Rightmire having until recently been Miss Ackerson, in the employ of Miss Harriet Van Meter. The stand at 15 South Fountain avenue, once occupied by C. L. Reese and later by Gustave Schneider, is now occupied by this new firm of women florists.

A sign in front of the room vacated by Siegenthaler states that it will be occupied about October 15 by the Springfield Cut Flower Co. Inquiry fails to bring to light the members of this company, but it is learned that Gustave Schneider, who was in town September 25, made it known that the stock will be supplied from his greenhouses near Cleveland. He having no lease on his present salesroom, which was formerly the bar of the Bookwalter hotel, the natural conclusion is that this is a move to secure a room for use in case the bar should be reinstated and in the meantime operate stores under two different firm styles.

SUBSTITUTE FOR LATH HOUSE.

In some parts of our town it is not allowed to put up wooden structures, on account of the danger of fire. This keeps me from putting up a lath house that I need for my plants. Do you know of a structure, made of material that is not combustible and at the same time not too expensive, that would answer the purpose of an ordinary lath house? A reply from any reader would greatly oblige. A. V.

PORTLAND, ORE.

With the coming of the fall season, business has taken a decided change. While there is a scarcity of flowers of first quality, the call for funeral work keeps the market depleted of short stock. September has been an unusual month for weddings, the demand for white roses far exceeding the supply.

Indications are that the new crop of carnations and roses will soon be on. Mums are coming in slowly; Monrovia and October Frost are the prevailing varieties. Decorative greens are a scarcity. The demand for palms and ferns has livened up considerably with the advance of the season. People are returning from the resorts. E. R. C.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

With cooler weather and almost continuous rains for the last two weeks, business has taken a decided change for the better. Outdoor stock, with the exception of gladioli and a few late asters, is gone, and now we find ourselves again facing a shortage of good cut flowers. Carnations are coming on slowly and it will be some time before the supply will equal the demand. Roses are coming in and now we see some of the better grade of mums of the early varieties, such as October Frost, Monrovia, etc.

Various Notes.

The Tacoma Dahlia Society gave its first dahlia show on Saturday and Sunday, September 16 and 17. There were many fine collections, one of which comprised over 300 varieties. This climate seems to be well adapted to the cultivation of this beautiful flower.

The stock of the Northwestern Floral Co. was sold last week to J. B. Pilkington, of Portland, Ore. Mr. Pilkington intends to carry on a general flower and nursery business. Ed. Goldsack now has charge of the business.

A. Seamons, of Van Slyke & Seamons, spent part of last week at Centralia and Chehalis, calling on the trade there. He reports everything in that district in fine condition. J. L. S.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather is still quite warm and the nights are long and cool. This is the best condition possible for producing good stock, and never has there been a better showing in September. The asters are well on the wane and mums have almost taken their place.

There is only a limited quantity of outside stock thus far, but of greenhouse flowers we have a good showing. The prices range a shade less than they did one year ago, as did also the asters all through the season. Carnations are not yet in full crop and the stems on some of them are not as long as we should like to see, but all this will be righted in a few weeks. Roses of the shorter lengths are plentiful enough, but fancy stock is scarce and will be for some time to come. Valley is abundant and does not move extra well. Japanese lilies are getting poor in quality and are about over for the year. Other lines of stock are about as usual. Business continues to improve and everyone feels that we are going to have plenty of trade in a short time.

Various Notes.

A. Mann and H. Landsberg have opened a new store in the Hearst Examiner building, which they will run as an adjunct to their Eddy street establishment.

It is quite a noticeable fact that the Greeks have driven the Italian hucksters out of business in the neighborhood of the Chronicle building, and where only a basket was formerly the means used to handle the trade the enterprising Greeks have now built elaborate stands to display their wares on.

At a meeting called at 324 Grant avenue on the evening of September 13, by several of the leading florists of this city, resolutions were adopted and a permanent organization effected, to be called the Retail Florists' Association. Over sixty florists of this city signified their willingness to become members. A. J. Rossi was elected president and Julius Eppstein secretary.

While endeavoring to push a wheelbarrow across the tracks at Forty-third street and H avenue on the morning of September 20, M. Sacchi, a gardener, was struck by an Ocean Beach car and instantly killed. He was well known in that neighborhood and was aged about 50 years. Nothing is known here of his family connections. G.

San Francisco, Cal.—The California Floral Supply Co., George K. Uno, manager, which opened at 31 and 33 Lick place August 15, reports shipping trade steadily increasing from this market. This concern confines its activities to the wholesale business.

Portland, Ore.—Martin & Forbes have begun the erection of a range of greenhouses at Forest Grove that will mean a total expenditure of $30,000. The firm owns a 50-acre tract at Forest Grove and also has a 5-acre tract on the west side of Mount Tabor which is already well covered with greenhouses.

Clipping from The Florists' Review, 9-21-'11.

...that broke things up pretty bad, but none of Peter Reinberg's houses went down under the force of the blow. Growers and greenhouse builders who visited the scene in the morning were quick to note that Peter Reinberg's houses were all on iron gutters, and that these houses stood up, while the houses that collapsed were all on wooden gutters. Peter Reinberg himself agreed to the suggestion that there seemed good evidence that in this storm the presence of the iron gutters had made a saving that was a good deal more than their cost. "You know I always thought well of the iron gutter," he said.

No. 1.—Note that the houses shown above, built on Garland IRON gutters, remained standing; reglazing and replacing a few sashbars will make them as good as new.

The two photographs reproduced above show the path of a tornado that struck the range of Peter Reinberg, that of George Reinberg and the one operated by Chas. Handel (known as the Schafer place) early Monday morning, September 18, 1911. Photo No. 1 shows Peter Reinberg's houses. These were all built on Garland Iron Gutters and they remained standing. Photo No. 2 shows the range operated by Chas. Handel and back of it the establishment of George Reinberg, just across the street from the others. These houses were built with wooden gutters and they went flat to the ground.

At the extreme right rear of the first illustration appear the same demolished wooden gutter houses that are shown in the middle background at the right of the second illustration.

The effect on these three ranges across which the storm swept shows conclusively that Houses Built on Garland Iron Gutters Will Stand when wooden gutter houses let go.

Garland Gutters are now made semi-malleable. They are stronger and more durable than any other gutters known.

Gutter Houses Stand

Wooden Gutter Houses Let Go!

No. 2.—Note the destruction wrought here, where wooden gutters were in use; many of the houses were completely demolished and must be entirely rebuilt.

While the two photographs teach a big lesson to prospective buyers of greenhouse material, an even greater lesson than is shown at first glance is provided. It brings out this pertinent question:

If the iron gutter houses stand under the same strains that demolish the wooden gutter houses, how much stronger would the former houses be if iron frame construction had been used throughout?

It is practically certain that with Garland iron frame construction all the sashbars would have held also and the only damage would then have been the broken glass. Peter Reinberg estimates his loss at $20,000 and all his houses were left standing. George Reinberg's loss is much heavier. Now—Can You afford to use anything except Garland Cast Iron, Semi-malleable Gutters and Iron Frame or Truss Construction when You build? Write us today for full particulars regarding Garland Construction.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., Leonard H. Vaughan, Chicago; First Vice-Pres., M. H. Duryea, New York City; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

MANGEL has had a big advance in Europe.

THOSE Canadian peas won't come in free for awhile, anyway.

VISITED CHICAGO: S. A. Wilson, of the L. L. Olds Seed Co., Madison, Wis.

THE S. S. Uranium, from Rotterdam, arrived at New York September 20 with 354 cases of Dutch bulbs consigned to H. Van Emden and one case for G. Muller & Co.

THE seed trade in general had hoped for and expected reciprocity with Canada and is disappointed that the commercial barrier between the two countries should be maintained.

SWEET CORN in Nebraska is standing well, but is late. Growers state that if frost holds off long enough to permit maturing the crop the Stowell's Evergreen should fill contracts 100 per cent.

RALPH M. WARD & Co., New York, received 516 cases of Paper Whites and Romans on the S. S. Madonna, from Marseilles, that docked September 18. The same boat brought thirty-six cases of bulbs consigned to order.

THE late varieties of potatoes grown for seed in Wisconsin are giving a good crop, but the supply is not thought likely to break prices, as inquiries are numerous and call for quotations on large quantities, especially south and west.

PETER HENDERSON & Co., New York, received 100 bags of spinach seed via Hamburg September 20. The same boat brought thirty-six bags of spinach consigned to J. W. Hampton, Jr., & Co., and 384 bags of grass seed for Henry Nungesser & Co.

SUCCESSFUL crops of vine seeds last year in southwestern Kansas led some growers to increase their contracts there, but this season the crops have been an almost total failure, one house reporting that it will not get its stock seed back on certain varieties put out in Kearney county.

EACH week the Board of General Appraisers passes on some more of those old hyacinth duty protests. September 11 Wm. Elliott & Sons' case was decided and September 13 that of Wm. Hagemann & Co. In each instance the Board sustains the protest on the authority of Beck vs. United States.

on account of hail and damage by dry weather and jack rabbits. A few of the crops in that locality are late and are now showing good growth and may make good if the frost holds off two or three weeks longer.

"The Rocky Ford crops are generally good and we expect to make full deliveries of nearly all varieties of cucumber and watermelon. We have not yet inspected the Nebraska crop of melon, pumpkin and squash, but look for fair crops, with the exception of the muskmelon, the acreage of which is small, and some of the varieties of pumpkin and squash, which have been destroyed by the cut worms, bugs and dry weather in some localities. We expect to be short the following varieties of vine seeds, viz.: Cucumber, Extra Early, Siberian and West India Gherkin; muskmelon, Extra Early and Large Hackensack, Early Prolific Nutmeg, Osage, Extra Early Green Citron, Casaba, Chicago Market, Baltimore Market, Montreal Market, Princess, Perfection, Long Island Beauty and Shumway's Giant; pumpkin, Large Striped and Improved White Cashaw, Jonathan, Golden Oblong, Japanese Pie, Mammoth Potiron, King of the Mammoths and Mammoth Tours; squash, Lowe's and Warren's Essex Hybrid, American Turban, Sibley and Faxon; sweet corn, Mammoth Late and Burpee's White Evergreen; flint corn, Compton's Early, King Philip, Early Eight-rowed and Longfellow; field corn, White Cap, Extra Early, Minnesota King, Adams' Extra Early and Adams' Large Early. Other varieties we hope to fill in full, providing the crops are harvested under favorable conditions."

Boddington's Quality Christmas and Winter-flowering Sweet Peas

ALL true stocks of Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas will be scarce this season; some varieties are a total failure, owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. We can make immediate delivery of all the undermentioned varieties. Our advice to intending planters is to order early.

Our stocks of Christmas-Flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasingly popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period, and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" and include Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed from selected stocks by the leading California Growers and Specialists of Sweet Peas. Our output last year was nearly 6000 lbs. No kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

WINTER FLOWERING SWEET PEAS AT NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW, BOSTON, MARCH 25th TO APRIL 1st, 1911.

Partly showing Mr. Wm. Sim's Exhibit, which won the majority of the leading prizes—seed almost exclusively supplied by "Boddington." Sim's Sweet Peas were one of the sensational Exhibits at this Grand Flower Show—average length of stem being twenty inches.

Boddington's Quality Winter-Flowering Sweet Peas

At the Exhibition and Convention of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, July 12th and 13th, 1910, we again won the C. C. Morse & Co.'s Silver Cup for the finest and best collection of Sweet Peas open to the trade only.

BODDINGTON'S EXTRA EARLY CHRISTMAS WHITE SNOWBIRD. An exceptionally early Sweet Pea for indoor flowering—will bloom six weeks after sowing. Color clear white, upon long stems; habit fairly dwarf and of exceptionally free-flowering qualities. Without doubt, the finest early white for indoor planting. We sell one grower in Pennsylvania 35 lbs. of this variety every year, name on application. Oz. 30 cts., ¼ lb. 85 cts., ½ lb. $1.50, lb. $2.50.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS PINK. This is the earliest and most profitable and useful Sweet Pea in cultivation, as by sowing the seed under glass in latter part of August, flowers can be cut from Thanksgiving on during the Winter months. Oz. 25 cts., ¼ lb. 75 cts., ½ lb. $1.25, lb. $2.00.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS WHITE. A companion to our Christmas Pink. Just as free and profuse a bloomer. Oz. 15 cts., ¼ lb. 50 cts., ½ lb. 85 cts., lb. $1.50.

BODDINGTON'S CANARY. Similar to the above, but flowers of an exceptionally good yellow. Oz. 35 cts., ¼ lb. $1.00, ½ lb. $1.75, lb. $3.00.

BODDINGTON'S FLAMINGO. Color scarlet; free-flowering and early. Oz. 50 cts., ¼ lb. $1.50, ½ lb. $2.75, lb. $5.00.

Christmas Meteor. Scarlet; fine open red flower. Oz. 25 cts., ¼ lb. 75 cts., ½ lb. $1.25, lb. $2.00.

Christmas Captain. Blue and purple. Oz. 25 cts., ¼ lb. 75 cts., ½ lb. $1.25, lb. $2.00.

Florence Denzer. Pure white. Oz. 15 cts., ¼ lb. 50 cts., ½ lb. 85 cts., lb. $1.50.

Giant-Flowering Cyclamen

For the last 15 years we have selected three-fourths of our seed bearing Cyclamen stock before Xmas, to assure early blooming plants, and claim the finest commercial strain in this country; no fizzle of many so-called English varieties. Our aim is strong growers, that don't have to be petted to be grown into a choice salable plant—a well built, five petaled flower (many of them at one time), with well marked foliage; every plant an ideal, a prize-winner. Received first and second prizes at the Toledo Florists' Club meeting early in November, when blooming Cyclamens were scarce. Seed of this, my own grown strain, in five separate colors, $1.00 per 100; $6.00 per 1000; $25.00 per 5000.

issued about October 1, from which the following is quoted:

"While garden peas and Golden Self-Blanching celery have been in extremely short supply for the last two years, yet never before in the history of the seed trade have there been so many or such alarming shortages as in seed crops of 1911. There is almost a famine, not only in peas and French-grown Golden Self-Blanching celery, but also in nearly all the beets, mangels, carrots and parsnips, as well as in certain cabbages, radishes and turnips. Eastern-grown cucumbers are only one-fourth to one-half a crop. California sweet peas average little more than half a crop. Our crops of Connecticut-grown Red Globe and Yellow Globe onions are also, unfortunately, short in yield of seed, while Gibraltar onion is almost a complete failure.

"In our extensive travels the past summer (more than 30,000 miles), the only country in Europe where we found seed crops uniformly good was Denmark. On both the islands of Amager and Zealand the crops of cabbage and cauliflower were better than we have seen for years and the seed should possess unusual vitality, so that our market gardener friends can well afford to purchase a two years' supply."

The Burpee circular on sweet pea novelties and the advance offer on sweet peas were issued, as usual, September 20.

TULIPS IN HOLLAND.

Last year the prices for tulips were generally so low that some growers had to pay more rent for the ground than they received for the bulbs. Such varieties as La Reine, Yellow Prince, Murillo, etc., once rather expensive, were sold for nearly nothing. The general opinion was that too many tulips were grown in the bulb country. Formerly, in the northern districts, in the environs of Alkmaar, cabbage was the leading crop, but as this culture ceased to

Some men can never get out of their own way—they are pulling their own weight and don't know it. Cheap-price Bugaboo has a mortgage on their intellect at the rate of about 50% per annum. And those are the very fellows who kick the most—they couldn't kick more if they had their bed spread on a donkey-engine. They buy cheap stuff for little money and immediately forget what they pay but never forget how bad the stock is after it is forced. They have ingrown ideas of their own, and you can't tell them anything nor reason with them. They are almost as bad as the professional canceler of orders—the worst and meanest kicker on the face of the globe. Just the kind that would insist upon a one-armed man taking up a church collection—they don't even trust themselves. They are so used to dealing with the Wooden-shoe Hikers from Holland that they think there is no honor left in the world. So, when you buy bulbs for little money, expect little value and you will not be much disappointed; but if you pay a fair price and insist upon a good article, you will be better off. Then, remember that the profit in your business is not regulated by the amount of pot-walloping you do but by the kind of pot-walloping you can get others to do for you plus your ability to market the goods. For real good bulbs, particularly lily bulbs, write us.

LILIUM HARRISII

(THE BERMUDA EASTER LILY)

LET US SUPPLY YOUR WANTS IN LILIES THIS SEASON

We think we can make it to your advantage to do so, as regards both quality and price.

The stock that we offer is not gathered indiscriminately from all kinds of sources, but is grown for us by a few selected growers whose stocks have been worked up from the true, original stock. In order to insure the health of the product, the bulbs are not grown on the same field oftener than one season, other crops being grown on the field the preceding year. The ground is thoroughly manured when the previous crop is grown, leaving it in a high state of cultivation, and when the lily bulbs are planted no fresh manure is used; this prevents disease and insures a crop of strong, healthy bulbs.

In addition to this, we do not dig our bulbs as early as they are usually dug, but leave them in the ground until they are thoroughly ripened and matured. When Harrisii is good it leaves little to be desired. There is very little, if any, stock obtainable as good as the stock that we are offering. We are supplying only this one grade of selected stock, and when this is disposed of we shall have no more to offer.

While the quality of the stock that we offer is of the highest, our prices are as low as, or lower than, the prices of those who offer the ordinary stock gathered from indiscriminate sources. We are sure buyers will find our stock very satisfactory, and much more so than the Japan-grown Longiflorum, which has badly deteriorated in recent years.

Bear in mind that we were the original introducers of Harrisii in Bermuda, and that we have exceptional facilities for obtaining our present supplies. Also take note that the smallest bulbs that we offer are 6-7 inch bulbs, not 5-7 inch, as usually offered.

6-7 inch bulbs, 335 to the case, $15.00 per case; full thousand lots, $ 40.00 per 1000
7-9 inch bulbs, 200 to the case, 16.00 per case; full thousand lots, 75.00 per 1000
9-11 inch bulbs, 100 to the case, 18.00 per case; full thousand lots, 175.00 per 1000

FERNS

We have an exceptionally nice lot of ferns in the following varieties—good, bushy, well-grown plants that will please the most critical buyers. Plants have been grown in pots and are thoroughly well established and nicely finished.

As has been stated previously, the harvest of first size bulbs has been moderate this year. The size of the bulbs was generally smaller than in other seasons, especially in the earlier kinds. From these, also, the scales were badly split, so that only a part of the stock could be sold, for though the bulbs from which the scale has been split grow and flower as well as the others, the exporters do not send them to their customers. The only method of keeping the scales of tulips quite sound is to cut the leaves while they are still green, and leave the bulbs, after this operation, a week or a fortnight in the earth. The quality of the bulbs is much better than in many of the foregoing years, and perhaps in consequence of that a good demand and an active trade were expected.

In the first days of the season the trade in tulips was slow and it seemed this season would be like the others, but afterwards the prices became higher and higher, and now the trade is as active as possible. The stock of the Darwin tulips, and of all the May-flowering kinds, has been nearly cleared, and the stock of the best varieties of the early tulips is becoming rather short. The growers, that is, those who do not export but only grow, are content with this season.

Of the May-flowering tulips, the Darwins had the largest demand, and especially the trade varieties, as Clara Butt, Margaret, White Queen, Pride of Haarlem, Edmee, Isis, Zulu, Faust, etc., are already all sold off. The red and scarlet kinds, and also the mauve, were first sold off. The Rembrandt tulips, though still rarer, were in demand this Vegetable Forcing.

THE BOSTON CONVENTION.

The convention of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America, which closed September 22 in Boston, was the most successful yet held. There were many present, especially from New England, New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, a considerable number also coming from more distant states.

President R. L. Watts found the lecture hall of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society's building well filled when he opened proceedings September 19. Acting Mayor Collins extended the felicitations of the city of Boston. President Harry F. Hall, of the Boston Market Gardeners' Association, tendered the visitors a hearty welcome to Boston. E. A. Dunbar, of Ashtabula, O., responded suitably, after which President Watts read his address. Secretary Severance, of Louisville, reported twenty-four states and provinces represented in the association, with 214 members. These numbers received a substantial increase during the convention.

The reports of the state vice-presidents were given by H. F. Hall; that of the committee on transportation by J. W. Rice, of Ashtabula, O.; membership, by H. F. Hansen, of Attleboro, Mass., and legislation by T. C. Johnson, of Norfolk, Va. The subjects discussed Tuesday evening, "The French and English Styles of Vegetable Forcing," by David Lumsden, Durham, N. H., and "Marketing," by Paul Work, Ithaca, N. Y., the latter illustrated by the stereopticon, drew large audiences and the discussions were animated.

Quite a number of additional members were on hand for Wednesday's sessions. In the morning J. Lockie Wilson, of Toronto, spoke entertainingly on "The Horticultural Organizations of Canada." The remaining morning address was on "Pre-cooling and Cold Storage of Vegetables." In the afternoon the visitors, accompanied by many local growers, inspected a number of the large market gardens near Boston, including those of Wyman Bros., Crosby Bros., W. W. Rawson & Co., Hittinger Fruit Co., Waban Gardens and others. A local committee looked well after the wants of the visitors.

W. R. Cobb, of the Lord & Burnham Co., and H. B. Fullerton, Medford, L. I., spoke respectively on "Greenhouse Construction and Heating" and "Open Air Opportunities." Both addresses were illustrated and gave rise to much discussion.

September 21 members were greatly interested in the great vegetable show gotten up for their benefit, but found time for considerable business. B. C. Haines, of Norfolk, Va., spoke on "Truck Crop Rotation as Practiced by Hotbed Growers of Norfolk." "Good Seeds for Market Gardeners" created a lively discussion, in the course of which free seeds were roundly condemned as being of political significance only. A resolution embodying the views of the meeting was voted sent to the Secretary of Agriculture at Washington.

The annual election of officers resulted as follows: President, H. F. Hall, Brighton, Mass.; vice-president, C. West, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, S. W. Severance, Louisville; treasurer, M. L. Reutenik, Cleveland. The directors will be chosen later. The time and place of next meeting was left, according to custom, to the executive committee. A committee was appointed to prepare a report on uniform packages in which to ship produce, and this committee will report at the next meeting.

The last lecture was by C. W. Waid, New Carlisle, O., on "What Experiment Stations are Doing for Vegetable Growers." On the afternoon of the closing day, interest centered in the great vegetable show, but many delegates visited other market gardens as well as places of historical interest. In the evening a banquet was tendered at the Hotel Somerset by the Boston Market Gardeners' Association, over 400 being present.

The vegetable exhibition surpassed in extent any previously held in Boston. In spite of a dry summer, and unusually early frosts, the entries were numerous and quality excellent. Main interest centered in the collection classes. For twenty varieties arranged for effect, Edwin Jenkins, of Lenox, Mass., captured the $100 prize, Col. F. Mason, E. L. Lewis, gardener, being second, and Alan Jenkins, Lenox, third. There were four other entries. For twelve varieties of vegetables, limited to commercial growers, Waban Gardens led, followed by Col. F. Mason and J. B. Shurtleff.

The private gardeners captured the lion's share of the big premiums. Some of the more successful contestants, in addition to those already named, were: Oliver Ames, Edward Parker, gardener; W. J. Clemson, J. O. Christiansen, gardener; Mrs. Lester Leland, Eric Wetterton, gardener; A. W. Preston, J. L. Smith, gardener, and Geo. R. NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1911-12: Pres., J. H. Dayton, Painesville, O.; Vice-pres., W. H. Wyman, North Abington, Mass.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., G. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-seventh annual meeting, Boston June 1912.

THE tenth annual convention of the National Nut Growers' Association will be held at Mobile, Ala., October 5 to 7. Many southern nurserymen, especially the pecan growers, will attend.

THE late Lewis Chase, the Rochester nurseryman, is said to have left an estate of $126,000, of which $100,000 is personal property. To Charles H. Chase, a son, 100 shares of stock in the Chase Bros. Nursery Co. and a farm at Sidney, Me., are bequeathed. To his cousin, Julia Chase Washburn, of North Livermore, Me., a farm of 140 acres near that town is left.

THE METHODS OF MARKETING.

[An extract from a speech by Jim Parker, of Tecumseh, Oklahoma, at the St. Louis convention of the American Association of Nurserymen.]

It is the province of the wholesale nurseryman to notice the trend of planting in the great fruit growing districts, to watch the public approval or disapproval of the different varieties and govern his plantings accordingly, to foster and encourage all movements for the beautifying of the cities, and to see that the supply of nursery stock is always up to the demand. In the wholesale nurseryman is centered that power and knowledge that give stability and dignity to the business.

The retail nurseryman keeps in touch with local demands. He prepares those breezy advertisements which make the city man lonesome. He is constantly on the outlook for opportunities of increasing sales. If there is a large crop of apples in any community, he is ready to rush his salesmen in and push the sale of apple trees. If some farmer makes good money out of a peach crop, he is ready to offer that farmer's neighbors a chance to get rich growing peaches. If there is a glut in the wholesale market, or a peculiar condition which causes the market to drop, thus offering him an opportunity for unusual profit, he is Johnny-on-the-spot and he knows just in which neck of the woods to go and sell trees.

What of the local nurseryman? His neighbors do not buy of him. They would tell you that they mean to, but they don't. It is human nature not to do the things we may do any time. A man's neighbors won't make a written

SPECIAL PEONY OFFER

A SELECT LIST OF THE BEST VARIETIES—10 ACRES OF PEONIES GROWN

PEONIES—It is not necessary to grow a thousand or even a hundred varieties to have a collection that will include everything really worth while. We have sifted out all the duplicates, eliminating those with defects of any kind, and present here an assortment covering the entire range of colors, extending over the blooming season and representing the very best out of hundreds of varieties gotten together from specialists in France, England, Holland, Japan and this country. Strong divisions, with 3 to 5 good eyes.

weather is bad. The spring planting season comes and conditions are just the same. The surer a community is that the local nurseryman is honest and has good stock, the more surely works the machinery of delay. I have been up against the proposition, kept tab, and know how it goes. Out of twenty men who would look me squarely in the eye and say, "Jim, you're a bully good fellow; I'm coming to your nursery to get 100 trees," I would make one sale.

The real work of selling nursery stock, on final analysis, is found to depend on the personal influence of the traveling salesman. Did you ever have one of those smiling "knights of the grip" come into the field where you were plowing? He did not put on any airs. He only quietly told you his name was Jones, and then added in a peculiarly friendly tone, "John Jones." And the way he said John made you feel that you were not much interested in whether his name was Jones or Smith—John was the name by which he should be known to you. It was not necessary for John to make inquiry about your wife and children and your growing crops. There was that peculiar feeling of good fellowship in his voice and manner which made you know that he was interested in you and yours. In his cheerful presence your griefs were soon forgotten and your blues stole softly away. Then do you remember how you and John sat down on the plow handles and looked at the pictures in his book? He did not presume to advise or argue with you, but somehow his interested and suggestive way of asking about your plans started you to thinking and planning, and as your plans developed in your own mind, you were glad to have your friend John by your side to help you work out the details and get things right. Trade with John? Of course you do. He is the sort of a man you like to do business with.

And, gentlemen, in spite of the abuses of the system, three-fourths of the or-man a chance to do his best, I do not mean that we should make cheap prices. The question of opportunity and honesty is not necessarily dependent on whether prices are high or low. I mean we should give the salesman a square deal, that our catalogues and instructions to salesmen should tell the truth; that, no difference whether we sell an apple tree for $1 or for 10 cents, that apple tree should be as good a tree as we promise and bear the fruit we say it will. Uniform prices to the retail trade are not practicable. There are communities where sales are light and consequently higher prices must be charged. There is the city trade, which demands the largest and best trees. The actual cost of the tree may not be more than 2 cents above the cost of grades sold in thousand lots to farmers, but the cost of selling one to a dozen trees to a customer and handling the business as the city trade demands may make it necessary to charge 50 cents per tree more in the city than in the country.

It is written in the Book: "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." If a stranger walks up to a group of ten people, nine of them will size him up about right. The fact that this is true proves that the Creator has written and is writing on our faces and forms just what we are. God does naught by halves. The fact that we can read part of the writing proves that it is all written. If a traveling salesman carries in his own mind the consciousness that he is giving real value for the money and doing a real service to the community in which he sells trees, his very looks will inspire confidence in the minds of the people. If the nurseryman who employs him has loaded him up with a mess of trickery and a bundle of lies to be dickered off on the people, that man will know in his own mind that he is playing the rascal and there will be something about him which will, in spite of his glib tongue and polished appearance, cause the people to doubt him. He will be constantly under the necessity of sparring for time or scheming for the attention of the people he calls on. And so I say the retail nurseryman will increase his business and do the trade a real service by giving his agents a square deal and an honest proposition to offer to the people.

SMITH'S ADVANCE

is the earliest large-flowered white Chrysanthemum. Like Golden Glow, it will produce good blooms at any season of the year following an active period of growth. Buds selected June 10 were cut July 25, 5½ inches in diameter, with excellent stem, foliage and remarkable substance. The later buds, for August and September, gave larger and finer flowers, carried on stems 3 to 3½ feet long. We offer stock plants for immediate or later delivery, from one of the most celebrated growers, at 40c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

The weather continues fine and inside planting has progressed accordingly.
Repairs and rebuilding are being hurried along so as to be completed before severe weather sets in. Business in general is quiet, with the exception of funeral work, which is active.

Carnations are plentiful but short stemmed, and good roses can be had in any amount. It is feared this will result in a rose famine when the demand increases, as they will then be going off crop. A few Golden Glow are seen in the stores.

The State Fair.

The West Michigan Fair held here recently was a decided success in spite of the rain, which fell in torrents all day Thursday, September 14. As usual, the chief interest in the floral department surrounded the large general collection of plants, the designs and the cut flowers. W. L. Cukerski won first place on the plants, with Crabb & Hunter Floral Co. second. The latter firm was first on designs with a large standing wreath of Mrs. Aaron Ward roses and valley. Mr. Cukerski was second with a pillow of red and white roses.
H. Danhoff was third with a plain cross of white asters.

There was a long list of premiums in the classes for various specimen plants and displays of cut flowers, all the awards going to Crabb & Hunter, W. L.
Cukerski and H. Danhoff. Eli Cross, who had expected to be a heavy exhibitor, was confined to his home by a severe attack of hay fever. G. F. C.

SOUTHINGTON, CONN.

The Market.

Business seems to be quiet, but it is hoped that the cooler weather will produce a change for the better. The frost which occurred September 13 did a great deal of damage here. The dahlia crop was ruined. The heavy rains did great damage to the asters. The carnations are improving wonderfully. As yet there is not much choice, however, as they are mostly white and Enchantress. Funeral work last week used up a good deal of the short-stemmed stock.

Various Notes.

The Blatchley Co. and a force of men have been busy at their plant at South End, plowing the soil and getting it ready for the outdoor spring crops.

W. L. Curtis has some houses of fine mums.

Many wild deer are reported in and around Southington, and people seem much exercised over the destruction of garden truck. B.

LOWELL, MASS.

The city authorities seem to have difficulty in compelling some of the florists to "be good" and obedient with reference to the Sunday closing ordinance. A local newspaper of recent date contained the following announcement: "All the florists in the city have been notified of an action taken by the police board this week, relative to Sunday business. Many of the florists, it seems, have somewhat stretched the rule that allowed them to keep their shops open until Sunday noon, so that hereafter no such thing will be allowed. They may receive orders up till late Saturday night, and make up and deliver these until 11 a. m. Sunday, but the shops must not be open at all on Sunday, except to fill the orders."

CANNAS

We have an excellent prospect of a fine crop of roots for next season's delivery, at $2.00 per 100, $15.00 per 1000 and up. Can furnish you 50,000 roots of some kinds.

DAHLIAS

200,000 field clumps, at $5.00 per 100, $40.00 per 1000 and up. Write us for list. Let us book your order, so as to be sure of the varieties.

Dreer Seasonable Specials

Special circulars offering the following seasonable stocks have recently been mailed to the trade. If you are interested and have not received copies, write to us.

Hardy Perennial Phloxes

More than half a million plants are now in bloom at our Locust Farm Nursery. The best varieties only, and we can ship at once.

Peonies

Now is the time to plant. We have just harvested 150,000 roots, strong divisions, four, five and more eyes. Many of the standard sorts at particularly interesting prices.

Japanese Iris

Japanese varieties, but not Japanese mixtures. 150,000 home-grown plants, true to name. Forty-four of the finest varieties ever brought together. Now is the time to plant.

Dahlias

Field-grown roots. We have issued a special catalogue of these, in which we offer 200 standard up-to-date varieties. You should consult this list before making up your catalogue for 1912.

Araucarias

Thirty thousand plants now in stock. Prices lower than ever offered. This is for early delivery only and it will pay you to cover your requirements for the coming season now. Get our special circular offering these plants.

For a complete line of all seasonable Florists' stock, hardy perennial plants, bulbs, seeds and sundries, consult our current Wholesale List, issued September 1st.

 COLLINGDALE, PENNSYLVANIA

FERNS—FERNS

Extra fine in flats or pots, at reasonable prices.

All Bulbs and Plants in season.
F. W. O. SCHMITZ, Prince Bay, N. Y.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Last week will go on record as one of the poorest of the season. Supplies accumulated to such an extent that no reasonable offer was refused, and large quantities of flowers could not be cleared up. The Jewish holiday made considerable difference to business. With the Hebrew element out of the market for several days, there was a marked falling off in sales. The outlook for this week's business was better, but such unwieldy quantities of asters, dahlias and carnations seemed to overwhelm every one.

Some fine roses are to be seen and the better grades move fairly well, but there is a veritable deluge of short-stemmed blooms of Killarney, Brides, Maids and any quantity of Cochetts. Carnations are rather more plentiful, but are not selling well and any number could be had on the streets.

Golden Glow mums seem to move a trifle better and will be seen in large quantities this season. The chrysanthemum, not satisfied with its own season, is overlapping on the aster and the dahlia. October Frost made its appearance in fine form September 23. Tuberoses are exceptionally scarce and in excellent demand.

Various Notes.

The fifth annual dahlia show is held this week at the greenhouses of R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., at Cowenton. Nearly forty acres are planted in dahlias alone and about fifteen acres in cannas. It is one of the best displays that this firm has ever shown and the Gardeners' and Florists' Club attended on Wednesday in a body, as that was Florists' day.

James Hamilton has finished glazing his new house, 40x200, which is the most up-to-date house built around Baltimore this season. Mr. Hamilton is one of the largest growers of carnations in the state.

F. C. Bauer will give a talk at the club in the near future on his travels in Europe and what he saw there.

Heacock's Palms and Ferns

Home-grown, strong, clean and well established, describes our Palms—no more words are necessary.

"Our satisfied customers are our best advertisement." One customer who has been dealing with us for years sent in an order for $1500.00 worth of Palms without seeing them. Another, whose order last year amounted to $700.00, gave us an order for $1600.00 this year. Send for our new booklet and give us a trial order.

Lay in your Palms in September, while you can have them shipped by freight. Our facilities for shipping are of the best. We ship by freight to every state in the Union. We have 40% more glass this year. Most of it is devoted to Palms. We are particularly strong in the larger sizes (7, 9 and 12-inch).

We grow all our Kentias above 6-inch size in cedar tubs made especially for us, avoiding breakage of pots in shipment and giving better results to our customers; and, while they cost us several times what pots would cost, we sell them for the same money. They are the neatest, lightest and best tub ever introduced. Painted green, with three electric-welded wire hoops. We order these tubs by the carload.

CHRYSANTEMUMS.
EARLIEST WHITE.

Smith's Advance is the earliest large flowered white chrysanthemum. Like Golden Glow, it will produce good blooms at any season of the year following an active period of growth. Buds selected June 10 were cut July 25, 5 1/2 inches in diameter, with excellent stem, foliage and remarkable substance. The later buds, for August and September, gave larger and finer flowers carried on stems 3 to 3 1/2 feet long. We offer stock plants for October delivery at 40c each, $4.50 per doz., $35.00 per 100.

PANSIES.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of giant show and fancy pansies, the flowers of largest size and most perfect form. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for nearly 40 years and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. It also contains every variety introduced by foreign growers. An immense stock of fine field-grown plants from seed sown thinly, broadcast, so that each plant has plenty of room to grow stocky and strong, with extra good roots. Over 75 varieties mixed, the reds, bronzes and best fancy sorts in large proportion, 1000, $3.00; 500, $1.75; 5000, $14.00; 10,000, $27.00. Cash.
